

BVCL

15432

843.7

B388V

कालोज सेक्शन

Frontispiece.

V A T H

In Arabia Only

BY

WILLIAM BECKFORD, ESQ.

A NEW EDITION.

WITH NOTES, CRITICAL AND EXPLANATORY.

Illustrated.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

1868.

PREFACE
TO THE EDITION OF 1815,
PUBLISHED BY CLARKE, NEW BOND STREET.

LES éditions de Paris et de Lausanne, étant devenu extrêmement rares, j'ai consenti enfin à ce que l'on republiât à Londres ce petit ouvrage tel que je l'ai composé.

La traduction, comme on sçait, a paru avant l'original ; il est fort aisé de croire que n'étoit pas mon intention—des circonstances, peu intéressantes pour le public, en ont été la cause.

J'ai préparé quelques episodes ; ils sont indiqués, à la page 200, comme faisant suite à Vathek, peut-être paroîtront-ils un jour.

W. BECKFORD.

1 Juin, 1815.

TO THE FIRST EDITION IN ENGLISH, 1786.

THE original of the following story, with some others of a similar kind, collected in the East by a man of letters, was communicated to the Editor above three years ago. The pleasure he received from the perusal of it induced him at that time to transcribe, and since to translate it. How far the copy may be a just representation it becomes not him to determine. He presumes, however, to hope that if the difficulty of accommodating our English idioms to the Arabic, preserving the correspondent tones of a diversified narration, and discriminating the nicer touches of character through the shades of foreign manners, be duly considered, a failure in some points will not preclude him from all claim to indulgence, especially if those images, sentiments, and passions which, being independent of local peculiarities, may be expressed in every language, shall be found to retain their native energy in our own.

MEMOIR OF WILLIAM BECKFORD.

WILLIAM BECKFORD, the author of "Vathek," and formerly proprietor of Fonthill, was born at that place September 29, 1759. This very extraordinary man was indebted for his ample fortune to the property which his ancestors had acquired in the West Indies. His great-grandfather, Peter Beckford, Esq., was Lieutenant-Governor and Commander-in-chief of the island of Jamaica, from the reign of Charles II. to that of Anne; and his grandfather (of the same name) was Speaker of the House of Assembly of the same island. His father was Alderman William Beckford, twice Lord Mayor of London, and represented the city in parliament from 1747 to the time of his death (the stormy time of Wilkes, Chatham, and the American discontents), and is celebrated for his extemporaneous reply to King George III.'s answer to an address. Alderman Beckford married, as his second wife, the daughter and co-heir of the Hon. G. Hamilton. He had been educated at Westminster with Lords Mansfield and Kinnoul ; they were styled the "Triumvirate," being the three best verse-makers in the school. The Alderman purchased the estate of Fonthill in Wiltshire, and spent vast sums in building, furnishing, and planting it, and in collecting a splendid library and large galleries of the finest pictures. He was a man of great taste, an excellent judge of music and painting, and of cultivated mind. His City entertainments had not been equalled for splendour and extent of hospitality since the time of Henry VIII. and the costly magnificence he displayed astonished the public. He received on one occasion the Emperor of Germany, the King of Denmark, and the Dukes of York and Cambridge. In 1770, being a second time Lord Mayor, and wishing to unite the conflicting parties in the state, he invited the members of both houses of parliament to dine with him, and the dinner cost him on his private account 10,000*l*. He died June 21st, 1770, when the City voted a statue to his memory, and ordered that the speech he had delivered to the king should be engraved on the pedestal. The Lord Mayor enjoyed the friendship of most of the leading men of the time ; among others, of Mr. Pitt, the first Earl of Chatham, who became the sponsor of his only son.

The death of Alderman Beckford, when his son was only ten years old, was a great misfortune ; for the father, although, like all the family, of very hasty temperament, was yet a man of good sense, and would doubtless have directed carefully his son's education. The boy remained for nearly four years at home under the care of his mother, (he used afterwards to assert he was much "spoiled,") and as she entertained a strong dislike to public schools, by the advice of Lord Lyttelton, a tutor was then appointed for him. Had the alderman lived, it is probable that he (a Westminster boy himself) would have sent his son to a public school and afterwards to college, where, mixing with youths of his own age, he would not only have been led to fulfil the wishes and hopes of his friends, by taking that prominent public position to which his great abilities, no less than his great wealth, entitled him to aspire, but have avoided some failings which doubtless were the result of his home education. To this home education may be traced, what now became visible, an intense pride of family, no doubt fostered by his mother, who was strongly persuaded that her branch of the Hamilton family (the Abercorn) was senior to the ducal. The conjectures and discussions on this relationship caused young Beckford to pore over books of heraldry, of which he grew mischievously fond, and set him about tracing his ancestral honours up to John of Gaunt; one of whose venerable castles, and sometime residence, Eton Bray, his father had purchased. Notwithstanding this, however, he made great progress in his studies, speaking five modern languages (in three of which he wrote with great elegance), and having, in addition to the usual acquaintance with the Greek and Latin classics, a considerable knowledge of Arabic and Persian; he also showed intense love for reading, especially for oriental literature. As a youth his vivacity of imagination and natural flow of eloquence were remarkable, and his comprehension uncommonly quick. He was a great favourite of the Earl of Chatham, and on one of his visits to Burton Pynsent, Lord Chatham's seat in Somersetshire, he recited before him a speech he had translated from Thucydides. When he had concluded, Lord Chatham, throwing aside his crutch, embraced him, and, evidently much delighted, exclaimed, turning to his son William, "May you, my son, some day, make as brilliant a speaker!"

Mr. Beckford went in 1776 with his tutor to the Continent, and, with short intervals, remained there till 1781. Previously, however, he published "Biographical Memoirs of Extraordinary Painters,"* a work of great power, satirizing most severely some painters of the day, and more especially some criticisms lately put forth by them on foreign artists. He was already a good judge and competent critic of works of art. The noble collection at Fonthill, and the artists whom his father continually invited to his table, had early led him to the study and love of pictures. He was an excellent draughtsman, had studied architecture under Sir W. Chambers, and music (in which he was a proficient) under Mozart; a botanist, an intense lover of nature and of all the liberal arts, he was, therefore, well qualified to derive its full benefit from foreign travel. He returned to England in 1781 when he became of age, the richest commoner in England ; the sole possessor of "Fonthill splendens," the mansion his father had built at a cost, it is said, of 240,000*l.* ; of 100,000*l.* a year, and a million in ready money. Great were the rejoicings on the occasion. "Music, dancing, and feasting, were continued for a week ; 300 guests were assembled at the dinner-table, and 1200 of Mr. Beckford's tenants and the people of the neighbourhood dined on the lawn ; the surrounding hills were illuminated by bonfires, and the park by 30,000 lamps." His stay in England was short ; the romantic scenery he had seen on his tour with his tutor had so delighted him that he determined, being now his own master, to make a second excursion, omitting no means of rendering it useful as well as agreeable. He engaged an eminent artist, Mr. Cozens, to accompany him ; Dr. Errhert, a physician ; and an accomplished musician, Mr. Burton. This tour formed the subject of a series of "Letters, Picturesque and Poetical," which he published for private circulation in 4to. in 1783,* and many years after reissued under the title of "Italy, with Sketches of Spain and Portugal" (2 vols., 8vo, 1834).

* Mr. Beckford many years after gives an account of this book in a conversation with Cyrus Redding, Esq. :—

"The housekeeper at Fonthill used, as is customary, to get her fee for exhibiting the pictures to those who came to see them. Once or twice, I overheard her give the most extraordinary names to different artists, and expatiate on excellencies of which the picture before her had no trace. The temptation was irresistible—I was not seventeen . . . it was published, and soon became the text-book, and was on the tongues, of the domestics. Many were the quotations current on the merits of 'Og of Basan,' and 'Water Souchy of Amsterdam,' before a picture of Rubens or Murillo. I used to listen unobserved until I was ready to kill myself with laughing—the squires took it all for gospel."

These "Letters" were chiefly written in 1780, when the writer was only 20 years of age, yet few works have received such encomiums as were bestowed on this. Though the early edition was known to comparatively few persons, its fame had spread extensively.

* This edition was withdrawn almost immediately, in deference, it is said, to some friends, who considered the opinions expressed about field sports and cruelty to animals would injure his prospects as a parliamentary man.

One critic says: "Few descriptions in any language, thus thrown off in a travelling journal, can vie with these in fidelity, or in the beauty of the language in which they are conveyed. The mind of the author must have been exquisitely susceptible of the slightest vibrations, and his high degree of mental culture enabled him to turn them to account in his descriptions." The "Athenæum" gave the book three notices, and sums up thus: "Italy is no more a book of travels than Childe Harold; it is a prose poem. . . . There are scenes in these pages not to be excelled in modern poetry, pictures where words are as rich in colour and in beauty as the pencil of Turner."^{*}

* Moore, Rogers and Byron did not disdain to appropriate many of the striking thoughts in these letters, e.g. :—

"Letters, 1786."—"I left them to walk on the beach, and was so charmed that I remained half an hour. More than two hundred vessels of different sizes were in sight, the last sunbeam purpling their sails and casting a path of innumerable brilliants across the sea. What would I have given to follow this shining track! It might have conducted me straight to those fortunate western climates, those happy isles you are so fond of painting and I of dreaming about."

"How dear to me the hour when daylight dies,
And sunbeams melt along the silent sea;
 For then sweet dreams of other days arise
 And memory breathes her vesper sigh to thee.
 And as I watch the line of light that plays
Along the smooth wave to the burning west,
I long to tread that golden path of rays,
And think 'twould lead to some bright isle of rest."

MOORE'S Irish Melodies.

In a "letter from Venice, 1780:" "Our prow struck foaming against the walls of the Carthusian garden. . . . permission being obtained, I entered this cool retirement, and putting aside with

Mr. Beckford married, May 5, 1783, Lady Margaret Gordon, daughter of the Earl of Aboyne, and sister of the late Marquis of Huntley. He fixed his residence at the Château de la Tour, Vevay. Lady Margaret died May, 1786, in childbed of her second daughter. The shock was severely felt by Mr. Beckford, and was no doubt, in a great measure, the origin of that love of solitude which now became apparent in him. "Abroad, as at home, I always give some time to solitude; in my early youth I disliked large companies. I enjoy nature most alone. At twenty-six, under a bitter domestic calamity, solitude soothed me: I have loved it more ever since."

At the general election of 1784, Mr. Beckford was my hands the boughs of figs and pomegranates, got under an ancient bay-tree on the summit of a little knoll, near which several tall pines lift themselves up to the breezes. I listened to a conversation they held with a wind just flown from Greece, charged, as well as I could understand this airy language, with affectionate remembrances from Mount Ida." Letter 6: "An aromatic plant, which the people justly dignify with the title of marine incense, clothes the margin of the waters. It proved very serviceable in subduing a musky odour which attacked us the moment we landed, and which proceeds from serpents that lurk in the hedges."

"Everywhere from bush and brake,
The musky odours of the serpent came;
 Dreaming of Greece, whither the waves were gliding,
I listened to the venerable pines
Then in close converse, and, if right I guessed, Delivering many a message to the winds
'In secret, for their kindred on Mount Ida.'

ROGERS' Italy, p. 11.

There is in the 3rd letter from Venice another passage Rogers has copied nearly verbatim.

returned to parliament for the city of Wells, and in 1790 for Hindon, but resigned his seat by accepting the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds on the last day of 1794. He made no figure in parliament, and openly avowed his distaste for public life.

In 1786 appeared the celebrated romance of "Vathek," an Arabian Tale ;" it was a translation in English, said to be made by Dr. Henley, who added the notes. The original was first printed at Lausanne, in the year 1787 ; it was in French, and so admirable for style and idiom. that it was considered by many as the work of a Frenchman. Byron greatly praised "Vathek" for correctness of costume, beauty of description, and power of imagination. "As an eastern tale," he said, "even 'Rasselas' must bow before it ; his Happy Valley will not bear a comparison with the Hall of Eblis."

Mr. J. E. Reade, writing of the book fifty years after its publication, says : "Whatever may be the future fate of 'Vathek,' it will maintain its position among the most original efforts of human genius ; the mind that conceived it could conceive anything. In the Hall of Eblis, the figure of Soliman on his throne, showing his heart enveloped in flame ; the impressive sentences he utters ; the awful forms of the pre-adamite kings ; the innumerable multitudes whirled round in eternal motion, each hand pointing to the heart on fire ; leave an impression on the mind more human, more startling and awakening than any drawn from the hell of Milton." Mr. Beckford wrote this work at one sitting. "It took me," he says, "three days and two nights of hard labour. I never took my clothes off the whole time. The severe application made me very ill."

* The original edition in the British Museum is entitled, "An Arabian Tale from an unpublished MS., with notes, &c., London, 1786." It does not bear the title "Vathek."

Mr. Beckford afterwards went to Portugal, and resided at Cintra—that "glorious Eden" of the south.* He left a literary memorial of his visit in his "Recollections of an Excursion to the Monasteries of Alcobaça and Batalha," published in 1835. He returned to England, to his house in Grosvenor Square, early in 1796, and then proceeded to Fonthill. He was now thirty-six years of age, and had seen much of the world. He had lived abroad in splendour since he became of age, and contracted numerous friendships; from his twenty-first year, including three years of married life, he had only visited England at intervals, having spent his time in Italy, Switzerland, Germany, Portugal, and Spain, where he studied the arts and literature of those countries, and mingled with the most distinguished persons in each. He

* There thou, too, Vathek ! England's wealthiest son,
Once formed thy paradise, as not aware
When wanton Wealth her mightiest deeds hath done,
Meek Peace-voluptuous lures was ever wont to shun.

Here didst thou dwell, here schemes of pleasure plan,
Beneath yon mountain's ever-beauteous brow ;
But now as if a thing unblest by man,
Thy fairy dwelling is as lone as thou !
Here giant weeds a passage scarce allow
To house deserted, portals gaping wide ;
Fresh lessons to the thinking bosom, how
Vain are the pleasaunces on earth supplied ;
Swept into wrecks anon by Time's ungentle tide.

Childe Harold, Canto 1.

now took up his abode on his paternal estate in England, and for twenty years employed himself in rearing the magnificent, but unsubstantial, Gothic structure known as Fonthill Abbey, and in embellishing the surrounding grounds. The latter were laid out in the most exquisite style of landscape gardening. They were 1900 acres in extent within the walls, besides 3000 without. The flower-beds contained, in addition to the choicest English flowers, every variety of rhododendron, azalea, and magnolia at that time imported, surrounded by the finest forest trees, English and foreign. These grounds were enclosed by a formidable wall twelve feet in height, seven miles in extent, and surmounted by chevaux de frise.* "As shooting is not permitted within the enclosure, every animal sports undisturbed, and, conscious of security, the hares will feed at the horses' feet from the hands of the rider." The lake was plentifully supplied with aquatic

* This had been built by Mr. Beckford to exclude the hounds and poachers, by no means to "preserve" the game. "Some say I built the wall before I built the house, to cut myself off from mankind. I built the wall because I would not be intruded upon by sportsmen. Your country gentlemen will transport a pauper for taking a few twigs from a hedge, which they will break down without ceremony; they will take no denial when they go hooting in their red jackets to excruciate to death a poor hare. They are worse, five thousand times worse, brutes than the poor animals they worry. I found remonstrances vain, so built the wall to exclude them. I never suffer an animal to be killed but through necessity. In early life I gave up shooting, because I consider we have no right to murder animals for sport. I am fond of animals. The birds in the plantations at Fonthill seemed to know me; they continued their songs as I rode close by them. The very hares grew bold—it was exactly what I wished."—C. Redding.

birds, and the woodcock frequently chose this sequestered valley for her nest.

He resumed the erection of a tower on the summit of the highest hill upon the estate, the foundation of which had been already laid by the alderman, in imitation of Alfred's Tower at Stourhead. In the following year he commenced an ornamental building, which was to have the appearance of a convent partly in ruins; and from this arose, with continual alterations of plan, the far-famed Abbey of Fonthill.

The Abbey stood at some distance from the old mansion, on more elevated ground. It was in the form of a cross, and measured 270 feet from east to west, and 312 from north to south. The central tower was 276 feet high. Our space will not allow any description of this building, we therefore give an extract from the notes of a visitor:—"To give you some idea of the place, you must think of York Minster placed on a commanding elevation in the midst of a woodland paradise of many miles in extent." Describing the octagon room under the tower, he goes on to say: "Although at this spot the interior of Fonthill has not the vastness of York Minster, yet I think the whole building stands on more ground. The dazzling effect of the stained glass in the lofty windows when the sun throws their colours on the crimson carpets, contrasted with the vivid green lawn seen in the distance through the lofty entrance doors, themselves as high as a moderate-sized house; the galleries 100 feet above you; the magnificent mirror at the end of the room, reflecting the prospect of the grounds for miles, present a scene I shall never see equalled. Looking right and left you have a clear view of 330 feet, not bare stone walls, but a magnificent apartment furnished with the most valuable books, cabinets, paintings, mirrors, crimson silk hangings, and a thousand things besides ; you walk the whole distance on superb carpets, and at every step your attention is arrested by some beautiful work of art or natural curiosity. You can have but little notion of the number of fine pictures. I declare that one of the rooms here is richer than the whole of the British Gallery."

People who were not admitted within the gates of Fonthill told all sorts of stories about the wonderful and proud recluse that inhabited there. He was, however, by no means the hermit they described him to be, but was continually busy directing and superintending his workmen ; he rose early, took a great deal of exercise, walking and riding ; read a great deal ; and though he seldom saw visitors, yet, being continually employed, used to make it a boast that he never felt a moment's ennui in his life ; his mental resources were unbounded, and his secluded life realized the line of Cowper—

"How various his employments whom the world calls idle."

Mr. Beckford removed, in 1807, to the Abbey, from the handsome mansion erected by his father, which was then, with the exception of one wing, pulled down, and its materials carried to the new works. The reason assigned for its desertion was the lowness of its situation, and liability to fogs. From that date till 1822 he was chiefly engaged in adding to the ornaments and treasures of his new palace. It is stated that his total expenditure on the place was estimated by himself at 273,000*l*. At length, in the latter year, the public were suddenly surprised by an announcement from Mr. Christie that Fonthill so long locked up from the eyes of strangers was about to be thrown open in preparation for sale. The Abbey was first opened for visitors on the 1st of July; catalogues were issued at one guinea each, and not less than 7,200 were sold. The owner was gratified by his house and collections becoming the topic of general conversation.* The sale did not,

* The "Times" of the day had the following amusing article :—
 "The exhibition, and still more the projected disposal of this property, has filled the county of Wilts with pleasure-hunters from all quarters. He is fortunate who finds a vacant chair within twenty miles of Fonthill; the solitude of a private apartment is a luxury few can hope for; . . . there are bells ringing, chambermaids screaming, horses prancing, and postboys swearing—hubbub is the order of the day. As for houses, there is no choice. Stop where you will, the first cry is, 'no accommodation.' . . . All signs are alike; the Angel is as brutal as the Bear; the Lamb as devouring as the Dragon . . . Falstaff himself could not 'take his ease' within twenty leagues of Fonthill . . . The beds through the county are doing double duty—people who come in during the night must wait to go to bed until others get up in the morning. The extortions of the people and the airs they assume, are compared to McGuffog's bargain in Guy Mannering . . . 'So much for a bed, and so much for sheets upon it; so much for a fire, and so much for lighting it.' Not a nag, not a gig, not a cart but is in requisition . . . the animal creation, however, generally, has cause to wish Fonthill at the devil. The race of fowls in these parts is extinct—not a cock has crowed these ten days within earshot of the Abbey. A few ganders still walk here and there, but their tenure of existence is considered precarious—their main hope is a strike of the turnspit dog, an event expected to happen every day." "They arrive, however, at the Abbey at length, where, if their toil had been even greater, it would be richly repaid."

however, then take place, as the entire domain, and the Abbey, with all its splendid contents (the choicest books, pictures, and curiosities excepted), were sold, by private contract, to John Farquhar, Esq., for 330,000*l.* The collection was dispersed by Mr. Phillips in the following year, and the sale occupied thirty-seven days.

Mr. Beckford's relinquishment of Fonthill was occasioned by the depreciation of his property in the West Indies, and the loss of two large estates there, which were successfully claimed in chancery by other owners, after they had been in the family for more than sixty years. The proceeds of the sale were invested partly in annuities, and partly in property at Bath, where he united two houses in Lansdown Crescent by a flying gallery extended over a road, which became the repository of the splendid treasures of books, paintings, and articles of virtu brought from Fonthill, and the foundation of a fresh museum. He also purchased or leased the whole of the property (a distance of a mile and a half,) up to the summit of Lansdown, which rises almost precipitously above Bath to the height of 800 feet, and here built a tower.* The base from which the tower issued was two stories high; the tower, of square form, 120 feet in height, was copied from the monument of Lysicrates at Athens, and had, in addition to a library and other rooms, a most exquisite little chapel, where the light, passing through dim cupolas of ground glass,* fell on a beautiful statue of St. Anthony with the infant Saviour in his arms, and disclosed walls covered with the choicest cabinet pictures, and books of devotion. To this tower he generally went every day before breakfast, and spent an hour or so in solitude. He was continually occupied in improvements, and in a few years had converted the fields, hitherto only rough and barren, into gardens and plantations; the vegetable kingdom was ransacked to supply its choicest fruits and flowers; the Alps, Brazil, Mexico, and the Himalayas supplied the trees. He crowned the hill, as if by magic, in the course of one year, with trees twelve feet high; he delighted in the open air; and there was not a plant or flower with which he was not acquainted. He was a most persevering reader in English, French, Italian, and Spanish; had generally a large parcel of books from London every week, and was continually adding to his art treasures. The tower and his house in Bath were full of articles of virtù, arranged with the greatest taste; for few understood the theory of colour so well, or equalled him in the art of decoration.

* He built towers that he might enjoy the extended view. "God has given to few men," he said, "the eyesight that I have." From Lansdown Mr. Beckford could see his old palace at Fonthill (seventy miles distant), and discovered the fall of the tower there long before the post had announced it to others.

He led as retired a life at Bath as at Fonthill, not more than half a dozen persons, literary men and artists, being admitted to his acquaintance. Though thus inaccessible to strangers, he was exceedingly kind-hearted, and gave away large sums. He would never allow his name to appear in any subscription list, and, giving privately, would exact secrecy and feel greatly annoyed at any acknowledgment being sent to him.

* "That is the true light for devotion; it is an excitement in itself to solemn thoughts and prayer. It was that light they intended to pervade the old cathedrals."—Conversations with Cyrus Redding.

He was not insensible to the construction which might be put on his devotion to pursuits and habits so different from the rest of mankind.* This is evident from the lines called "A Prayer," which he composed :—

"Like the low murmur of the distant stream
Which through dark alders winds its shaded way,
My suppliant voice is heard : oh, do not deem
That on vain toys I throw my hours away !

In the recesses of the forest vale,
On the wild mountain, on the verdant sod,
When the fresh breezes of the morn prevail,
I wander lonely, communing with God.

When the faint sickness of a wounded heart
Creeps in cold shuddering through my sinking frame,
I turn to thee ! That holy peace impart
Which soothes the invokers of thy awful name.

O all-pervading Spirit—sacred beam !
Parent of life and light ! Eternal Power !
Grant me through obvious clouds one transient gleam
Of thy bright essence in my dying hour !"

It may well be questioned whether any individual ever united greater knowledge and taste in all the sister arts than Mr. Beckford. Born with mental powers

* The compiler of this sketch has always considered that the seclusion Mr. Beckford practised had its origin in the grief he experienced at the loss of his wife. On one occasion, when going over the house in the Crescent, he noticed the table laid for dinner ; there were covers for four persons. Knowing that Mr. Beckford dined alone, he asked the reason of this, and was told it was always the custom, and was intended as a memorial of his wife and two daughters.

superior to the generality of mankind, these powers were early developed by the fostering care of the first professors in the kingdom. Mozart was his music master : he played on the piano and sang with taste ; Sir W. Chambers instructed him in architecture, and an eminent painter of the day taught him the rudiments of drawing ; his early sketches from nature of Italian scenery, for correctness and delicacy would not have been unworthy of a professional artist ; he designed almost every building and piece of furniture that he possessed. His taste in all branches of art was excellent, and his judgment of pictures was that of a dealer rather than a connoisseur. His own collection, which he was perpetually changing, embraced specimens of almost every painter of eminence of all ages and nations. He had a very fine eye for engravings, of which he possessed a superb collection. His house was one vast library, and most of the modern books were full of remarks in his own handwriting : though not a deep scholar, he might be called a singularly accomplished man, and his conversation was replete with anecdotes of the great and distinguished characters that flourished in the last century, with whom he had been in habits of intimacy. In his dress and habits he was plain and simple, and appeared totally devoid of personal ostentation, however extravagant in many of his pursuits. He was, considering his great age, wonderfully active, and took daily exercise on foot and on horseback to within a few days of his death : few men, for the long period of eighty-four years, enjoyed such uninterrupted health, or maintained to so late a period of life such vigorous energy and intellectual power. His death, which took place in May, 1844, was induced by a violent attack of influenza, and overtook him while he was, with undiminished zeal, intent on adding to his curious library by purchases at M. Nodier's sale at Paris. In all things the zeal and enthusiasm of his youth seemed quite unchanged by age.

Mr. Beckford had two daughters—Margaret Maria Elizabeth, and Susanna Euphemia, who, on the 26th of April, 1810, married Alexander, Duke of Hamilton, Brandon, and Chatelherault. Mr. Beckford's mortal remains were deposited in the mausoleum erected for the purpose in the grounds of his tower at Lansdown, which (with the tower itself) were presented by the Duchess of Hamilton to the city of Bath as a cemetery. A dome is erected over it, and it is inscribed with the following inscriptions :—On one side, "William Beckford, Esq., late of Fonthill, Wilts; died 2nd May, 1844, aged 84." with this quotation from Vathek : "Enjoying humbly the most precious gift of heaven to man—Hope;" on the other side the same obituary, with the following lines from "A Prayer," written by the deceased :—

"Eternal Power !

Grant me through obvious clouds one transient gleam
Of thy bright essence in my dying hour." *

His personal property was sworn under 80,000*l.*, and was, with his library, paintings, and articles of virtu, left to the Duchess of Hamilton, who had apartments erected for them at Hamilton Palace.

R. S.

* These quotations, it is said, were not directed by Mr. Beckford.

V A T H E K :

An Arabian Calc.

“ The tale of Vathek, which was originally written in French, and published before the author had closed his twentieth year, has, for more than half a century, continued in possession of all the celebrity which it at once commanded. Vathek is, indeed, without reference to the time of life when the author penned it, a very remarkable performance.”—Quarterly Review, June, 1834.

V A T H E K.

VATHEK, ninth caliph of the race of the Abassides, was the son of Motassem, and the grandson of Haroun al Raschid. From an early accession to the throne, and the talents he possessed to adorn it, his subjects were induced to expect that his reign would be long and happy. His figure was pleasing and majestic; but when he was angry, one of his eyes became so terrible, that no person could bear to behold it; and the wretch upon whom it was fixed instantly fell backward, and sometimes expired. For fear, however, of depopulating his dominions, and making his palace desolate, he but rarely gave way to his anger.

Being much addicted to women and the pleasures of the table, he sought by his affability to procure agreeable companions; and he succeeded the better as his generosity was unbounded and his indulgences unrestrained: for he did not think, with the Caliph Omar Ben Abdalaziz, that it was necessary to make a hell of this world to enjoy paradise in the next.

He surpassed in magnificence all his predecessors. The palace of Alkoremi, which his father, Motassem, had erected on the hill of Pied Horses, and which commanded the whole city of Samarah, was, in his idea, far too scanty : he added, therefore, five wings, or rather other palaces, which he destined for the particular gratification of each of the senses.

In the first of these were tables continually covered with the most exquisite dainties ; which were supplied both by night and by day, according to their constant consumption ; whilst the most delicious wines and the choicest cordials flowed forth from a hundred fountains that were never exhausted. This palace was called The Eternal or unsatiating Banquet.

The second was styled The Temple of Melody, or The Nectar of the Soul. It was inhabited by the most skilful musicians and admired poets of the time ; who not only displayed their talents within, but dispersing in bands without, caused every surrounding scene to reverberate their songs, which were continually varied in the most delightful succession.

The palace named The Delight of the Eyes, or The Support of Memory, was one entire enchantment. Rarities, collected from every corner of the earth, were there found in such profusion as to dazzle and confound, but for the order in which they were arranged. One gallery exhibited the pictures of the celebrated Mani, and statues, that seemed to be alive. Here a well-managed perspective attracted the sight ; there the magic of optics agreeably deceived it : whilst the naturalist, on his part, exhibited in their several classes the various gifts that Heaven had bestowed on our globe. In a word, Vathek omitted nothing in this palace that might gratify the curiosity of those who resorted to it, although he was not able to satisfy his own ; for of all men he was the most curious.

The Palace of Perfumes, which was termed likewise

The Incentive to Pleasure, consisted of various halls, where the different perfumes which the earth produces were kept perpetually burning in censers of gold. Flambeaux and aromatic lamps were here lighted in open day. But the too powerful effects of this agreeable delirium might be alleviated by descending into an immense garden, where an assemblage of every fragrant flower diffused through the air the purest odours.

The fifth palace, denominated The Retreat of Mirth, or The Dangerous, was frequented by troops of young females, beautiful as the Houris, and not less seducing; who never failed to receive with caresses all whom the caliph allowed to approach them, and enjoy a few hours of their company.

Notwithstanding the sensuality in which Vathek indulged, he experienced no abatement in the love of his people, who thought that a sovereign giving himself up to pleasure was as able to govern as one who declared himself an enemy to it. But the unquiet and impetuous disposition of the caliph would not allow him to rest there. He had studied so much for his amusement in the lifetime of his father, as to acquire a great deal of knowledge, though not a sufficiency to satisfy himself; for he wished to know every thing; even sciences that did not exist. He was fond of engaging in disputes with the learned, but did not allow them to push their opposition with warmth. He stopped with presents the mouths of those whose mouths could be stopped; whilst others, whom his liberality was unable to subdue, he sent to prison to cool their blood, a remedy that often succeeded.

Vathek discovered also a predilection for theological controversy ; but it was not with the orthodox that he usually held. By this means he induced the zealots to oppose him, and then persecuted them in return ; for he resolved, at any rate, to have reason on his side.

The great prophet, Mahomet, whose vicars the caliphs are, beheld with indignation from his abode, in the seventh heaven, the irreligious conduct of such a vicegerent. "Let us leave him to himself," said he to the Genii, who are always ready to receive his commands : "let us see to what lengths his folly and impiety will carry him : if he run into excess, we shall know how to chastise him. Assist him, therefore, to complete the tower, which, in imitation of Nimrod, he hath begun ; not like that great warrior, to escape being drowned, but from the insolent curiosity of penetrating the secrets of heaven :—he will not divine the fate that awaits him."

The Genii obeyed ; and when the workmen had raised their structure a cubit in the daytime, two cubits more were added in the night. The expedition, with which the fabric arose, was not a little flattering to the vanity of Vathek : he fancied, that even insensible matter showed a forwardness to subserve his designs ; not considering that the successes of the foolish and wicked form the first rod of their chastisement.

His pride arrived at his height, when having ascended, for the first time, the fifteen hundred stairs of his tower, he cast his eyes below, and beheld men not larger than pismires ; mountains, than shells ; and cities, than bee-hives. The idea, which such an elevation inspired of his own grandeur, completely bewildered him : he was almost ready to adore himself ; till, lifting his eyes upward, he saw the stars as high above him as they appeared when he stood on the surface of the earth. He consoled himself, however, for this intruding and unwelcome perception of his littleness, with the thought of being great in the eyes of others ; and flattered himself that the light of his mind would extend beyond the reach of his sight, and extort from the stars the decrees of his destiny.

With this view, the inquisitive prince passed most of his nights on the summit of his tower, till becoming an adept in the mysteries of astrology, he imagined that the planets had disclosed to him the most marvellous adventures, which were to be accomplished by an extraordinary personage, from a country altogether unknown. Prompted by motives of curiosity, he had always been courteous to strangers ; but, from this instant, he redoubled his attention, and ordered it to be announced, by sound of trumpet, through all the streets of Samarah, that no one of his subjects, on peril of his displeasure, should either lodge or detain a traveller, but forthwith bring him to the palace.

Not long after this proclamation, arrived in his metropolis a man so abominably hideous, that the very guards, who arrested him, were forced to shut their eyes as they led him along : the caliph himself appeared startled at so horrible a visage ; but joy succeeded to this emotion of terror, when the stranger displayed to his view such rarities as he had never before seen, and of which he had no conception.

In reality, nothing was ever so extraordinary as the merchandise this stranger produced ; most of his curiosities, which were not less admirable for their workmanship than splendour, had, besides, their several virtues described on a parchment fastened to each.

There were slippers which, by spontaneous springs, enabled the feet to walk; knives that cut without motion of the hand; sabres that dealt the blow at the person they were wished to strike; and the whole enriched with gems that were hitherto unknown.

The sabres especially, the blades of which emitted a dazzling radiance, fixed more than all the rest the caliph's attention; who promised himself to decipher at his leisure the uncouth characters engraven on their sides. Without, therefore, demanding their price, he ordered all the coined gold to be brought from his treasury, and commanded the merchant to take what he pleased. The stranger obeyed, took little, and remained silent.

Vathek, imagining that the merchant's taciturnity was occasioned by the awe which his presence inspired, encouraged him to advance, and asked him, with an air of condescension, who he was? Whence he came? and where he obtained such beautiful commodities? The man, or rather monster, instead of making a reply, thrice rubbed his forehead, which as well as his body, was blacker than ebony; four times clapped his paunch, the projection of which was enormous; opened wide his huge eyes, which glowed like fire-brands; began to laugh with a hideous noise, and discovered his long amber-coloured teeth, bestreaked with green.

The caliph, though a little startled, renewed his inquiries, but without being able to procure a reply. At which, beginning to be ruffled, he exclaimed,—“Knowest thou, wretch, who I am, and at whom thou art aiming thy gibes?”—Then addressing his guards,—“Have ye heard him speak?—is he dumb?”—“He hath spoken," they replied, "but to no purpose."—"Let him speak then again," said Vathek, "and tell me who he is, from whence he came, and where he procured these singular curiosities; or I swear, by the ass of Balaam, that I will make him rue his pertinacity."

This menace was accompanied by one of the caliph's angry and perilous glances, which the stranger sustained without the slightest emotion; although his eyes were fixed on the terrible eye of the prince.

No words can describe the amazement of the courtiers when they beheld this rude merchant withstand the encounter unshocked. They all fell prostrate with their faces on the ground, to avoid the risk of their lives; and would have continued in the same abject posture, had not the caliph exclaimed, in a furious tone,—“Up cowards! seize the miscreant! see that he be committed to prison, and guarded by the best of my soldiers! Let him, however, retain the money I gave him; it is not my intent to take from him his property; I only want him to speak.”

No sooner had he uttered these words than the stranger was surrounded, pinioned, and bound with strong fetters, and hurried away to the prison of the great tower, which was encompassed by seven empalements of iron bars, and armed with spikes in every direction, longer and sharper than spits. The caliph nevertheless, remained in the most violent agitation. He sat down indeed to eat; but of the three hundred dishes that were daily placed before him, he could taste of no more than thirty-two.

A diet, to which he had been so little accustomed, was sufficient of itself to prevent him from sleeping;

VATHEK.

What then must be its effect when joined to the anxiety that preyed upon his spirits? At the first glimpse of dawn he hastened to the prison, again to importune this intractable stranger; but the rage of Vathek exceeded all bounds on finding the prison empty; the grates burst asunder, and his guards lying lifeless around him. In the paroxysm of his passion he fell furiously on the poor carcasses, and kicked them till evening without intermission. His courtiers and vizirs exerted their efforts to soothe his extravagance; but finding every expedient ineffectual, they all united in one vociferation,—“The caliph is gone mad! the caliph is out of his senses!”

This outcry, which soon resounded through the streets of Samarah, at length reached the ears of Carathis, his mother, who flew in the utmost consternation to try her ascendancy on the mind of her son. Her tears and caresses called off his attention; and he was prevailed upon by her entreaties to be brought back to the palace.

Carathis, apprehensive of leaving Vathek to himself, had him put to bed; and, seating herself by him, endeavoured by her conversation to appease and compose him. Nor could any one have attempted it with better success; for the caliph not only loved her as a mother, but respected her as a person of superior genius. It was she who had induced him, being a Greek herself, to adopt the sciences and systems of her country which all good Mussulmans hold in such thorough abhorrence.

Judiciary astrology was one of those sciences in which Carathis was a perfect adept. She began, therefore, with reminding her son of the promise which the stars had made him ; and intimated an intention of consulting them again. " Alas !" said the caliph, as soon as he could speak, " what a fool I have been ! not for having bestowed forty thousand kicks on my guards, who so tamely submitted to death ; but for never considering that this extraordinary man was the same that the planets had foretold ; whom, instead of ill-treating, I should have conciliated by all the arts of persuasion."

" The past," said Carathis, " cannot be recalled ; but it behoves us to think of the future : perhaps, you may again see the object you so much regret : it is possible the inscriptions on the sabres will afford information. Eat, therefore, and take thy repose, my dear son. We will consider, to-morrow, in what manner to act."

Vathek yielded to her counsel as well as he could, and arose in the morning with a mind more at ease. The sabres he commanded to be instantly brought ; and, poring upon them, through a coloured glass, that their glittering might not dazzle, he set himself in earnest to decipher the inscriptions ; but his reiterated attempts were all of them nugatory : in vain did he beat his head, and bite his nails ; not a letter of the whole was he able to ascertain. So unlucky a disappointment would have undone him again, had not Carathis, by good fortune, entered the apartment.

" Have patience, my son !" said she : " you certainly are possessed of every important science ; but the knowledge of languages is a trifle at best ; and the accomplishment of none but a pedant. Issue a proclamation, that you will confer such rewards as become your greatness, upon any one that shall interpret what you do not understand, and what is beneath you to learn ; you will soon find your curiosity gratified."

"That may be," said the caliph ; "but, in the meantime, I shall be horribly disgusted by a crowd of smatterers, who will come to the trial as much for the pleasure of retailing their jargon, as from the hope of gaining the reward. To avoid this evil it will be proper to add, that I will put every candidate to death who shall fail to give satisfaction ; for, thank Heaven ! I have skill enough to distinguish, whether one translates or invents."

"Of that I have no doubt," replied Carathis ; "but to put the ignorant to death is somewhat severe, and may be productive of dangerous effects. Content yourself with commanding their beards to be burnt : beards in a state are not quite so essential as men."

The caliph submitted to the reasons of his mother ; and, sending for Morakanabad, his prime vizir, said—
"Let the common criers proclaim, not only in Samarah, but throughout every city in my empire, that whosoever will repair hither and decipher certain characters which appear to be inexplicable, shall experience that liberality for which I am renowned ; but that all who fail upon trial shall have their beards burnt off to the last hair. Let them add, also, that I will bestow fifty beautiful slaves, and as many jars of apricots from the Isle of Kirmith, upon any man that shall bring me intelligence of the stranger."

The subjects of the caliph, like their sovereign, being great admirers of women and apricots from Kirmith, felt their mouths water at these promises, but were totally unable to gratify their hankering ; for no one knew what had become of the stranger.

As to the caliph's other requisition, the result was different. The learned, the half-learned, and those who were neither, but fancied themselves equal to both, came boldly to hazard their beards, and all shamefully lost them. The exaction of these forfeitures, which found sufficient employment for the eunuchs, gave them such a smell of singed hair, as greatly to disgust the ladies of the seraglio, and to make it necessary that this new occupation of their guardians should be transferred to other hands.

At length, however, an old man presented himself, whose beard was a cubit and a half longer than any that had appeared before him. The officers of the palace whispered to each other, as they ushered him in,—“What a pity, oh ! what a great pity that such a beard should be burnt !” even the caliph, when he saw it, concurred with them in opinion ; but his concern was entirely needless. This venerable personage read the characters with facility, and explained them verbatim as follows :—“We were made where every thing is well made : we are the least of the wonders of a place where all is wonderful, and deserving the sight of the first potentate on earth.”

“You translate admirably !” cried Vathek ; “I know to what these marvellous characters allude. Let him receive as many robes of honour and thousands of sequins of gold as he hath spoken words. I am in some measure relieved from the perplexity that embarrassed me !” Vathek invited the old man to dine, and even to remain some days in the palace.

Unluckily for him, he accepted the offer ; for the caliph having ordered him next morning to be called, said,—“Read again to me what you have read already ; I cannot hear too often the promise that is madame—the completion of which I languish to obtain.” The old man forthwith put on his green spectacles, but they instantly dropped from his nose, on perceiving that the characters he had read the day preceding had given place to others of different import. “What ails you ?” asked the caliph ; “and why these symptoms of wonder ?”—“Sovereign of the world !” replied the old man, “these sabres hold another language to-day, from that they yesterday held.”—“How say you ?” returned Vathek :—“but it matters not ; tell me, if you can, what they mean.”—“It is this, my lord,” rejoined the old man :—“‘Woe to the rash mortal who seeks to know that of which he should remain ignorant ; and to undertake that which surpasseth his power’”—“And woe to thee !” cried the caliph, in a burst of indignation : “to day thou art void of understanding : begone from my presence, they shall burn but the half of thy beard, because thou wert yesterday fortunate in guessing :—my gifts I never resume.” The old man, wise enough to perceive he had luckily escaped, considering the folly of disclosing so disgusting a truth, immediately withdrew and appeared not again.

But it was not long before Vathek discovered abundant reason to regret his precipitation ; for, though he could not decipher the characters himself, yet, by constantly poring upon them, he plainly perceived that they every day changed ; and, unfortunately, no other candidate offered to explain them. This perplexing occupation inflamed his blood, dazzled his sight, and brought on such a giddiness and debility that he could hardly support himself. He failed not, however, though in so reduced a condition, to be often carried to his tower, as he flattered himself that he might there read in the stars, which he went to consult, something more congruous to his wishes : but in this his hopes were deluded ; for his eyes, dimmed by the vapours of his head, began to subserve his curiosity so ill, that he beheld nothing but a thick, dun cloud, which he took for the most direful of omens.

Agitated with so much anxiety, Vathek entirely lost all firmness ; a fever seized him, and his appetite failed. Instead of being one of the greatest eaters, he became as distinguished for drinking. So insatiable was the thirst which tormented him, that his mouth, like a funnel, was always open to receive the various liquors that might be poured into it, and especially cold water, which calmed him more than any other.

This unhappy prince, being thus incapacitated for the enjoyment of any pleasure, commanded the palaces of the five senses to be shut up ; forbore to appear in public, either to display his magnificence or administer justice, and retired to the inmost apartment of his harem. As he had ever been an excellent husband, his wives, overwhelmed with grief at his deplorable situation, incessantly supplied him with prayers for his health, and water for his thirst.

In the mean time, the Princess Carathis, whose affliction no words can describe, instead of confining herself to sobbing and tears, was closeted daily with the vizir Morakanabad, to find out some cure, or mitigation, of the caliph's disease. Under the persuasion that it was caused by enchantment, they turned over together, leaf by leaf, all the books of magic that might point out a remedy ; and caused the horrible stranger, whom they accused as the enchanter, to be everywhere sought for, with the strictest diligence.

At the distance of a few miles from Samarah stood a high mountain, whose sides were swarded with wild thyme and basil, and its summit overspread with so delightful a plain, that it might have been taken for the paradise destined for the faithful. Upon it grew a hundred thickets of eglantine and other fragrant shrubs ; a hundred arbours of roses, entwined with jessamine and honeysuckle ; as many clumps of orange-trees, cedar, and citron ; whose branches, interwoven with the palm, the pomegranate, and the vine, presented every luxury that could regale the eye or the taste. The ground was strewn with violets, harebells, and pansies ; in the midst of which numerous tufts of jonquils, hyacinths, and carnations perfumed the air. Four fountains, not less clear than deep, and so abundant as to slake the thirst of ten armies, seemed purposely placed here, to make the scene more resemble the garden of Eden watered by four sacred rivers. Here, the nightingale sang the birth of the rose, her well-beloved, and, at the same time, lamented its short-lived beauty : whilst the dove deplored the loss of more substantial pleasures ; and the wakeful lark hailed the rising light, that reanimates the whole creation. Here, more than anywhere, the mingled melodies of birds expressed the various passions which inspired them ; and the exquisite fruits which they pecked at pleasure seemed to have given them a double energy.

To this mountain Vathek was sometimes brought, for the sake of breathing a purer air ; and, especially, to drink at will of the four fountains. His attendants were his mother, his wives, and some eunuchs, who assiduously employed themselves in filling capacious bowls of rock crystal, and emulously presenting them to him. But it frequently happened, that his avidity exceeded their zeal, insomuch, that he would prostrate himself upon the ground to lap the water, of which he could never have enough.

One day, when this unhappy prince had been long lying in so debasing a posture, a voice, hoarse but strong, thus addressed him :—" Why dost thou assimilate thyself to a dog, O caliph, proud as thou art of thy dignity and power ?" At this apostrophe, he raised up his head, and beheld the stranger that had caused him so much affliction. Inflamed with anger at the sight, he exclaimed,—“ Accursed Giaour ! what comest thou hither to do ?—is it not enough to have transformed a prince, remarkable for his agility, into a water budget ? Perceivest thou not, that I may perish by drinking to excess, as well as by thirst ?”

“ Drink, then, this draught,” said the stranger, as he presented to him a phial of a red and yellow mixture : “ and, to satiate the thirst of thy soul, as well as of thy body, know, that I am an Indian ; but from a region of India which is wholly unknown.”

The caliph, delighted to see his desires accomplished in part, and flattering himself with the hope of obtaining their entire fulfilment, without a moment's hesitation swallowed the potion, and instantaneously found his health restored, his thirst appeased, and his limbs as agile as ever. In the transports of his joy, Vathek leaped upon the neck of the frightful Indian, and kissed his horrid mouth and hollow cheeks, as though they had been the coral lips and the lilies and roses of his most beautiful wives.

Nor would these transports have ceased had not the eloquence of Carathis repressed them. Having prevailed upon him to return to Samarah, she caused a herald to proclaim as loudly as possible,—“The wonderful stranger hath appeared again; he hath healed the caliph; he hath spoken! he hath spoken!”

Forthwith, all the inhabitants of this vast city quitted their habitations and ran together in crowds to see the procession of Vathek and the Indian, whom they now blessed as much as they had before execrated, incessantly shouting,—“He hath healed our sovereign; he hath spoken! he hath spoken!” Nor were these words forgotten in the public festivals, which were celebrated the same evening, to testify the general joy; for the poets applied them as a chorus to all the songs they composed on this interesting subject.

The caliph, in the mean while, caused the palaces of the senses to be again set open; and, as he found himself naturally prompted to visit that of taste in preference to the rest, immediately ordered a splendid entertainment, to which his great officers and favourite courtiers were all invited. The Indian, who was placed near the prince, seemed to think that, as a proper acknowledgment of so distinguished a privilege, he could neither eat, drink, nor talk too much. The various dainties were no sooner served up than they vanished, to the great mortification of Vathek, who piqued himself on being the greatest eater alive ; and at this time in particular was blessed with an excellent appetite.

The rest of the company looked round at each other in amazement ; but the Indian, without appearing to observe it, quaffed large bumpers to the health of each of them ; sung in a style altogether extravagant ; related stories at which he laughed immoderately, and poured forth extemporaneous verses, which would not have been thought bad, but for the strange grimaces with which they were uttered. In a word, his loquacity was equal to that of a hundred astrologers ; he ate as much as a hundred porters, and caroused in proportion.

The caliph, notwithstanding the table had been thirty-two times covered, found himself incommoded by the voraciousness of his guest, who was now considerably declined in the prince's esteem. Vathek, however, being unwilling to betray the chagrin he could hardly disguise, said in a whisper to Bababalouk, the chief of his eunuchs,—“ You see how enormous his performances are in every way ; what would be the consequence should he get at my wives !—Go ! redouble your vigilance, and be sure look well to my Circassians, who would be more to his taste than all of the rest.”

The bird of the morning had thrice renewed his song, when the hour of the divan was announced.

Vathek, in gratitude to his subjects, having promised to attend, immediately arose from table, and repaired thither, leaning upon his vizir, who could scarcely support him ; so disordered was the poor prince by the wine he had drunk, and still more by the extravagant vagaries of his boisterous guest.

The vizirs, the officers of the crown and of the law, arranged themselves in a semicircle about their sovereign, and preserved a respectful silence ; whilst the Indian, who looked as cool as if he had been fasting, sat down without ceremony on one of the steps of the throne, laughing in his sleeve at the indignation with which his temerity had filled the spectators.

The caliph, however, whose ideas were confused and whose head was embarrassed, went on administering justice at haphazard ; till at length the prime vizir, perceiving his situation, hit upon a sudden expedient to interrupt the audience and rescue the honour of his master, to whom he said in a whisper,—“ My lord, the Princess Carathis, who hath passed the night in consulting the planets, informs you, that they portend you evil, and the danger is urgent. Beware, lest this stranger, whom you have so lavishly recompensed for his magical gewgaws, should make some attempt on your life : his liquor, which at first had the appearance of effecting your cure, may be no more than a poison, the operation of which will be sudden. Slight not this surmise ; ask him, at least, of what it was compounded, whence he procured it, and mention the sabres, which you seem to have forgotten.”

Vathek, to whom the insolent airs of the stranger became every moment less supportable, intimated to his vizir, by a wink of acquiescence, that he would adopt his advice ; and, at once turning towards the Indian, said,—“ Get up, and declare in full divan of what drugs was compounded the liquor you enjoined me to take, for it is suspected to be poison : give also that explanation I have so earnestly desired, concerning the sabres you sold me, and thus show your gratitude for the favours heaped on you."

Having pronounced these words, in as moderate a tone as he well could, he waited in silent expectation for an answer. But the Indian, still keeping his seat, began to renew his loud shouts of laughter, and exhibit the same horrid grimaces he had shown them before, without vouchsafing a word in reply. Vathek, no longer able to brook such insolence, immediately kicked him from the steps; instantly descending, repeated his blow; and persisted, with such assiduity, as incited all who were present to follow his example. Every foot was up and aimed at the Indian, and no sooner had any one given him a kick, than he felt himself constrained to reiterate the stroke.

The stranger afforded them no small entertainment; for, being both short and plump, he collected himself into a ball, and rolled round on all sides, at the blows of his assailants, who pressed after him, wherever he turned, with an eagerness beyond conception, whilst their numbers were every moment increasing. The ball, indeed, in passing from one apartment to another, drew every person after it that came in its way; inso-much, that the whole palace was thrown into confusion, and resounded with a tremendous clamour. The women of the harem, amazed at the uproar, flew to their blinds to discover the cause; but no sooner did they catch a glimpse of the ball, than, feeling themselves unable to refrain, they broke from the clutches of their eunuchs, who, to stop their flight, pinched them till they bled; but in vain: whilst themselves, though trembling with terror at the escape of their charge, were as incapable of resisting the attraction.

After having traversed the halls, galleries, chambers, kitchens, gardens, and stables of the palace, the Indian at last took his course through the courts; whilst the caliph, pursuing him closer than the rest, bestowed as many kicks as he possibly could; yet not without receiving now and then a few which his competitors, in their eagerness, designed for the ball.

Carathis, Morakanabad, and two or three old vizirs, whose wisdom had hitherto withstood the attraction, wishing to prevent Vathek from exposing himself in the presence of his subjects, fell down in his way to impede the pursuit: but he, regardless of their obstruction, leaped over their heads, and went on as before. They then ordered the Muezens to call the people to prayers; both for the sake of getting them out of the way, and of endeavouring, by their petitions, to avert the calamity: but neither of these expedients was a whit more successful. The sight of this fatal ball was alone sufficient to draw after it every beholder. The Muezens themselves, though they saw it but at a distance, hastened down from their minarets, and mixed with the crowd; which continued to increase in so surprising a manner that scarce an inhabitant was left in Samarah except the aged; the sick, confined to their beds; and infants at the breast, whose nurses could run more nimbly without them. Even Carathis, Morakanabad, and the rest, were all become of the party. The shrill screams of the females, who had broken from their apartments, and were unable to extricate themselves from the pressure of the crowd, together with those of the eunuchs jostling after them, and terrified lest their charge should escape from their sight; the execrations of husbands, urging forward and menacing each other; *kicks given and received; stumblings and overthrows at every step; in a word, the confusion that universally prevailed, rendered Samarah like a city taken by storm, and devoted to absolute plunder. At last, the cursed Indian, who still preserved his rotundity of figure, after passing through all the streets and public places, and leaving them empty, rolled onwards to the plain of Catoul, and entered the valley at the foot of the mountain of the four fountains.

As a continual fall of water had excavated an immense gulf in the valley, whose opposite side was closed in by a steep acclivity, the caliph and his attendants were apprehensive lest the ball should bound into the chasm, and, to prevent it, redoubled their efforts, but in vain. The Indian persevered in his onward direction; and, as had been apprehended, glancing from the precipice with the rapidity of lightning, was lost in the gulf below.

Vathek would have followed the perfidious Giaour, had not an invisible agency arrested his progress. The multitude that pressed after him were at once checked in the same manner, and a calm instantaneously ensued. They all gazed at each other with an air of astonishment; and notwithstanding that the loss of veils and turbans, together with torn habits, and dust blended with sweat, presented a most laughable spectacle, yet there was not one smile to be seen. On the contrary, all with looks of confusion and sadness returned in silence to Samarah, and retired to their inmost apartments, without ever reflecting, that they had been impelled by an invisible power into the extravagance for which they reproached themselves; for it is but just that men, who so often arrogate to their own merit the good of which they are but instruments, should also attribute to themselves absurdities which they could not prevent.

The caliph was the only person who refused to leave the valley. He commanded his tents to be pitched there, and stationed himself on the very edge of the precipice, in spite of the representations of Carathis and Morakanabad, who pointed out the hazard of its brink giving way, and the vicinity to the magician, that had so cruelly tormented him. ·Vathek derided all their remonstrances ; and having ordered a thousand flambeaux to be lighted, and directed his attendants to proceed in lighting more, lay down on the slippery margin, and attempted, by the help of this artificial splendour, to look through that gloom, which all the fires of the empyrean had been insufficient to pervade. One while he fancied to himself voices arising from the depth of the gulf ; at another, he seemed to distinguish the accents of the Indian ; but all was no more than the hollow murmur of waters, and the din of the cataracts that rushed from steep to steep down the sides of the mountain.

Having passed the night in this cruel perturbation, the caliph, at daybreak, retired to his tent ; where, without taking the least sustenance, he continued to doze till the dusk of evening began again to come on. He then resumed his vigils as before, and persevered in observing them for many nights together. At length, fatigued with so fruitless an employment, he sought relief from change. To this end, he sometimes paced with hasty strides across the plain ; and as he wildly gazed at the stars, reproached them with having deceived him ; but, lo ! on a sudden, the clear blue sky appeared streaked over with streams of blood, which reached from the valley even to the city of Samarah. As this awful phenomenon seemed to touch his tower, Vathek at first thought of repairing thither to view it more distinctly ; but, feeling himself unable to advance, and being overcome with apprehension, he muffled up his face in the folds of his robe.

Terrifying as these prodigies were, this impression upon him was no more than momentary, and served only to stimulate his love of the marvellous. Instead, therefore, of returning to his palace, he persisted in the resolution of abiding where the Indian had vanished from his view. One night, however, while he was walking as usual on the plain, the moon and stars were eclipsed at once, and a total darkness ensued. The earth trembled beneath him, and a voice came forth, the voice of the Giaour, who, in accents more sonorous than thunder, thus addressed him :—"Wouldest thou devote thyself to me ? adore the terrestrial influences, and abjure Mahomet ? On these conditions I will bring thee to the Palace of Subterranean Fire. There shalt thou behold, in immense depositories, the treasures which the stars have promised thee ; and which will be conferred by those intelligences, whom thou shalt thus render propitious. It was from thence I brought my sabres, and it is there that Soliman Ben Daoud reposes, surrounded by the talismans that control the world."

The astonished caliph trembled as he answered, yet he answered in a style that showed him to be no novice in preternatural adventures :—"Where art thou ? be present to my eyes ; dissipate the gloom that perplexes me, and of which I deem thee the cause. After the many flambeaux I have burnt to discover thee, thou mayest, at least, grant a glimpse of thy horrible visage."—"Abjure then Mahomet!" replied the Indian, "and promise me full proofs of thy sincerity: otherwise, thou shalt never behold me again."

The unhappy caliph, instigated by insatiable curiosity, lavished his promises in the utmost profusion. The sky immediately brightened; and, by the light of the planets, which seemed almost to blaze, Vathek beheld the earth open; and, at the extremity of a vast black chasm, a portal of ebony, before which stood the Indian, holding in his hand a golden key, which he sounded against the lock.

"How," cried Vathek, "can I descend to thee?—Come, take me, and instantly open the portal."—"Not so fast," replied the Indian, "impatient caliph!—Know that I am parched with thirst, and cannot open this door, till my thirst be thoroughly appeased; I require the blood of fifty children. Take them from among the most beautiful sons of thy vizirs and great men; or, neither can my thirst nor thy curiosity be satisfied. Return to Samarah; procure for me this necessary libation; come back hither; throw it thyself into this chasm, and then shalt thou see!"

Having thus spoken, the Indian turned his back on the caliph, who, incited by the suggestions of demons, resolved on the direful sacrifice. He now pretended to have regained his tranquillity, and set out for Samarah amidst the acclamations of a people who still loved him, and forbore not to rejoice, when they believed him to have recovered his reason. So successfully did he conceal the emotion of his heart that even Carathis and Morakanabad were equally deceived with the rest. Nothing was heard of but festivals and rejoicings. The fatal ball, which no tongue had hitherto ventured to mention, was brought on the tapis. A general laugh went round, though many, still smarting under the hands of the surgeon, from the hurts received in that memorable adventure, had no great reason for mirth.

The prevalence of this gay humour was not a little grateful to Vathek, who perceived how much it conduced to his project. He put on the appearance of affability to every one ; but especially to his vizirs, and the grandees of his court, whom he failed not to regale with a sumptuous banquet ; during which, he insensibly directed the conversation to the children of his guests. Having asked, with a good-natured air, which of them were blessed with the handsomest boys, every father at once asserted the pretensions of his own ; and the contest imperceptibly grew so warm, that nothing could have withholden them from coming to blows but their profound reverence for the person of the caliph. Under the pretence, therefore, of reconciling the disputants, Vathek took upon him to decide ; and, with this view, commanded the boys to be brought.

It was not long before a troop of these poor children made their appearance, all equipped by their fond mothers with such ornaments as might give the greatest relief to their beauty, or most advantageously display the graces of their age. But, whilst this brilliant assemblage attracted the eyes and hearts of every one besides, the caliph scrutinized each, in his turn, with a malignant avidity that passed for attention, and selected from their number the fifty whom he judged the Giaour would prefer.

With an equal show of kindness as before, he proposed to celebrate a festival on the plain, for the entertainment of his young favourites, who, he said, ought to rejoice still more than all, at the restoration of his health, on account of the favours he intended for them.

The caliph's proposal was received with the greatest delight, and soon published through Samarah. Litters, camels, and horses were prepared. Women and children, old men and young, every one placed himself as he chose. The cavalcade set forward, attended by all the confectioners in the city and its precincts; the populace, following on foot, composed an amazing crowd, and occasioned no little noise. All was joy; nor did any one call to mind, what most of them had suffered, when they lately travelled the road they were now passing so gaily.

The evening was serene, the air refreshing, the sky clear, and the flowers exhaled their fragrance. The beams of the declining sun, whose mild splendour reposed on the summit of the mountain, shed a glow of ruddy light over its green declivity, and the white flocks sporting upon it. No sounds were heard, save the murmurs of the four fountains; and the reeds and voices of shepherds, calling to each other from different eminences.

The lovely innocents, destined for the sacrifice, added not a little to the hilarity of the scene. They approached the plain full of sportiveness, some coursing butterflies, others culling flowers, or picking up the shining little pebbles that attracted their notice. At intervals they nimbly started from each other for the sake of being caught again, and mutually imparting a thousand caresses.

The dreadful chasm, at whose bottom the portal of ebony was placed, began to appear at a distance. It looked like a black streak that divided the plain. Morakanabad and his companions took it for some work which the caliph had ordered. Unhappy men ! little did they surmise for what it was destined. Vathek, unwilling that they should examine it too nearly, stopped the procession, and ordered a spacious circle to be formed on this side, at some distance from the accursed chasm. The body-guard of eunuchs was detached, to measure out the lists intended for the games, and prepare the rings for the arrows of the young archers. The fifty competitors were soon stripped, and presented to the admiration of the spectators the suppleness and grace of their delicate limbs. Their eyes sparkled with a joy, which those of their fond parents reflected. Every one offered wishes for the little candidate nearest his heart, and doubted not of his being victorious. A breathless suspense awaited the contests of these amiable and innocent victims.

The caliph, availing himself of the first moment to retire from the crowd, advanced towards the chasm ; and there heard, yet not without shuddering, the voice of the Indian ; who, gnashing his teeth, eagerly demanded,—“Where are they?—Where are they?—perceivest thou not how my mouth waters?”—“Relentless Giaour !” answered Vathek, with emotion ; “can nothing content thee but the massacre of these lovely victims? Ah! wert thou to behold their beauty, it must certainly move thy compassion.”—“Perdition on thy compassion, babbler!” cried the Indian: “give them me; instantly give them, or, my portal shall be closed against thee for ever!”—“Not so loudly,” replied the caliph, blushing.—“I understand thee,” returned the Giaour with the grin of an ogre; “thou wantest no presence of mind: I will, for a moment, forbear,”

During this exquisite dialogue, the games went forward with all alacrity, and at length concluded, just as the twilight began to overcast the mountains. Vathek, who was still standing on the edge of the chasm, called out, with all his might,—“Let my fifty little favourites approach me, separately; and let them come in the order of their success. To the first, I will give my diamond bracelet; to the second, my collar of emeralds; to the third, my aigret of rubies; to the fourth, my girdle of topazes; and to the rest, each a part of my dress, even down to my slippers.”

This declaration was received with reiterated acclamations; and all extolled the liberality of a prince, who would thus strip himself, for the amusement of his subjects, and the encouragement of the rising generation. The caliph, in the mean while, undressed himself by degrees; and, raising his arm as high as he was able, made each of the prizes glitter in the air; out, whilst he delivered it, with one hand, to the child, who sprung forward to receive it, he, with the other, pushed the poor innocent into the gulf; where the Giaour, with a sullen muttering, incessantly repeated, “More! more!”

This dreadful device was executed with so much dexterity, that the boy who was approaching him remained unconscious of the fate of his forerunner ; and, as to the spectators, the shades of evening, together with their distance, precluded them from perceiving any object distinctly. Vathek, having in this manner thrown in the last of the fifty, and, expecting that the Giaour, on receiving him, would have presented the key, already fancied himself as great as Soliman, and, consequently, above being amenable for what he had done ; when, to his utter amazement, the chasm closed, and the ground became as entire as the rest of the plain.

No language could express his rage and despair. He execrated the perfidy of the Indian ; loaded him with the most infamous invectives ; and stamped with his foot, as resolving to be heard. He persisted in this till his strength failed him, and then fell on the earth like one void of sense. His vizirs and grandees, who were nearer than the rest, supposed him, at first, to be sitting on the grass, at play with their amiable children ; but, at length, prompted by doubt, they advanced towards the spot, and found the caliph alone, who wildly demanded what they wanted ? “ Our children ! our children ! ” cried they. “ It is, assuredly, pleasant,” said he, “ to make me accountable for accidents. Your children, while at play, fell from the precipice, and I should have experienced their fate, had I not suddenly started back.”

At these words, the fathers of the fifty boys cried out aloud ; the mothers repeated their exclamations an octave higher ; whilst the rest, without knowing the cause, soon drowned the voices of both, with still louder lamentations of their own. “ Our caliph,” said they, and the report soon circulated, "our caliph has played us this trick, to gratify his accursed Giaour. Let us punish him for perfidy ! let us avenge ourselves ! let us avenge the blood of the innocent ! let us throw this cruel prince into the gulf that is near, and let his name be mentioned no more !"

At this rumour and these menaces, Carathis, full of consternation, hastened to Morakanabad, and said, "Vizir, you have lost two beautiful boys, and must necessarily be the most afflicted of fathers ; but you are virtuous ; save your master."—"I will brave every hazard," replied the vizir, "to rescue him from his present danger ; but, afterwards, will abandon him to his fate. Bababalouk," continued he, "put yourself at the head of your eunuchs : disperse the mob, and, if possible, bring back this unhappy prince to his palace." Bababalouk and his fraternity, felicitating each other in a low voice on their having been spared the cares as well as the honour of paternity, obeyed the mandate of the vizir ; who, seconding their exertions to the utmost of his power, at length accomplished his generous enterprise ; and retired, as he resolved, to lament at his leisure.

No sooner had the caliph re-entered his palace than Carathis commanded the doors to be fastened ; but perceiving the tumult to be still violent, and hearing the imprecations which resounded from all quarters, she said to her son,—“Whether the populace be right or wrong, it behoves you to provide for your safety ; let us retire to your own apartment, and, from thence, through the subterranean passage, known only to ourselves, into your tower : there, with the assistance of the mutes who never leave it, we may be able to make a powerful resistance. Bababalouk, supposing us to be still in the palace, will guard its avenues, for his own sake ; and we shall soon find, without the counsels of that blubberer Morakanabad, what expedient may be the best to adopt."

VātheK, without making the least reply, acquiesced in his mother's proposal, and repeated as he went, "Nefarious Giaour! where art thou? hast thou not yet devoured those poor children? where are thy sabres? thy golden key? thy talismans?"—Carathis, who guessed from these interrogations a part of the truth, had no difficulty to apprehend in getting at the whole as soon as he should be a little composed in his tower. This princess was so far from being influenced by scruples, that she was as wicked as woman could be, which is not saying a little ; for the sex pique themselves on their superiority in every competition. The recital of the caliph, therefore, occasioned neither terror nor surprise to his mother : she felt no emotion but from the promises of the Giaour, and said to her son, "This Giaour, it must be confessed, is somewhat sanguinary in his taste ; but the terrestrial powers are always terrible ; nevertheless, what the one hath promised, and the others can confer, will prove a sufficient indemnification. No crimes should be thought too dear for such a reward : forbear, then, to revile the Indian ; you have not fulfilled the conditions to which his services are annexed : for instance ; is not a sacrifice to the subterranean Genii required ? and should we not be prepared to offer it as soon as the tumult is subsided ? This charge I will take on myself, and have no doubt of succeeding, by means of your treasures, which, as there are now so many others in store, may without fear be exhausted." Accordingly, the princess, who possessed the most consummate skill in the art of persuasion, went immediately back through the subterranean passage ; and, presenting herself to the populace from a window of the palace, began to harangue them with all the address of which she was mistress ; whilst Bababalouk showered money from both hands amongst the crowd, who by these united means were soon appeased. Every person retired to his home, and Carathis returned to the tower.

Prayer at break of day was announced, when Carathis and Vathek ascended the steps which led to the summit of the tower, where they remained for some time, though the weather was lowering and wet. This impending gloom corresponded with their malignant dispositions ; but when the sun began to break through the clouds, they ordered a pavilion to be raised, as a screen against the intrusion of his beams. The caliph, overcome with fatigue, sought refreshment from repose ; at the same time, hoping that significant dreams might attend on his slumbers ; whilst the indefatigable Carathis, followed by a party of her mutes, descended to prepare whatever she judged proper, for the oblation of the approaching night.

By secret stairs, contrived within the thickness of the wall, and known only to herself and her son, she first repaired to the mysterious recesses in which were deposited the mummies that had been wrested from the catacombs of the ancient Pharaohs. Of these she ordered several to be taken. From thence she resorted to a gallery, where, under the guard of fifty female negroes mute and blind of the right eye, were preserved the oil of the most venomous serpents; rhinoceros' horns; and woods of a subtile and penetrating odour, procured from the interior of the Indies, together with a thousand other horrible rarities. This collection had been formed for a purpose like the present, by Carathis herself; from a presentiment that she might, one day, enjoy some intercourse with the infernal powers, to whom she had ever been passionately attached, and to whose taste she was no stranger.

To familiarize herself the better with the horrors in view, the princess remained in the company of her negroes, who squinted in the most amiable manner from the only eye they had; and leered, with exquisite delight, at the skulls and skeletons which Carathis had drawn forth from her cabinets; all of them making the most frightful contortions, and uttering such shrill chatterings, that the princess, stunned by them and suffocated by the potency of the exhalations, was forced to quit the gallery, after stripping it of a part of its abominable treasures.

Whilst she was thus occupied, the caliph, who, instead of the visions he expected, had acquired in these unsubstantial regions a voracious appetite, was greatly provoked at the mutes. For having totally forgotten their deafness, he had impatiently asked them for food; and seeing them regardless of his demand, he began to cuff, pinch, and bite them, till Carathis arrived to terminate a scene so indecent, to the great content of these miserable creatures:—"Son! what means all this?" said she, panting for breath. "I thought I heard as I came up the shrieks of a thousand bats, torn from their crannies in the recesses of a cavern ; and it was the outcry only of these poor mutes, whom you were so unmercifully abusing. In truth, you but ill deserve the admirable provision I have brought you."—"Give it me instantly," exclaimed the caliph ; "I am perishing from hunger !"—"As to that," answered she, "you must have an excellent stomach if it can digest what I have brought."—"Be quick," replied the caliph ;—"but, oh heavens ! what horrors ! what do you intend ?"—"Come, come," returned Carathis, "be not so squeamish ; but help me to arrange everything properly ; and you shall see that, what you reject with such symptoms of disgust, will soon complete your felicity. Let us get ready the pile for the sacrifice of to-night ; and think not of eating till that is performed : know you not, that all solemn rites ought to be preceded by a rigorous abstinence ?"

The caliph, not daring to object, abandoned himself to grief and the wind that ravaged his entrails, whilst his mother went forward with the requisite operations. Phials of serpents' oil, mummies, and bones, were soon set in order on the balustrade of the tower. The pile began to rise ; and in three hours was twenty cubits high. At length darkness approached ; and Carathis, having stripped herself to her inmost garment, clapped her hands in an impulse of ecstasy : the mutes followed her example ; but Vathek, extenuated with hunger and impatience, was unable to support himself, and fell down in a swoon. The sparks had already kindled the dry wood ; the venomous oil burst into a thousand blue flames ; the mummies, dissolving, emitted a thick dun vapour ; and the rhinoceros' horns, beginning to consume, all together diffused such a stench, that the caliph, recovering, started from his trance, and gazed wildly on the scene in full blaze around him. The oil gushed forth in a plenitude of streams; and the negresses, who supplied it without intermission, united their cries to those of the princess. At last the fire became so violent, and the flames reflected from the polished marble so dazzling, that the caliph, unable to withstand the heat and the blaze, effected his escape, and took shelter under the imperial standard.

In the meantime, the inhabitants of Samarah, scared at the light which shone over the city, arose in haste, ascended their roofs, beheld the tower on fire, and hurried, half-naked, to the square. Their love for their sovereign immediately awoke; and apprehending him in danger of perishing in his tower, their whole thoughts were occupied with the means of his safety. Morakanabad flew from his retirement, wiped away his tears, and cried out for water like the rest. Baba-balouk, whose olfactory nerves were more familiarised to magical odours, readily conjecturing that Carathis was engaged in her favourite amusements, strenuously exhorted them not to be alarmed. Him, however, they treated as an old poltroon, and styled him a rascally traitor. The camels and dromedaries were advancing with water; but no one knew by which way to enter the tower. Whilst the populace was obstinate in forcing the doors, a violent north-east wind drove an immense volume of flame against them. At first they recoiled, but soon came back with redoubled zeal. At the same time, the stench of the horns and mummies increasing, most of the crowd fell backward in a state of suffocation. Those that kept their feet mutually wondered at the cause of the smell, and admonished each other to retire. Morakanabad, more sick than the rest, remained in a piteous condition. Holding his nose with one hand, every one persisted in his efforts with the other to burst open the doors and obtain admission. A hundred and forty of the strongest and most resolute at length accomplished their purpose. Having gained the staircase by their violent exertions, they attained a great height in a quarter of an hour.

Carathis, alarmed at the signs of her mutes, advanced to the staircase; went down a few steps, and heard several voices calling out from below,—“You shall in a moment have water!” Being rather alert, considering her age, she presently regained the top of the tower, and bade her son suspend the sacrifice for some minutes; adding,—“We shall soon be enabled to render it more grateful. Certain dolts of your subjects, imagining, no doubt, that we were on fire, have been rash enough to break through those doors which had hitherto remained inviolate, for the sake of bringing up water. They are very kind, you must allow, so soon to forget the wrongs you have done them; but that is of little moment. Let us offer them to the Giaour,—let them come up; our mutes, who neither want strength nor experience, will soon despatch them, exhausted as they are with fatigue.”—“Be it so,” answered the caliph, “provided we finish, and I dine.” In fact, these good people, out of breath from ascending fifteen hundred stairs in such haste, and chagrined at having spilt by the way the water they had taken, were no sooner arrived at the top, than the blaze of the flames, and the fumes of the mummies, at once overpowered their senses. It was a pity ! for they beheld not the agreeable smile with which the mutes and negresses adjusted the cord to their necks : these amiable personages rejoiced, however, no less at the scene. Never before had the ceremony of strangling been performed with so much facility. They all fell, without the least resistance or struggle : so that Vathek, in the space of a few moments, found himself surrounded by the dead bodies of the most faithful of his subjects ; all which were thrown on the top of the pile. Carathis, whose presence of mind never forsook her, perceiving that she had carcasses sufficient to complete her oblation, commanded the chains to be stretched across the staircase, and the iron doors barricadoed, that no more might come up.

No sooner were these orders obeyed, than the tower shook ; the dead bodies vanished in the flames ; which, at once, changed from a swarthy crimson to a bright rose colour ; an ambient vapour emitted the most exquisite fragrance ; the marble columns rang with harmonious sounds, and the liquefied horns diffused a delicious perfume. Carathis, in transports, anticipated the success of her enterprise ; whilst her mutes and negresses, to whom these sweets had given the colic, retired grumbling to their cells.

Scarcely were they gone, when, instead of the pile, horns, mummies, and ashes, the caliph both saw and felt, with a decree of pleasure which he could not express, a table covered with the most magnificent repast : flagons of wine and vases of exquisite sherbet reposing on snow. He availed himself, without scruple, of such an entertainment ; and had already laid hands on a lamb stuffed with pistachios, whilst Carathis was privately drawing from a filigree urn a parchment that seemed to be endless, and which had escaped the notice of her son. Totally occupied in gratifying an importunate appetite, he left her to peruse it without interruption ; which having finished, she said to him, in an authoritative tone, " Put an end to your gluttony, and hear the splendid promises with which you are favoured !" She then read as follows :—" Vathek, my well-beloved, thou hast surpassed my hopes : my nostrils have been regaled by the savour of thy mummies, thy horns, and, still more, by the lives devoted on the pile. At the full of the moon, cause the bands of thy musicians, and thy tymbals, to be heard ; depart from thy palace, surrounded by all the pageants of majesty ; thy most faithful slaves ; thy best beloved wives ; thy most magnificent litters ; thy richest laden camels ; and set forward on thy way to Istakhar. There I await thy coming : that is the region of wonders : there shalt thou receive the diadem of Gian Ben Gian ; the talismans of Soliman ; and the treasures of the pre-adamite sultans : there shalt thou be solaced with all kinds of delight.—But beware how thou interest any dwelling on thy route ; or thou shalt feel the effects of my anger."

The caliph, notwithstanding his habitual luxury, had never before dined with so much satisfaction. He gave full scope to the joy of these golden tidings ; and betook himself to drinking anew. Carathis, whose antipathy to wine was by no means insuperable, failed not to pledge him at every bumper he ironically quaffed to the health of Mahomet. This infernal liquor completed their impious temerity, and prompted them to utter a profusion of blasphemies. They gave a loose to their wit, at the expense of the ass of Balaam, the dog of the seven sleepers, and the other animals admitted into the paradise of Mahomet. In this sprightly humour, they descended the fifteen hundred stairs, diverting themselves, as they went, at the anxious faces they saw on the square, through the barbicans and loopholes of the tower ; and at length arrived at the royal apartments, by the subterranean passage. Bababalouk was parading to and fro, and issuing his mandates with great pomp to the eunuchs, who were snuffing the lights and painting the eyes of the Circassians. No sooner did he catch sight of the caliph and his mother, than he exclaimed,—“ Hah ! you have then, I perceive, escaped from the flames ; I was not, however, altogether out of doubt.”—“ Of what moment is it to us what you thought or think ?” cried Carathis : “ go, speed, tell Morakanabad that we immediately want him ; and take care not to stop by the way to make your insipid reflections.”

Morakanabad delayed not to obey the summons, and was received by Vathek and his mother with great solemnity. They told him, with an air of composure and commiseration, that the fire at the top of the tower was extinguished ; but that it had cost the lives of the brave people who sought to assist them.

“ Still more misfortunes !” cried Morakanabad, with a sigh. “ Ah, commander of the faithful, our holy prophet is certainly irritated against us ! it behoves you to appease him.”—“ We will appease him hereafter,” replied the caliph, with a smile that augured nothing of good. "You will have leisure sufficient for your supplications during my absence, for this country is the bane of my health. I am disgusted with the mountain of the four fountains, and am resolved to go and drink of the stream of Rocnabad. I long to refresh myself in the delightful valleys which it waters. Do you, with the advice of my mother, govern my dominions, and take care to supply whatever her experiments may demand; for you well know that our tower abounds in materials for the advancement of science."

The tower but ill suited Morakanabad's taste. Immense treasures had been lavished upon it; and nothing had he ever seen carried thither but female negroes, mutes, and abominable drugs. Nor did he know well what to think of Carathis, who, like a chameleon, could assume all possible colours. Her cursed eloquence had often driven the poor Mussulman to his last shifts. He considered, however, that if she possessed but few good qualities, her son had still fewer; and that the alternative, on the whole, would be in her favour. Consoled, therefore, with this reflection, he went, in good spirits, to soothe the populace, and make the proper arrangements for his master's journey.

Vathek, to conciliate the spirits of the subterranean palace, resolved that his expedition should be uncommonly splendid. With this view he confiscated, on all sides, the property of his subjects; whilst his worthy mother stripped the seraglios she visited of the gems they contained. She collected all the sempstresses and embroiderers of Samarah and other cities, to the distance of sixty leagues, to prepare pavilions, palanquins, sofas, canopies, and litters for the train of the monarch. There was not left, in Masulipatam, a single piece of chintz ; and so much muslin had been brought up to dress out Bababalouk and the other black eunuchs, that there remained not an ell of it in the whole Irak of Babylon.

During these preparations, Carathis, who never lost sight of her great object, which was to obtain favour with the powers of darkness, made select parties of the fairest and most delicate ladies of the city ; but in the midst of their gaiety, she contrived to introduce vipers amongst them, and to break pots of scorpions under the table. They all bit to a wonder ; and Carathis would have left her friends to die, were it not that, to fill up the time, she now and then amused herself in curing their wounds, with an excellent anodyne of her own invention ; for this good princess abhorred being indolent.

Vathek, who was not altogether so active as his mother, devoted his time to the sole gratification of his senses, in the palaces which were severally dedicated to them. He disgusted himself no more with the divan, or the mosque. One half of Samarah followed his example, whilst the other lamented the progress of corruption.

In the midst of these transactions, the embassy returned, which had been sent, in pious times, to Mecca. It consisted of the most reverend moullahs, who had fulfilled their commission, and brought back one of those precious besoms which are used to sweep the sacred Cahaba ; a present truly worthy of the greatest potentate on earth !

The caliph happened at this instant to be engaged in an apartment by no means adapted to the reception of embassies. He heard the voice of Bababalouk, calling out from between the door and the tapestry that hung before it,—“Here are the excellent Edris al Shafei, and the seraphic Al Mouhateddin, who have brought the besom from Mecca, and with tears of joy, entreat they may present it to your majesty in person.” —“Let them bring the besom hither, it may be of use,” said Vathek.—“How!” answered Bababalouk, half aloud and amazed.—“Obey,” replied the caliph, “for it is my sovereign will; go instantly, vanish! for here will I receive the good folk who have thus filled thee with joy.”

The eunuch departed muttering, and bade the venerable train attend him. A sacred rapture was diffused amongst these reverend old men. Though fatigued with the length of their expedition, they followed Bababalouk with an alertness almost miraculous, and felt themselves highly flattered, as they swept along the stately porticoes, that the caliph would not receive them like ambassadors in ordinary in his hall of audience. Soon reaching the interior of the harem, (where, through blinds of Persian, they perceived large soft eyes, dark and blue, that came and went like lightning), penetrated with respect and wonder, and full of their celestial mission, they advanced in procession towards the small corridors that appeared to terminate in nothing, but, nevertheless, led to the cell where the caliph expected their coming.

“What! is the commander of the faithful sick?” said Edris al Shafei, in a low voice to his companion. —“I rather think he is in his oratory,” answered Al

Mouhateddin. Vathek, who heard the dialogue, cried out,—“What imports it you, how I am employed? approach without delay.” They advanced, whilst the caliph, without showing himself, put forth his hand from behind the tapestry that hung before the door, and demanded of them the besom. Having prostrated themselves as well as the corridor would permit, and even in a tolerable semicircle, the venerable Al Shafei, drawing forth the besom from the embroidered and perfumed scarves, in which it had been enveloped, and secured from the profane gaze of vulgar eyes, arose from his associates, and advanced, with an air of the most awful solemnity, towards the supposed oratory; but with what astonishment! with what horror was he seized! Vathek, bursting out into a villanous laugh, snatched the besom from his trembling hand, and, fixing upon some cobwebs, that hung from the ceiling, gravely brushed them away till not a single one remained. The old men, overpowered with amazement, were unable to lift their beards from the ground; for, as Vathek had carelessly left the tapestry between them half drawn, they were witnesses of the whole transaction. Their tears bedewed the marble. Al Mouhateddin swooned through mortification and fatigue, whilst the caliph, throwing himself backward on his seat, shouted, and clapped his hands without mercy. At last, addressing himself to Bababalouk,—“My dear black,” said he, “go, regale these pious poor souls with my good wine from Shiraz, since they can boast of having seen more of my palace than any one besides.” Having said this, he threw the besom in their face, and went to enjoy the laugh with Carathis. Bababalouk did all in his power to console the ambassadors ; but the two most infirm expired on the spot : the rest were carried to their beds, from whence, being heart-broken with sorrow and shame, they never arose.

The succeeding night, Vathek, attended by his mother, ascended the tower to see if every thing were ready for his journey ; for he had great faith in the influence of the stars. The planets appeared in their most favourable aspects. The caliph, to enjoy so flattering a sight, supped gaily on the roof ; and fancied that he heard, during his repast, loud shouts of laughter resound through the sky, in a manner that inspired the fullest assurance.

All was in motion at the palace ; lights were kept burning through the whole of the night : the sound of implements, and of artizans finishing their work ; the voices of women, and their guardians, who sung at their embroidery ; all conspired to interrupt the stillness of nature, and infinitely delighted the heart of Vathek, who imagined himself going in triumph to sit upon the throne of Soliman. The people were not less satisfied than himself : all assisted to accelerate the moment, which should rescue them from the wayward caprices of so extravagant a master.

The day preceding the departure of this infatuated prince was employed by Carathis in repeating to him the decrees of the mysterious parchment, which she had thoroughly gotten by heart ; and in recommending him not to enter the habitation of any one by the way : —“ For well thou knowest,” added she, “ how liquorish thy taste is after good dishes and young damsels : let me, therefore, enjoin thee to be content with thy old cooks, who are the best in the world ; and not to forget that, in thy ambulatory seraglio, there are at least three dozen of pretty faces which Bababalouk has not yet unveiled. I myself have a great desire to watch over thy conduct, and visit the subterranean palace, which, no doubt, contains whatever can interest persons like us. There is nothing so pleasing as retiring to caverns : my taste for dead bodies, and every thing like mummy, is decided ; and, I am confident, thou wilt see the most exquisite of their kind. Forget me not then, but the moment thou art in possession of the talismans which are to open the way to the mineral kingdoms and the centre of the earth itself, fail not to despatch some trusty genius to take me and my cabinet ; for the oil of the serpents I have pinched to death will be a pretty present to the Giaour, who cannot but be charmed with such dainties."

Scarcely had Carathis ended this edifying discourse, when the sun, setting behind the mountain of the four fountains, gave place to the rising moon. This planet, being that evening at full, appeared of unusual beauty and magnitude in the eyes of the women, the eunuchs, and the pages, who were all impatient to set forward. The city re-echoed with shouts of joy, and flourishing of trumpets. Nothing was visible but plumes nodding on pavilions, and aigrets shining in the mild lustre of the moon. The spacious square resembled an immense parterre variegated with the most stately tulips of the East.

Arrayed in the robes which were only worn at the most distinguished ceremonials, and supported by his vizir and Bababalouk, the caliph descended the great staircase of the tower in the sight of all his people. He could not forbear pausing, at intervals, to admire the superb appearance which everywhere courted his view ; whilst the whole multitude, even to the camels with their sumptuous burdens, knelt down before him. For some time a general stillness prevailed, which nothing happened to disturb, but the shrill screams of some eunuchs in the rear. These vigilant guards, having remarked certain cages of the ladies swagging somewhat awry, and discovered that a few adventurous gallants had contrived to get in, soon dislodged the enraptured culprits, and consigned them, with good commendations, to the surgeons of the serail. The majesty of so magnificent a spectacle was not, however, violated by incidents like these. Vathek, meanwhile, saluted the moon with an idolatrous air, that neither pleased Morakanabad, nor the doctors of the law, any more than the vizirs and grandees of his court, who were all assembled to enjoy the last view of their sovereign.

At length, the clarions and trumpets from the top of the tower announced the prelude of departure. Though the instruments were in unison with each other, yet a singular dissonance was blended with their sounds. This proceeded from Carathis, who was singing her direful orisons to the Giaour, whilst the negresses and mutes supplied thorough bass, without articulating a word. The good Mussulmans fancied that they heard the sullen hum of those nocturnal insects, which presage evil ; and importuned Vathek to beware how he ventured his sacred person.

On a given signal, the great standard of the Califat was displayed : twenty thousand lances shone around it ; and the caliph, treading royally on the cloth of gold, which had been spread for his feet, ascended his litter amidst the general acclamations of his subjects.

The expedition commenced with the utmost order, and so entire a silence, that even the locusts were heard from the thickets on the plain of Catoul. Gaiety and good humour prevailing, they made full six leagues before the dawn; and the morning star was still glittering in the firmament, when the whole of this numerous train had halted on the banks of the Tigris, where they encamped to repose for the rest of the day.

The three days that followed were spent in the same manner; but on the fourth the heavens looked angry: lightnings broke forth in frequent flashes; re-echoing peals of thunder succeeded; and the trembling Circassians clung with all their might to their ugly guardians. The caliph himself was greatly inclined to take shelter in the large town of Ghulchissar, the governor of which came forth to meet him, and tendered every kind of refreshment the place could supply. But, having examined his tablers, he suffered the rain to soak him almost to the bone, notwithstanding the importunity of his first favourites. Though he began to regret the palace of the senses, yet he lost not sight of his enterprise, and his sanguine expectation confirmed his resolution. His geographers were ordered to attend him; but the weather proved so terrible that these poor people exhibited a lamentable appearance: and their maps of the different countries, spoiled by the rain, were in a still worse plight than themselves. As no long journey had been undertaken since the time of Haroun al Raschid, every one was ignorant which way to turn; and Vathek, though well versed in the course of the heavens, no longer knew his situation on earth. He thundered even louder than the elements ; and muttered forth certain hints of the bow-string, which were not very soothing to literary ears. Disgusted at the toilsome weariness of the way, he determined to cross over the craggy heights, and follow the guidance of a peasant, who undertook to bring him, in four days, to Rocnabad. Remonstrances were all to no purpose : his resolution was fixed.

The females and eunuchs uttered shrill wailings at the sight of the precipices below them, and the dreary prospects that opened in the vast gorges of the mountains. Before they could reach the ascent of the steepest rock, night overtook them, and a boisterous tempest arose, which, having rent the awnings of the palanquins and cages, exposed to the raw gusts the poor ladies within, who had never before felt so piercing a cold. The dark clouds that overcast the face of the sky deepened the horrors of this disastrous night, insomuch that nothing could be heard distinctly but the mewling of pages and the lamentations of sultanas.

To increase the general misfortune, the frightful uproar of wild beasts resounded at a distance ; and there were soon perceived in the forest they were skirting the glaring of eyes, which could belong only to devils or tigers. The pioneers, who, as well as they could, had marked out a track, and a part of the advanced guard, were devoured before they had been in the least apprized of their danger. The confusion that prevailed was extreme. Wolves, tigers, and other carnivorous animals, invited by the howling of their companions, flocked together from every quarter. The crashing of bones was heard on all sides, and a fearful rush of wings over head ; for now vultures also began to be of the party.

The terror at length reached the main body of the troops which surrounded the monarch and his harem at the distance of two leagues from the scene. Vathek (voluptuously reposed in his capacious litter upon cushions of silk, with two little pages beside him of complexions more fair than the enamel of Franguistan, who were occupied in keeping off flies) was soundly asleep, and contemplating in his dreams the treasures of Soliman. The shrieks, however, of his wives awoke him with a start ; and, instead of the Giaour with his key of gold, he beheld Bababalouk full of consternation. "Sire," exclaimed this good servant of the most potent of monarchs, "misfortune is arrived at its height ; wild beasts, who entertain no more reverence for your sacred person than for a dead ass, have beset your camels and their drivers ; thirty of the most richly laden are already become their prey, as well as your confectioners, your cooks, and purveyors ; and unless our holy Prophet should protect us, we shall have all eaten our last meal." At the mention of eating, the caliph lost all patience. He began to bellow, and even beat himself (for there was no seeing in the dark). The rumour every instant increased ; and Bababalouk, finding no good could be done with his master, stopped both his ears against the hurlyburly of the harem, and called out aloud,—
"Come, ladies and brothers ! all hands to work : strike light in a moment ! never shall it be said, that the commander of the faithful served to regale these infidel brutes." Though there wanted not, in this bevy of beauties, a sufficient number who were capricious and wayward, yet, on the present occasion, they were all compliance. Fires were visible, in a twinkling, in all their cages. Ten thousand torches were lighted at once. The caliph, himself, seized a large one of wax : every person followed his example ; and by kindling ropes' ends, dipped in oil, and fastened on poles, an amazing blaze was spread. The rocks were covered with the splendour of sunshine. The trails of sparks, wafted by the wind, communicated to the dry fern, of which there was plenty. Serpents were observed to crawl forth from their retreats, with amazement and hissings ; whilst the horses snorted, stamped the ground, tossed their noses in the air, and plunged about without mercy.

One of the forests of cedar that bordered their way took fire ; and the branches that overhung the path, extending their flames to the muslins and chintzes which covered the cages of the ladies, obliged them to jump out, at the peril of their necks. Vathek, who vented on the occasion a thousand blasphemies, was himself compelled to touch, with his sacred feet, the naked earth.

Never had such an incident happened before. Full of mortification, shame, and despondence, and not knowing how to walk, the ladies fell into the dirt. " Must I go on foot ? " said one. " Must I wet my feet ? " cried another. " Must I soil my dress ? " asked a third. " Execrable Bababalouk ! " exclaimed all. " Outcast of hell ! what hast thou to do with torches ? Better were it to be eaten by tigers, than to fall into our present condition ! We are for ever undone ! Not a porter is there in the army, nor a currier of camels, but hath seen some part of our bodies ; and, what is worse, our very faces !” On saying this the most bashful amongst them hid their foreheads on the ground, whilst such as had more boldness flew at Bababalouk ; but he, well apprized of their humour, and not wanting in shrewdness, betook himself to his heels along with his comrades, all cropping their torches and striking their tymbals.

It was not less light than in the brightest of the dogdays, and the weather was hot in proportion ; but how degrading was the spectacle, to behold the caliph bespattered, like an ordinary mortal ! As the exercise of his faculties seemed to be suspended, one of his Ethiopian wives (for he delighted in variety) clasped him in her arms, threw him upon her shoulder like a sack of dates, and, finding that the fire was hemming them in, set off with no small expedition, considering the weight of her burden. The other ladies, who had just learned the use of their feet, followed her : their guards galloped after ; and the camel-drivers brought up the rear, as fast as their charge would permit.

They soon reached the spot where the wild beasts had commenced the carnage, but which they had too much good sense not to leave at the approaching of the tumult, having made besides a most luxurious supper. Bababalouk, nevertheless, seized on a few of the plump-est, which were unable to budge from the place, and began to flay them with admirable adroitness. The cavalcade having proceeded so far from the conflagration, that the heat felt rather grateful than violent, it was immediately resolved on to halt. The tattered chintzes were picked up ; the scraps, left by the wolves and tigers, interred ; and vengeance was taken on some dozens of vultures, that were too much glutted to rise on the wing. The camels, which had been left unmolested to make sal ammoniac, being numbered, and the ladies once more enclosed in their cages, the imperial tent was pitched on the levellest ground they could find.

Vathek, reposing upon a mattress of down, and tolerably recovered from the jolting of the Ethiopian, who, to his feelings, seemed the roughest trotting jade he had hitherto mounted, called out for something to eat. But, alas ! those delicate cakes which had been baked in silver ovens for his royal mouth, those rich manchets, amber comfits, flagons of Schiraz wine, porcelain vases of snow, and grapes from the banks of the Tigris, were all irremediably lost ! And nothing had Bababalouk to present in their stead but a roasted wolf ; vultures à la daube ; aromatic herbs of the most acrid poignancy ; rotten truffles, boiled thistles, and such other wild plants as must ulcerate the throat and parch up the tongue. Nor was he better provided in the article of drink ; for he could procure nothing to accompany these irritating viands but a few phials of abominable brandy which had been secreted by the scullions in their slippers. Vathek made wry faces at so savage a repast ; and Bababalouk answered them with shrugs and contortions. The caliph, however, ate with tolerable appetite ; and fell into a nap that lasted six hours.

The splendour of the sun, reflected from the white cliffs of the mountains, in spite of the curtains that enclosed Vathek, at length disturbed his repose. He awoke terrified, and stung to the quick by wormwoodcoloured flies, which emitted from their wings a suffocating stench. The miserable monarch was perplexed how to act, though his wits were not idle in seeking expedients ; whilst Bababalouk lay snoring amidst a swarm of those insects that busily thronged to pay court to his nose. The little pages, famished with hunger, had dropped their fans on the ground, and exerted their dying voices in bitter reproaches on the caliph, who now, for the first time, heard the language of truth.

Thus stimulated, he renewed his imprecations against the Giaour ; and bestowed upon Mahomet some soothing expressions. " Where am I," cried he : " what are these dreadful rocks—these valleys of darkness ? Are we arrived at the horrible Kaf ? Is the Simurgh coming to pluck out my eyes, as a punishment for undertaking this impious enterprise ?" Having said this he turned himself towards an outlet in the side of his pavilion ; but, alas ! what objects occurred to his view ? on one side, a plain of black sand that appeared to be unbounded ; and, on the other, perpendicular crags, bristled over with those abominable thistles, which had so severely lacerated his tongue. He fancied, however, that he perceived amongst the brambles and briars some gigantic flowers, but was mistaken ; for these were only the dangling palampores and variegated tatters of his gay retinue. As there were several clefts in the rock from whence water seemed to have flowed, Vathek applied his ear with the hope of catching the sound of some latent torrent ; but could only distinguish the low murmurs of his people, who were repining at their journey, and complaining for the want of water. " To what purpose," asked they, "have we been brought hither? hath our caliph another tower to build? or have the relentless afrits, whom Carathis so much loves, fixed their abode in this place?"

At the name of Carathis, Vathek recollected the tablets he had received from his mother; who assured him they were fraught with preternatural qualities, and advised him to consult them as emergencies might require. Whilst he was engaged in turning them over, he heard a shout of joy, and a loud clapping of hands. The curtains of his pavilion were soon drawn back, and he beheld Bababalouk, followed by a troop of his favourites, conducting two dwarfs, each a cubit high; who brought between them a large basket of melons, oranges, and pomegranates. They were singing in the sweetest tones the words that follow:—"We dwell on the top of these rocks, in a cabin of rushes and canes; the eagles envy us our nest: a small spring supplies us with water for the Abdest, and we daily repeat prayers, which the Prophet approves. We love you, O commander of the faithful! our master, the good Emir Fakreddin, loves you also: he reveres, in your person, the vicerent of Mahomet. Little as we are, in us he confides: he knows our hearts to be as good as our bodies are contemptible; and hath placed us here to aid those who are bewildered on these dreary mountains. Last night, whilst we were occupied within our cell in reading the holy Koran, a sudden hurricane blew out our lights, and rocked our habitation. For two whole hours, a palpable darkness prevailed; but we heard sounds at a distance, which we conjectured to proceed from the bells of a cafila, passing over the rocks. Our ears were soon filled with deplorable shrieks, frightful roarings, and the sound of tymbals. Chilled with terror, we concluded that the Deggial, with his exterminating angels, had sent forth his plagues on the earth. In the midst of these melancholy reflections we perceived flames of the deepest red glow in the horizon ; and found ourselves, in a few moments, covered with flakes of fire. Amazed at so strange an appearance, we took up the volume dictated by the blessed Intelligence, and, kneeling by the light of the fire that surrounded us, we recited the verse which says, 'Put no trust in anything but the mercy of Heaven : there is no help, save in the holy Prophet : the mountain of Kaf, itself, may tremble ; it is the power of Alla only that cannot be moved.' After having pronounced these words, we felt consolation, and our minds were hushed into a sacred repose. Silence ensued, and our ears clearly distinguished a voice in the air, saying,—'Servants of my faithful servant ! go down to the happy valley of Fakreddin tell him that an illustrious opportunity now offers to satiate the thirst of his hospitable heart. The commander of true believers is, this day, bewildered amongst these mountains, and stands in need of thy aid.'—We obeyed, with joy, the angelic mission ; and our master, filled with pious zeal, hath culled, with his own hands, these melons, oranges, and pomegranates. He is following us, with a hundred dromedaries, laden with the purest waters of his fountains ; and is coming to kiss the fringe of your consecrated robe, and implore you to enter his humble habitation, which, placed amidst these barren wilds, resembles an emerald set in lead." The dwarfs, having ended their address, remained still standing, and, with hands crossed upon their bosoms, preserved a respectful silence.

Vathek, in the midst of this curious harangue, seized the basket ; and, long before it was finished, the fruits had dissolved in his mouth. As he continued to eat, his piety increased ; and, in the same breath, he recited his prayers and called for the Koran and sugar.

Such was the state of his mind when the tablets, which were thrown by at the approach of the dwarfs, again attracted his eye. He took them up ; but was ready to drop on the ground when he beheld, in large red characters, inscribed by Carathis, these words,—“ Beware of old doctors and their puny messengers of but one cubit high : distrust their pious frauds , and, instead of eating their melons, empale on a spit the bearers of them. Shouldest thou be such a fool as to visit them, the portal of the subterranean palace will shut in thy face, with such force as shall shake thee asunder : thy body shall be spit upon, and bats will nestle in thy belly.”

“ To what tends this ominous rhapsody ?” cried the caliph ; “ and must I, then, perish in these deserts with thirst, whilst I may refresh myself in the delicious valley of melons and cucumbers ? Accursed be the Giaour with his portal of ebony ! he hath made me dance attendance too long already. Besides, who shall prescribe laws to me ? I, forsooth, must not enter any one’s habitation ! Be it so ; but what one can I enter that is not my own ?” Bababalouk, who lost not a syllable of this soliloquy, applauded it with all his heart; and the ladies, for the first time, 'agreed with him in opinion.

The dwarfs were entertained, caressed, and seated with great ceremony, on little cushions of satin. The symmetry of their persons was a subject of admiration; not an inch of them was suffered to pass unexamined. Knick-knacks and dainties were offered in profusion; but all were declined with respectful gravity. They climbed up the sides of the caliph's seat; and, placing themselves each on one of his shoulders, began to whisper prayers in his ears. Their tongues quivered like aspen leaves; and the patience of Vathek was almost exhausted, when the acclamations of the troops announced the approach of Fakreddin, who was come with a hundred old grey-beards, and as many Korans and dromedaries. They instantly set about their ablutions, and began to repeat the Bismillah. Vathek, to get rid of these officious monitors, followed their example, for his hands were burning.

The good emir, who was punctiliously religious, and likewise a great dealer in compliments, made an harangue five times more prolix and insipid than his little harbingers had already delivered. The caliph, unable any longer to refrain, exclaimed,—“For the love of Mahomet, my dear Fakreddin, have done! let us proceed to your valley, and enjoy the fruits that Heaven hath vouchsafed you.” The hint of proceeding put all into motion. The venerable attendants of the emir set forward somewhat slowly, but Vathek having ordered his little pages, in private, to goad on the dromedaries, loud fits of laughter broke forth from the cages; for the unwieldy curvetting of these poor beasts, and the ridiculous distress of their superannuated riders, afforded the ladies no small entertainment.

They descended, however, unhurt into the valley, by the easy slopes which the emir had ordered to be cut in the rock ; and already the murmuring of streams and the rustling of leaves began to catch their attention. The cavalcade soon entered a path, which was skirted by flowering shrubs, and extended to a vast wood of palm trees, whose branches overspread a large building of freestone. This edifice was crowned with nine domes, and adorned with as many portals of bronze, on which was engraven the following inscription :—" This is the asylum of pilgrims, the refuge of travellers, and the depositary of secrets from all parts of the world."

Nine pages, beautiful as the day, and decently clothed in robes of Egyptian linen, were standing at each door. They received the whole retinue with an easy and inviting air. Four of the most amiable placed the caliph on a magnificent tecthtre van ; four others, somewhat less graceful, took charge of Bababalouk, who capered for joy at the snug little cabin that fell to his share : the pages that remained waited on the rest of the train.

Every man being gone out of sight, the gate of a large enclosure on the right turned on its harmonious hinges ; and a young female, of a slender form, came forth. Her light brown hair floated in the hazy breeze of the twilight. A troop of young maidens, like the Pleiades, attended her on tiptoe. They hastened to the pavilions that contained the sultanas ; and the young lady, gracefully bending, said to them,— “Charming princesses ! everything is ready ; we have prepared beds for your repose, and strewed your apartments with jasmine. No insects will keep off slumber from visiting your eyelids ; we will dispel them with a thousand plumes. Come, then, amiable ladies ! refresh your delicate feet, and your ivory limbs, in baths of rose-water ; and, by the light of perfumed lamps, your servants will amuse you with tales.” The sultanas accepted with pleasure these obliging offers, and followed the young lady to the emir’s harem ; where we must, for a moment, leave them, and return to the caliph.

Vathek found himself beneath a vast dome, illuminated by a thousand lamps of rock crystal : as many vases of the same material, filled with excellent sherbet, sparkled on a large table, where a profusion of viands were spread. Amongst others, were rice boiled in milk of almonds, saffron soups, and lamb à la crème ; of all which the caliph was amazingly fond. He took of each as much as he was able ; testified his sense of the emir’s friendship by the gaiety of his heart ; and made the dwarfs dance against their will,—for these little devotees durst not refuse the commander of the faithful. At last, he spread himself on the sofa, and slept sounder than he ever had before.

Beneath this dome a general silence prevailed ; for there was nothing to disturb it but the jaws of Bababalouk, who had untrussed himself to eat with greater advantage, being anxious to make amends for his fast in the mountains. As his spirits were too high to admit of his sleeping, and hating to be idle, he proposed with himself to visit the harem, and repair to his charge of the ladies : to examine if they had been properly lubricated with the balm of Mecca ; if their eyebrows and tresses were in order ; and, in a word, to perform all the little offices they might need. He sought for a long time together, but without being able to find out the door. He durst not speak aloud, for fear of disturbing the caliph ; and not a soul was stirring in the precincts of the palace. He almost despaired of effecting his purpose, when a low whispering just reached his ear. It came from the dwarfs, who were returned to their old occupation, and, for the nine hundred and ninety-ninth time in their lives, were reading over the Koran. They very politely invited Bababalouk to be of their party ; but his head was full of other concerns. The dwarfs, though not a little scandalized at his dissolute morals, directed him to the apartments he wanted to find. His way thither lay through a hundred dark corridors, along which he groped as he went ; and at last began to catch, from the extremity of a passage, the charming gossiping of the women, which not a little delighted his heart. "Ah, ha ! what not yet asleep ?" cried he ; and, taking long strides as he spoke, "did you not suspect me of abjuring my charge ?" Two of the black eunuchs, on hearing a voice so loud, left their party in haste, sabre in hand, to discover the 'cause ; but presently was repeated on all sides, "'Tis only Bababalouk ! no one but Bababalouk !" This circumspect guardian, having gone up to a thin veil of carnation-colour silk that hung before the doorway, distinguished, by means of the softened splendour that shone through it, an oval bath of dark porphyry, surrounded by curtains, festooned in large folds. Through the apertures between them, as they were not drawn close, groups of young slaves were visible ; amongst whom, Bababalouk perceived his pupils, indulgently expanding their arms, as if to embrace the perfumed water, and refresh themselves after their fatigues. The looks of tender languor ; their confidential whispers, and the enchanting smiles with which they were imparted ; the exquisite fragrance of the roses : all combined to inspire a voluptuousness, which even Bababalouk himself was scarce able to withstand.

He summoned up, however, his usual solemnity ; and, in the peremptory tone of authority, commanded the ladies, instantly, to leave the bath. Whilst he was issuing these mandates, the young Nouronihar, daughter of the emir, who was as sprightly as an antelope, and full of wanton gaiety, beckoned one of her slaves to let down the great swing which was suspended to the ceiling by cords of silk ; and whilst this was doing, winked to her companions in the bath, who, chagrined to be forced from so soothing a state of indolence, began to twist and entangle their hair to plague and detain Bababalouk, and teased him, besides, with a thousand vagaries.

Nouronihar, perceiving that he was nearly out of patience, accosted him, with an arch air of respectful concern, and said,—“ My lord ! it is not by any means decent that the chief eunuch of the caliph, our sovereign, should thus continue standing ; deign but to recline your graceful person upon this sofa, which will burst with vexation if it have not the honour to receive you.” Caught by these flattering accents, Bababalouk gallantly replied,—“ Delight of the apple of my eye ! I accept the invitation of your honied lips ; and, to say truth, my senses are dazzled with the radiance that beams from your charms.”—“Repose, then, at your ease,” replied the beauty ; as she placed him on the pretended sofa, which, quicker than lightning, flew up all at once. The rest of the women, having aptly conceived her design, sprang naked from the bath, and plied the swing with such unmerciful jerks that it swept through the whole compass of a very lofty dome, and took from the poor victim all power of respiration. Sometimes his feet rased the surface of the water ; and, at others, the skylight almost flattened his nose. In vain did he fill the air with the cries of a voice that resembled the ringing of a cracked jar ; their peals of laughter were still predominant.

Nouronihar, in the inebriety of youthful spirits, being used only to eunuchs of ordinary harems, and having never seen any thing so eminently disgusting, was far more diverted than all of the rest. She began to parody some Persian verses, and sang, with an accent most demurely piquant,—“Oh, gentle white dove ! as thou soar’st through the air, vouchsafe one kind glance on the mate of thy love ; melodious Philomel, I am thy rose ; warble some couplet to ravish my heart !”

The sultanas and their slaves, stimulated by these pleasantries, persevered at the swing with such unre-mitted assiduity, that at length the cord, which had secured it, snapped suddenly asunder ; and Bababalouk fell, floundering like a turtle, to the bottom of the bath. This accident occasioned an universal shout. Twelve little doors, till now unobserved, flew open at once ; and the ladies, in an instant, made their escape ; but not before having heaped all the towels on his head, and put out the lights that remained.

The deplorable animal, in water to the chin, overwhelmed with darkness, and unable to extricate himself from the wrappers that embarrassed him, was still doomed to hear, for his further consolation, the fresh bursts of merriment his disaster occasioned. He hustled, but in vain, to get from the bath; for the margin was become so slippery with the oil spilt in breaking the lamps, that, at every effort, he slid back with a plunge which resounded aloud through the hollow of the dome. These cursed peals of laughter were redoubled at every relapse, and he, who thought the place infested rather by devils than women, resolved to cease groping, and abide in the bath; where he amused himself with soliloquies, interspersed with imprecations, of which his malicious neighbours, reclining on down, suffered not an accent to escape. In this delectable plight the morning surprised him. The caliph, wondering at his absence, had caused him to be sought for everywhere. At last, he was drawn forth almost smothered from under the wisp of linen, and wet even to the marrow. Limping, and his teeth chattering with cold, he approached his master; who inquired what was the matter, and how he came soured in so strange a pickle?—"And why did you enter this cursed lodge?" answered Bababalouk, gruffly. "Ought a monarch like you to visit with his harem the abode of a grey-bearded emir, who knows nothing of life?—And with what gracious damsels doth the place too abound! Fancy to yourself how they have soaked me like a burnt crust; and made me dance like a jack-pudding, the livelong night through, on their damnable swing. What an excellent lesson for your sultanas, into whom I had instilled such reserve and decorum !” Vathek, comprehending not a syllable of all this invective, obliged him to relate minutely the transaction : but, instead of sympathizing with the miserable sufferer, he laughed immoderately at the device of the swing and the figure of Bababalouk mounted upon it. The stung eunuch could scarcely preserve the semblance of respect. “Ay, laugh, my lord ! laugh,” said he ; “but I wish this Nouronihar would play some trick on you ; she is too wicked to spare even majesty itself.” These words made, for the present, but a slight impression on the caliph ; but they, not long after, recurred to his mind.

This conversation was cut short by Fakreddin, who came to request that Vathek would join in the prayers and ablutions, to be solemnised on a spacious meadow watered by innumerable streams. The caliph found the waters refreshing, but the prayers abominably irksome. He diverted himself, however, with the multitude of calenders, santons, and derviches, who were continually coming and going ; but especially with the bramins, faquirs, and other enthusiasts, who had travelled from the heart of India, and halted on their way with the emir. These latter had each of them some mummery peculiar to himself. One dragged a huge chain wherever he went ; another an ouran-outang ; whilst a third was furnished with scourges ; and all performed to a charm. Some would climb up trees, holding one foot in the air ; others poise themselves over a fire, and without mercy fillip their noses. There were some amongst them that cherished vermin, which were not ungrateful in requiting their caresses. These rambling fanatics revolted the hearts of the derviches, the calenders, and santons; however, the vehemence of their aversion soon subsided, under the hope that the presence of the caliph would cure their folly and convert them to the Mussulman faith. But, alas! how great was their disappointment! for Vathek, instead of preaching to them, treated them as buffoons, bade them present his compliments to Visnow and Ixhora, and discovered a predilection for a squat old man from the Isle of Serendib, who was more ridiculous than any of the rest. "Come!" said he, "for the love of your gods, bestow a few slaps on your chops to amuse me." The old fellow, offended at such an address, began loudly to weep; but, as he betrayed a villanous drivelling in shedding tears, the caliph turned his back and listened to Bababalouk, who whispered, whilst he held the umbrella over him,—“Your majesty should be cautious of this odd assembly; which hath been collected, I know not for what. Is it necessary to exhibit such spectacles to a mighty potentate, with interludes of talapoins more mangy than dogs? Were I you, I would command a fire to be kindled, and at once rid the estates of the emir, of his harem, and all his menagerie.”—“Tush, . dolt,” answered Vathek, “and know that all this infinitely charms me. Nor shall I leave the meadow, till I have visited every hive of these pious mendicants.”

Wherever the caliph directed his course, objects of pity were sure to swarm round him; the 'blind, the purblind, smarts without noses, damsels without ears, each to extol the munificence of Fakreddin, who, as well as his attendant grey-beards, dealt about, gratis, plasters and cataplasms to all that applied. At noon a superb corps of cripples made its appearance ; and soon after advanced, by platoons, on the plain, the completest association of invalids that had ever been embodied till then. The blind went groping with the blind, the lame limped on together, and the maimed made gestures to each other with the only arm that remained. The sides of a considerable waterfall were crowded by the deaf ; amongst whom were some from Pegû, with ears uncommonly handsome and large, but who were still less able to hear than the rest. Nor were there wanting others in abundance with hump-backs, wenny necks, and even horns of an exquisite polish.

The emir, to aggrandise the solemnity of the festival, in honour of his illustrious visitant, ordered the turf to be spread, on all sides, with skins and table-cloths ; upon which were served up for the good Mussulmans pilaus of every hue, with other orthodox dishes ; and by the express order of Vathek, who was shamefully tolerant, small plates of abominations were prepared, to the great scandal of the faithful. The holy assembly began to fall to. The caliph, in spite of every remonstrance from the chief of his eunuchs, resolved to have a dinner dressed on the spot. The complaisant emir immediately gave orders for a table to be placed in the shade of the willows. The first service consisted of fish, which they drew from a river, flowing over sands of gold at the foot of a lofty hill. These were broiled as fast as taken, and served up with a sauce of vinegar, and small herbs that grew on Mount Sinai ; for everything with the emir was excellent and pious.

The dessert was not quite set on, when the sound of lutes, from the hill, was repeated by the echoes of the neighbouring mountains. The caliph, with an emotion of pleasure and surprise, had no sooner raised up his head than a handful of jasmine dropped on his face. An abundance of tittering succeeded the frolic, and instantly appeared, through the bushes, the elegant forms of several young females, skipping and bounding like roes. The fragrance diffused from their hair struck the sense of Vathek, who, in an ecstasy, suspending his repast, said to Bababalouk,—“Are the peris come down from their spheres? Note her, in particular, whose form is so perfect; venturously running on the brink of the precipice, and turning back her head, as regardless of nothing but the graceful flow of her robe. With what captivating impatience doth she contend with the bushes for her veil? could it be her who threw the jasmine at me?” —“Ay! she it was; and you, too, would she throw from the top of the rock,” answered Bababalouk, “for that is my good friend Nouronihar, who so kindly lent me her swing. My dear lord and master,” added he, wresting a twig from a willow, “let me correct her for her want of respect: the emir will have no reason to complain; since (bating what I owe to his piety) he is much to be blamed for keeping a troop of girls on the mountains, where the sharpness of the air gives their blood too brisk a circulation.”

“Peace! blasphemer,” said the caliph; “speak not thus of her, who, over these mountains, leads my heart a willing captive. Contrive, rather, that my eyes may be fixed upon hers; that I may respire her sweet breath as she bounds panting along these delightful wilds !” On saying these words, Vathek extended his arms towards the hill ; and directing his eyes, with an anxiety unknown to him before, endeavoured to keep within view the object that enthralled his soul ; but her course was as difficult to follow as the flight of one of those beautiful blue butterflies of Cachemire, which are, at once, so volatile and rare.

The caliph, not satisfied with seeing, wished also to hear Nouronihar, and eagerly turned to catch the sound of her voice. At last, he distinguished her whispering to one of her companions behind the thicket from whence she had thrown the jasmine,—“A caliph, it must be owned, is a fine thing to see ; but my little Gulchenrouz is much more amiable : one lock of his hair is of more value to me than the richest embroidery of the Indies. I had rather that his teeth should mischievously press my finger, than the richest ring of the imperial treasure. Where have you left him, Sutleineme ? and why is he not here ?”

The agitated caliph still wished to hear more ; but she immediately retired with all her attendants. The fond monarch pursued her with his eyes till she was gone out of sight ; and then continued like a bewildered and benighted traveller, from whom the clouds had obscured the constellation that guided his way. The curtain of night seemed dropped before him ; everything appeared discoloured. The falling waters filled his soul with dejection, and his tears trickled down the jasmines he had caught from Nouronihar, and placed in his inflamed bosom. He snatched up a few shining pebbles, to remind him of the scene where he felt the first tumults of love. Two hours had elapsed, and evening drew on, before he could resolve to depart from the place. He often, but in vain, attempted to go : a soft languor enervated the powers of his mind. Extending himself on the brink of the stream, he turned his eyes towards the blue summits of the mountain, and exclaimed,—“What concealest thou behind thee, pitiless rock ? what is passing in thy solitudes ? Whither is she gone ? O heaven ! perhaps she is now wandering in thy grottoes with her happy Gulchenrouz !”

In the mean time, the damps began to descend ; and the emir, solicitous for the health of the caliph, ordered the imperial litter to be brought. Vathek, absorbed in his reveries, was imperceptibly removed and conveyed back to the saloon that received him the evening before. But let us leave the caliph immersed in his new passion, and attend Nouronihar beyond the rocks where she had again joined her beloved Gulchenrouz.

This Gulchenrouz was the son of Ali Hassan, brother to the emir ; and the most delicate and lovely creature in the world. Ali Hassan, who had been absent ten years on a voyage to the unknown seas, committed, at his departure, this child, the only survivor of many, to the care and protection of his brother. Gulchenrouz could write in various characters with precision, and paint upon vellum the most elegant arabesques that fancy could devise. His sweet voice accompanied the lute in the most enchanting manner ; and when he sang the loves of Megnoun and Leilah, or some unfortunate lovers of ancient days, tears insensibly overflowed the cheeks of his auditors. The verses he composed (for, like Megnoun, he, too, was a poet,) inspired that unresisting languor, so frequently fatal to the female heart. The women all doted upon him; and, though he had passed his thirteenth year, they still detained him in the harem. His dancing was light as the gossamer waved by the zephyrs of spring; but his arms, which twined so gracefully with those of the young girls in the dance, could neither dart the lance in the chase, nor curb the steeds that pastured in his uncle's domains. The bow, however, he drew with a certain aim, and would have excelled his competitors in the race, could he have broken the ties that bound him to Nouronihar.

The two brothers had mutually engaged their children to each other; and Nouronihar loved her cousin more than her own beautiful eyes. Both had the same tastes and amusements; the same languishing looks; the same tresses; the same fair complexions; and, when Gulchenrouz appeared in the dress of his cousin, he seemed to be more feminine than even herself. If, at any time, he left the harem to visit Fakreddin, it was with all the bashfulness of a fawn, that consciously ventures from the lair of its dam: he was, however, wanton enough to mock the solemn old grey-beards, though sure to be rated without mercy in return. Whenever this happened, he would hastily plunge into the recesses of the harem; and, sobbing, take refuge in the fond arms of Nouronihar, who loved even his faults beyond the virtues of others.

It fell out this evening, that, after leaving the caliph in the meadow, she ran with Gulchenrouz over the green sward of the mountain, that sheltered the vale where Fakreddin had chosen to reside. The sun was dilated on the edge of the horizon; and the young people, whose fancies were lively and inventive, imagined they beheld, in the gorgeous clouds of the west, the domes of Shaddukian and Ambreabad, where the peris have fixed their abode. Nouronihar, sitting on the slope of the hill, supported on her knees the perfumed head of Gulchenrouz. The unexpected arrival of the caliph, and the splendour that marked his appearance, had already filled with emotion the ardent soul of Nouronihar. Her vanity irresistibly prompted her to pique the prince's attention; and this she before took good care to effect, whilst he picked up the jasmine she had thrown upon him. But when Gulchenrouz asked after the flowers he had culled for her bosom, Nouronihar was all in confusion. She hastily kissed his forehead, arose in a flutter, and walked with unequal steps on the border of the precipice. Night advanced, and the pure gold of the setting sun had yielded to a sanguine red; the glow of which, like the reflection of a burning furnace, flushed Nouronihar's animated countenance. Gulchenrouz, alarmed at the agitation of his cousin, said to her, with a supplicating accent,—“Let us begone; the sky looks portentous, the tamarisk's tremble more than common, and the raw wind chills my very heart. Come! let us be gone; 'tis a melancholy night!” Then taking hold of her hand, he drew it towards the path he besought her to go. Nouronihar unconsciously followed the attraction; for a thousand strange imaginations occupied her spirits. She passed the large round of honeysuckles, her favourite resort, without ever vouchsafing it a glance ; yet Gulchenrouz could not help snatching off a few shoots in his way, though he ran as if a wild beast were behind.

The young females, seeing them approach in such haste, and, according to custom, expecting a dance, instantly assembled in a circle and took each other by the hand ; but Gulchenrouz, coming up out of breath, fell down at once on the grass. This accident struck with consternation the whole of this frolicsome party ; whilst Nouronihar, half distracted and overcome, both by the violence of her exercise and the tumult of her thoughts, sunk feebly down at his side, cherished his cold hands in her bosom, and chafed his temples with a fragrant perfume. At length he came to himself, and wrapping up his head in the robe of his cousin, entreated that she would not return to the harem. He was afraid of being snapped at by Shaban, his tutor, a wrinkled old eunuch of a surly disposition ; for, having interrupted the wonted walk of Nouronihar, he dreaded lest the churl should take it amiss. The whole of this sprightly group, sitting round upon a mossy knoll, began to entertain themselves with various pastimes, whilst their superintendents, the eunuchs, were gravely conversing at a distance. The nurse of the emir's daughter, observing her pupil sit ruminating with her eyes on the ground, endeavoured to amuse her with diverting tales ; to which Gulchenrouz, who had already forgotten his inquietudes, listened with a breathless attention. He laughed, he clapped his hands, and passed a hundred little tricks on the whole of the company, without omitting the eunuchs, whom he provoked to run after him, in spite of their age and decrepitude.

During these occurrences, the moon arose, the wind subsided, and the evening became so serene and inviting, that a resolution was taken to sup on the spot. One of the eunuchs ran to fetch melons, whilst others were employed in showering down almonds from the branches that overhung this amiable party. Sutlememe, who excelled in dressing a salad, having filled large bowls of porcelain with eggs of small birds, curds turned with citron juice, slices of cucumber, and the inmost leaves of delicate herbs, handed it round from one to another, and gave each their shares with a large spoon of cocknos. Gulchenrouz, nestling, as usual, in the bosom of Nouronihar, pouted out his vermilion little lips against the offer of Sutlememe; and would take it only from the hand of his cousin, on whose mouth he hung, like a bee inebriated with the nectar of flowers.

In the midst of this festive scene, there appeared a light on the top of the highest mountain, which attracted the notice of every eye. This light was not less bright than the moon when at full, and might have been taken for her, had not the moon already risen. The phenomenon occasioned a general surprise, and no one could conjecture the cause. It could not be a fire, for the light was clear and bluish; nor had meteors ever been seen of that magnitude or splendour. This strange light faded for a moment, and immediately renewed its brightness. It first appeared motionless, at the foot of the rock; whence it darted in an instant, to sparkle in a thicket of palm-trees: from thence it glided along the torrent; and at last fixed in a glen that was narrow and dark. The moment it had taken its direction, Gulchenrouz, whose heart always trembled at anything sudden or rare, drew Nouronihar by the robe, and anxiously requested her to return to the harem. The women were importunate in seconding the entreaty ; but the curiosity of the emir's daughter prevailed. She not only refused to go back, but resolved, at all hazards, to pursue the appearance.

Whilst they were debating what was best to be done, the light shot forth so dazzling a blaze that they all fled away shrieking. Nouronihar followed them a few steps ; but, coming to the turn of a little by-path, stopped, and went back alone. As she ran with an alertness peculiar to herself, it was not long before she came to the place where they had just been supping. The globe of fire now appeared stationary in the glen, and burned in majestic stillness. Nouronihar, pressing her hands upon her bosom, hesitated for some moments to advance. The solitude of her situation was new ; the silence of the night awful ; and every object inspired sensations which, till then, she never had felt. The affright of Gulchenrouz recurred to her mind, and she a thousand times turned to go back ; but this luminous appearance was always before her. Urged on by an irresistible impulse, she continued to approach it, in defiance of every obstacle that opposed her progress.

At length she arrived at the opening of the glen ; but, instead of coming up to the light, she found herself surrounded by darkness ; excepting that, at a considerable distance, a faint spark glimmered by fits. She stopped a second time : the sound of waterfalls mingling their murmurs, the hollow rustlings among the palm-branches, and the funereal screams of the birds from their rifted trunks, all conspired to fill her soul with terror. She imagined every moment that she trod on some venomous reptile. All the stories of malignant dives and dismal ghouls thronged into her memory; but her curiosity was, notwithstanding, more predominant than her fears. She therefore firmly entered a winding track that led towards the spark; but, being a stranger to the path, she had not gone far, till she began to repent of her rashness. "Alas!" said she, "that I were but in those secure and illuminated apartments, where my evenings glided on with Gulchenrouz! Dear child! how would thy heart flutter with terror, wert thou wandering in these wild solitudes, like me!" Thus speaking, she advanced, and coming up to steps hewn in the rock, ascended them undismayed. The light, which was now gradually enlarging, appeared above her on the summit of the mountain, and as if proceeding from a cavern. At length she distinguished a plaintive and melodious union of voices, that resembled the dirges which are sung over tombs. A sound like that which arises from the filling of baths struck her ear at the same time. She continued ascending, and discovered large wax torches in full blaze, planted here and there in the fissures of the rock. This appearance filled her with fear, whilst the subtle and potent odour which the torches exhaled, caused her to sink almost lifeless at the entrance of the grot.

Casting her eyes within, in this kind of trance, she beheld a large cistern of gold, filled with a water, the vapour of which distilled on her face a dew of the essence of roses. A soft symphony resounded through the grot. On the sides of the cistern she noticed appendages of royalty, diadems and feathers of the heron, all sparkling with carbuncles. Whilst her attention was fixed on this display of magnificence, the music ceased, and a voice instantly demanded,—“For what monarch are these torches kindled, this bath prepared, and these habiliments, which belong not only to the sovereigns of the earth, but even to the talismanic powers?” To which a second voice answered, “They are for the charming daughter of the Emir Fakreddin.”—“What,” replied the first, “for that trifler, who consumes her time with a giddy child, immersed in softness, and who, at best, can make but a pitiful husband?”—“And can she,” rejoined the other voice, “be amused with such empty toys, whilst the caliph, the sovereign of the world, he who is destined to enjoy the treasures of the pre-adamite sultans, a prince six feet high, and whose eyes pervade the inmost soul of a female, is inflamed with love for her? No! she will be wise enough to answer that passion alone that can aggrandise her glory. No doubt she will, and despise the puppet of her fancy. Then all the riches this place contains, as well as the carbuncle of Giamschid, shall be hers.”—“You judge right,” returned the first voice; “and I haste to Istakhar to prepare the palace of subterranean fire for the reception of the bridal pair.”

The voices ceased; the torches were extinguished; the most entire darkness succeeded; and Nouronihar, recovering, with a start, found herself reclined on a sofa in the harem of her father. She clapped her hands, and immediately came together Gulchenrouz and her women; who, in despair at having lost her, had despatched eunuchs to seek her in every direction.

Shaban appeared with the rest, and began to reprimand her, with an air of consequence:—"Little impertinent," said he, "have you false keys, or are you beloved of some genius that hath given you a picklock? I will try the extent of your power: come to the dark chamber, and expect not the company of Gulchenrouz: be expeditious! I will shut you up, and turn the key twice upon you!" At these menaces, Nouronihar indignantly raised her head, opened on Shaban her black eyes, which, since the important dialogue of the enchanted grot, were considerably enlarged, and said,—“Go, speak thus to slaves; but learn to reverence her who is born to give laws, and subject all to her power.”

Proceeding in the same style, she was interrupted by a sudden exclamation of “The caliph! the caliph!” All the curtains were thrown open, the slaves prostrated themselves in double rows, and poor little Gulchenrouz went to hide beneath the couch of a sofa. At first appeared a file of black eunuchs trailing after them long trains of muslin embroidered with gold, and holding in their hands censers, which dispensed as they passed the grateful perfume of the wood of aloes. Next marched Bababalouk with a solemn strut, and tossing his head, as not over-pleased at the visit. Vathek came close after, superbly robed: his gait was unembarrassed and noble; and his presence would have engaged admiration, though he had not been the sovereign of the world. He approached Nouronihar with a throbbing heart, and seemed enraptured at the full effulgence of her radiant eyes, of which he had before caught but a few glimpses: but she instantly depressed them, and her confusion augmented her beauty.

Bababalouk, who was a thorough adept in coincidences of this nature, and knew that the worst game should be played with the best face, immediately made a signal for all to retire ; and no sooner did he perceive beneath the sofa the little one's feet, than he drew him forth without ceremony, set him upon his shoulders, and lavished on him, as he went off, a thousand unwelcome caresses. Gulchenrouz cried out, and resisted till his cheeks became the colour of the blossom of pomegranates, and his tearful eyes sparkled with indignation. He cast a significant glance at Nouronihar, which the caliph noticing, asked, "Is that, then, your Gulchenrouz?"—"Sovereign of the world !" answered she, "spare my cousin, whose innocence and gentleness deserve not your anger !"—"Take comfort," said Vathek, with a smile : "he is in good hands. Bababalouk is fond of children, and never goes without sweetmeats and comfits." The daughter of Fakreddin was abashed, and suffered Gulchenrouz to be borne away without adding a word. The tumult of her bosom betrayed her confusion, and Vathek, becoming still more impassioned, gave a loose to his frenzy ; which had only not subdued the last faint strugglings of reluctance, when the emir, suddenly bursting in, threw his face upon the ground at the feet of the caliph, and said,—"Commander of the faithful ! abase not yourself to the meanness of your slave."—"No, emir," replied Vathek, "I raise her to an equality with myself: I declare her my wife ; and the glory of your race shall extend q from one generation to another."—"Alas ! my lord," said Fakreddin, as he plucked forth a few grey hairs of his beard, "cut short the days of your faithful servant, rather than force him to depart from his word. Nouronihar is solemnly promised to Gulchenrouz, the son of my brother Ali Hassan : they are united, also, in heart ; their faith is mutually plighted ; and affiances so sacred cannot be broken."—"What, then," replied the caliph, bluntly ; "would you surrender this divine beauty to a husband more womanish than herself ; and can you imagine that I will suffer her charms to decay in hands so inefficient and nerveless ? No ! she is destined to live out her life within my embraces : such is my will ; retire, and disturb not the night I devote to the worship of her charms."

Æ The irritated emir drew forth his sabre, presented it to Vathek, and stretching out his neck, said, in a firm tone of voice, "Strike your unhappy host, my lord : he has lived long enough, since he hath seen the Prophet's vicegerent violate the rights of hospitality." At his uttering these words, Nouronihar, unable to support any longer the conflict of her passions, sunk down in a swoon. Vathek, both terrified for her life and furious at an opposition to his will, bade Fakreddin assist his daughter, and withdrew, darting his terrible look at the unfortunate emir, who suddenly fell backward, bathed in a sweat as cold as the damp of death.

• Gulchenrouz, who had escaped from the hands of Bababalouk, and was, at that instant, returned, called out for help, as loudly as he could, not having strength to afford it himself. Pale and panting, the poor child attempted to revive Nouronihar by caresses ; and it happened that the thrilling warmth of his lips , restored her to life. Fakreddin beginning also to recover from the look of the caliph, with difficulty tottered to a seat ; and, after warily casting round his eye, to see if this dangerous prince were gone, sent for Shaban and Sutlememe, and said to them apart,— “ My friends ! violent evils require violent remedies ; the caliph has brought desolation and horror into my family ; and how shall we resist his power ? Another of his looks will send me to the grave. Fetch, then, that narcotic powder which a dervish brought me from Aracan. A dose of it, the effect of which will continue three days, must be administered to each of these children. The caliph will believe them to be dead ; for they will have all the appearance of death. We shall go, as if to inter them in the cave of Meimouné, ^{si} at the entrance of the great desert of sand, and near the bower of my dwarfs. When all the spectators shall be withdrawn, you, Shaban, and four select eunuchs, shall convey them to the lake, where provision shall be ready to support them a month : for, one day allotted to the surprise this event will occasion ; five, to the tears ; a fortnight, to reflection ; and the rest, to prepare for renewing his progress, will, according to my calculation, fill up the whole time that Vathek will tarry ; and I shall, then, be freed from his intrusion.”

“ Your plan is good,” said Sutlememe, “ if it can but be effected. I have remarked, that Nouronihar is well able to support the glances of the caliph, and that he is far from being sparing of them to her ; be assured, therefore, that, notwithstanding her fondness for Gulchenrouz, she will never remain quiet, while she knows him to be here. Let us persuade her, that both herself and Gulchenrouz are really dead; and that they were conveyed to those rocks, for a limited season, to expiate the little faults, of which their love was the cause. We will add, that we killed ourselves in despair; and that your dwarfs, whom they never yet saw, will preach to them delectable sermons. I will engage that everything shall succeed to the bent of your wishes."—"Be it so!" said Fakreddin: "I approve your proposal: let us lose not a moment to give it effect."

They hastened to seek for the powder, which, being mixed in a sherbet, was immediately administered to Gulchenrouz and Nouronihar. Within the space of an hour, both were seized with violent palpitations; and a general numbness gradually ensued. They arose from the floor where they had remained ever since the caliph's departure; and, ascending to the sofa, reclined themselves upon it, clasped in each other's embraces. "Cherish me, my dear Nouronihar!" said Gulchenrouz: "put thy hand upon my heart; it feels as if it were frozen. Alas! thou art as cold as myself! hath the caliph murdered us both, with his terrible look?"—"I am dying!" cried she, in a faltering voice: "press me closer; I am ready to expire!"—"Let us die, then, together," answered the little Gulchenrouz; whilst his breast laboured with a convulsive sigh: "let me, at least, breathe forth my soul on thy lips!" They spoke no more and became as dead.

Immediately, the most piercing cries were heard through the harem; whilst Shaban and Sutlememe personated, with great adroitness, the parts of persons in despair. The emir, who was sufficiently mortified, to be forced into such untoward expedients, and had now, for the first time, made a trial of his powder, was under no necessity of counterfeiting grief. The slaves, who had flocked together from all quarters, stood motionless, at the spectacle before them. All lights were extinguished, save two lamps, which shed a wan glimmering over the faces of these lovely flowers, that seemed to be faded in the spring-time of life. Funeral vestments were prepared ; their bodies were washed with rose-water ; their beautiful tresses were braided and incensed ; and they were wrapped in simars whiter than alabaster.

At the moment that their attendants were placing two wreaths of their favourite jasmines on their brows, the caliph, who had just heard of the tragical catastrophe, arrived. He looked not less pale and haggard than the ghouls that wander at night among the graves. Forgetful of himself and every one else, he broke through the midst of the slaves ; fell prostrate at the foot of the sofa ; beat his bosom ; called himself "atrocious murderer !" and invoked upon his head a thousand imprecations. With a trembling hand he raised the veil that covered the countenance of Nouronihar, and uttering a loud shriek, fell lifeless on the floor. The chief of the eunuchs dragged him off, with horrible grimaces, and repeated as he went, "Ay, I foresaw she would play you some ungracious turn !"

No sooner was the caliph gone, than the emir commanded biers to be brought, and forbade that any one should enter the harem. Every window was fastened ; all instruments of music were broken ; and the imans began to recite their prayers. Towards the close of this melancholy day, Vathek sobbed in silence ; for they had been forced to compose with anodynes his convulsions of rage and desperation.

At the dawn of the succeeding morning, the wide folding doors of the palace were set open, and the funeral procession moved forward for the mountain. The wailful cries of "La Ilah illa Alla !" reached the caliph, who was eager to cicatrise himself, and attend the ceremonial ; nor could he have been dissuaded, had not his excessive weakness disabled him from walking. At the few first steps he fell on the ground, and his people were obliged to lay him on a bed, where he remained many days in such a state of insensibility as excited compassion in the emir himself.

When the procession was arrived at the grot of Meimouné, Shaban and Sutlememe dismissed the whole of the train, excepting the four confidential eunuchs who were appointed to remain. After resting some moments near the biers, which had been left in the open air, they caused them to be carried to the brink of a small lake, whose banks were overgrown with a hoary moss. This was the great resort of herons and storks, which preyed continually on little blue fishes. The dwarfs, instructed by the emir, soon repaired thither ; and, with the help of the eunuchs, began to construct cabins of rushes and reeds, a work in which they had admirable skill. A magazine also was contrived for provisions, with a small oratory for themselves, and a pyramid of wood, neatly piled, to furnish the necessary fuel : for the air was bleak in the hollows of the mountains.

At evening two fires were kindled on the brink of the lake and the two lovely bodies, taken from their biers, were carefully deposited upon a bed of dried leaves, within the same cabin. The dwarfs began to recite the Koran, with their clear shrill voices; and Shaban and Sutlememe stood at some distance, anxiously waiting the effects of the powder. At length Nouronihar and Gulchenrouz faintly stretched out their arms; and, gradually opening their eyes, began to survey, with looks of increasing amazement, every object around them. They even attempted to rise, but, for want of strength, fell back again. Sutlememe, on this, administered a cordial, which the emir had taken care to provide.

Gulchenrouz, thoroughly aroused, sneezed out aloud; and, raising himself with an effort that expressed his surprise, left the cabin and inhaled the fresh air with the greatest avidity. "Yes," said he, "I breathe again! again do I exist! I hear sounds! I behold a firmament, spangled over with stars!"—Nouronihar, catching these beloved accents, extricated herself from the leaves and ran to clasp Gulchenrouz to her bosom. The first objects she remarked were their long simars, their garlands of flowers, and their naked feet: she hid her face in her hands to reflect. The vision of the enchanted bath, the despair of her father, and, more vividly than both, the majestic figure of Vathek, recurred to her memory. She recollected, also, that herself and Gulchenrouz had been sick and dying; but all these images bewildered her mind. Not knowing where she was, she turned her eyes on all sides, as if to recognise the surrounding scene. This singular lake, those flames reflected from its glassy surface, the pale hues of its banks, the romantic cabins, the bul-rushes, that sadly waved their drooping heads, the storks, whose melancholy cries blended with the shrill voices of the dwarfs,—everything conspired to persuade her that the angel of death had opened the portal of some other world.

Gulchenrouz, on his part, lost in wonder, clung to the neck of his cousin. He believed himself in the region of phantoms ; and was terrified at the silence she preserved. At length addressing her ; “Speak,” said he ; “where are we ? Do you not see those spectres that are stirring the burning coals ? Are they Monker and Nakir, who are come to throw us into them ? Does the fatal bridge cross this lake, whose solemn stillness, perhaps, conceals from us an abyss, in which, for whole ages, we shall be doomed incessantly to sink ?”

“No, my children,” said Sutlememe, going towards them ; “take comfort ! the exterminating angel, who conducted our souls hither after yours, hath assured us, that the chastisement of your indolent and voluptuous life shall be restricted to a certain series of years, which you must pass in this dreary abode ; where the sun is scarcely visible, and where the soil yields neither fruits nor flowers. These,” continued she, pointing to the dwarfs, “will provide for our wants ; for souls so mundane as ours retain too strong a tincture of their earthly extraction. Instead of meats, your food will be nothing but rice ; and your bread shall be moistened in the fogs that brood over the surface of the lake.”

At this desolating prospect, the poor children burst into tears, and prostrated themselves before the dwarfs ; who perfectly supported their characters, and delivered an excellent discourse, of a customary length, upon the sacred camel ; which, after a thousand years, was to convey them to the paradise of the faithful.

The sermon being ended, and ablutions performed, they praised Alla and the Prophet ; supped very indifferently ; and retired to their withered leaves. Nouronihar and her little cousin consoled themselves on finding that the dead might lie in one cabin. Having slept well before, the remainder of the night was spent in conversation on what had befallen them ; and both, from a dread of apparitions, betook themselves for protection to one another's arms.

In the morning, which was lowering and rainy, the dwarfs mounted high poles, like minarets, and called them to prayers. The whole congregation, which consisted of Sutlememe, Shaban, the four eunuchs, and a few storks that were tired of fishing, was already assembled. The two children came forth from their cabin with a slow and dejected pace. As their minds were in a tender and melancholy mood, their devotions were performed with fervour. No sooner were they finished than Gulchenrouz demanded of Sutlememe, and the rest, "how they happened to die so opportunely for his cousin and himself?"—"We killed ourselves," returned Sutlememe, "in despair at your death." On this, Nouronihar, who, notwithstanding what had passed, had not yet forgotten her vision, said,—"And the caliph ! is he also dead of his grief ? and will he likewise come hither ?" The dwarfs, who were prepared with an answer, most demurely replied, "Vathek is damned beyond all redemption!"—"I readily believe so," said Gulchenrouz ; "and am glad, from my heart, to hear it ; for I am convinced it was his horrible look that sent us hither, to listen to sermons, and mess upon rice." One week passed away, on the side of the lake, unmarked by any variety : Nouronihar ruminating on the grandeur of which death had deprived her ; and Gulchenrouz applying to prayers and basket-making with the dwarfs, who infinitely pleased him.

Whilst this scene of innocence was exhibiting in the mountains, the caliph presented himself to the emir in a new light. The instant he recovered the use of his senses, with a voice that made Bababalouk quake, he thundered out,—“ Perfidious Giaour ! I renounce thee for ever ! It is thou who hast slain my beloved Nouronihar ! and I supplicate the pardon of Mahomet ; who would have preserved her to me had I been more wise. Let water be brought to perform my ablutions, and let the pious Fakreddin be called to offer up his prayers with mine, and reconcile me to him. Afterwards, we will go together and visit the sepulchre of the unfortunate Nouronihar. I am resolved to become a hermit, and consume the residue of my days on this mountain, in hope of expiating my crimes.”—“ And what do you intend to live upon there ? ” inquired Bababalouk.—“ I hardly know,” replied Vathek ; “ but I will tell you when I feel hungry—which, I believe, will not soon be the case.”

The arrival of Fakreddin put a stop to this conversation. As soon as Vathek saw him, he threw his arms around his neck, bedewed his face with a torrent of tears, and uttered things so affecting, so pious, that the emir, crying for joy, congratulated himself, in his heart, upon having performed so admirable and unexpected a conversion. As for the pilgrimage to the mountain, Fakreddin had his reasons not to oppose it ; therefore, each ascending his own litter, they started.

Notwithstanding the vigilance with which his attendants watched the caliph, they could not prevent his harrowing his cheeks with a few scratches, when on the place where he was told Nouronihar had been buried ; they were even obliged to drag him away, by force of hands, from the melancholy spot. However, he swore, with a solemn oath, that he would return thither every day. This resolution did not exactly please the emir—yet he flattered himself that the caliph might not proceed farther, and would merely perform his devotions in the cavern of Mcimouné. Besides, the lake was so completely concealed within the solitary bosom of those tremendous rocks, that he thought it utterly impossible any one could ever find it. This security of Fakreddin was also considerably strengthened by the conduct of Vathek, who performed his vow most scrupulously, and returned daily from the hill so devout, and so contrite, that all the greybeards were in a state of ecstasy on account of it.

Nouronihar was not altogether so content ; for though she felt a fondness for Gulchenrouz, who, to augment the attachment, had been left at full liberty with her, yet she still regarded him as but a bauble that bore no competition with the carbuncle of Giamschid. At times, she indulged doubts on the mode of her being ; and scarcely could believe that the dead had all the wants and the whims of the living. To gain satisfaction, however, on so perplexing a topic, one morning, whilst all were asleep, she arose with a breathless caution from the side of Gulchenrouz ; and, after having given him a soft kiss, ⁴ began to follow the windings of the lake, till it terminated with a rock, the top of which was accessible, though lofty. This she climbed with considerable toil ; and having reached the summit, set forward in a run, like a doe before the hunter. Though she skipped with the alertness of an antelope, yet, at intervals, she was forced to desist, and rest beneath the tamarisks to recover her breath. Whilst she, thus reclined, was occupied with her little reflections on the apprehension that she had some knowledge of the place, Vathek, who, finding himself that morning but ill at ease, had gone forth before the dawn, presented himself, on a sudden, to her view. Motionless with surprise, he durst not approach the figure before him, trembling and pale, but yet lovely to behold. At length, Nouronihar, with a mixture of pleasure and affliction, raising her fine eyes to him, said, " My lord ! are you then come hither to eat rice and hear sermons with me ?"—" Beloved phantom !" cried Vathek, " thou dost speak ; thou hast the same graceful form ; the same radiant features ; art thou palpable likewise ?" and, eagerly embracing her, added, " Here are limbs and a bosom animated with a gentle warmth !—What can such a prodigy mean ?"

Nouronihar, with indifference, answered,—" You know, my lord, that I died on the very night you honoured me with your visit. My cousin maintains it was from one of your glances ; but I cannot believe him ; for to me they seem not so dreadful. Gulchenrouz died with me, and we were both brought into a region of desolation, where we are fed with a wretched diet. If you be dead also, and are come hither to join us, I pity your lot; for you will be stunned with the clang of the dwarfs and the storks. Besides, it is mortifying in the extreme, that you, as well as myself, should have lost the treasures of the subterranean palace."

At the mention of the subterranean palace, the caliph suspended his caresses, (which, indeed, had proceeded pretty far), to seek from Nouronihar an explanation of her meaning. She then recapitulated her vision; what immediately followed; and the history of her pretended death; adding, also, a description of the place of expiation, from whence she had fled; and all in a manner that would have extorted his laughter, had not the thoughts of Vathek been too deeply engaged. No sooner, however, had she ended, than he again clasped her to his bosom, and said, "Light of my eyes, the mystery is unravelled; we both are alive! Your father is a cheat, who, for the sake of dividing us, hath deluded us both; and the Giaour, whose design, as far as I can discover, is, that we shall proceed together, seems scarce a whit better. It shall be some time at least before he finds us in his palace of fire. Your lovely little person, in my estimation, is far more precious than all the treasures of the pre-adamite sultans; and I wish to possess it at pleasure, and in open day, for many a moon, before I go to burrow under ground, like a mole. Forget this little trifle, Gulchenrouz; and——" "Ah, my lord!" interposed Nouronihar, "let me entreat that you do him no evil."—"No, no!" replied Vathek; "I have already bid you forbear to alarm yourself for him. He has been brought up too much on milk and sugar to stimulate my jealousy. We will leave him with the dwarfs : who, by the by, are my old acquaintances : their company will suit him far better than yours. As to other matters, I will return no more to your father's. I want not to have my ears dinned by him and his dotards with the violation of the rights of hospitality, as if it were less an honour for you to espouse the sovereign of the world than a girl dressed up like a boy."

Nouronihar could find nothing to oppose in a discourse so eloquent. She only wished the amorous monarch had discovered more ardour for the carbuncle of Giamschid : but flattered herself it would gradually increase ; and, therefore, yielded to his will, with the most bewitching submission.

When the caliph judged it proper, he called for Bababalouk, who was asleep in the cave of Meimouné, and dreaming that the phantom of Nouronihar, having mounted him once more on her swing, had just given him such a jerk, that he, one moment, soared above the mountains, and the next, sunk into the abyss. Starting from his sleep at the sound of his master, he ran, gasping for breath, and had nearly fallen backward at the sight, as he believed, of the spectre by whom he had so lately been haunted in his dream. " Ah, my lord !" cried he, recoiling ten steps, and covering his eyes with both hands, " do you then perform the office of a goul ? have you dug up the dead ? Yet hope not to make her your prey ; for, after all she hath caused me to suffer, she is wicked enough to prey even upon you."

" Cease to play the fool," said Vathek, " and thou shalt soon be convinced that it is Nouronihar herself, alive and well, whom I clasp to my breast. Go and pitch my tents in the neighbouring valley. There will I fix my abode, with this beautiful tulip, whose colours I soon shall restore. There exert thy best endeavours to procure whatever can augment the enjoyments of life, till I shall disclose to thee more of my will."

The news of so unlucky an event soon reached the ears of the emir, who abandoned himself to grief and despair, and began, as did his old greybeards, to begrime his visage with ashes. A total supineness ensued; travellers were no longer entertained; no more plasters were spread; and, instead of the charitable activity that had distinguished this asylum, the whole of its inhabitants exhibited only faces of half a cubit long, and uttered groans that accorded with their folorn situation.

Though Fakreddin bewailed his daughter, as lost to him for ever, yet Gulchenrouz was not forgotten. He despatched immediate instructions to Sutlememe, Shaban, and the dwarfs, enjoining them not to undeceive the child in respect to his state; but, under some pretence, to convey him far from the lofty rock at the extremity of the lake, to a place which he should appoint as safer from danger, for he suspected that Vathek intended him evil.

Gulchenrouz, in the mean while, was filled with amazement at not finding his cousin; nor were the dwarfs less surprised: but Sutlememe, who had more penetration, immediately guessed what had happened. Gulchenrouz was amused with the delusive hope of once more embracing Nouronihar, in the interior recesses of the mountains, where the ground, strewed over with orange blossoms and jasmines, offered beds much

^a more inviting than the withered leaves in their cabin ; where they might accompany with their voices the sounds of their lutes, and chase butterflies. Sutlememe was far gone in this sort of description, when one of the four eunuchs beckoned her aside, to apprise her of the arrival of a messenger from their fraternity, who had explained the secret of the flight of Nouronihar, and brought the commands of the emir. A council with Shaban and the dwarfs was immediately held. Their baggage being stowed in consequence of it, they embarked in a shallop, and quietly sailed with the little one, who acquiesced in all their proposals. Their voyage proceeded in the same manner, till they came to the place where the lake sinks beneath the hollow of a rock : but as soon as the bark had ^a entered it, and Gulchenrouz found himself surrounded with darkness, he was seized with a dreadful consternation, and incessantly uttered the most piercing outcries ; for he now was persuaded he should actually be damned for having taken too many little freedoms in his lifetime with his cousin.

But let us return to the caliph, and her who ruled over his heart. Bababalouk had pitched the tents, and closed up the extremities of the valley with magnificent screens of India cloth, which were guarded by Ethiopian slaves with their drawn sabres. To preserve the verdure of this beautiful enclosure in ^b its natural freshness, white eunuchs went continually round it with gilt water vessels. The waving of fans was heard near the imperial pavilion ; where, by the voluptuous light that glowed through the muslins, the caliph enjoyed, at full view, all the attractions of Nouronihar. Inebriated with delight, he was all ear to her charming voice, which accompanied the lute ; while she was not less captivated with his descriptions of Samarah, and the tower full of wonders ; but especially with his relation of the adventure of the ball, and the chasm of the Giaour, with its ebony portal.

In this manner they conversed the whole day, and at night they bathed together in a basin of black marble, which admirably set off the fairness of Nouronihar. Bababalouk, whose good graces this beauty had regained, spared no attention, that their repast might be served up with the minutest exactness : some exquisite rarity was ever placed before them ; and he sent even to Schiraz for that fragrant and delicious wine which had been hoarded up in bottles prior to the birth of Mahomet. He had excavated little ovens in the rock to bake the nice manchets which were prepared by the hands of Nouronihar, from whence they had derived a flavour so grateful to Vathek, that he regarded the ragouts of his other wives as entirely mawkish : whilst they would have died of chagrin at the emir's, at finding themselves so neglected, if Fakreddin, notwithstanding his resentment, had not taken pity upon them.

The Sultana Dilara, who till then had been the favourite, took this dereliction of the caliph to heart with a vehemence natural to her character ; for, during her continuance in favour, she had imbibed from Vathek many of his extravagant fancies, and was fired with impatience to behold the superb tombs of Istakhar, and the palace of forty columns ; besides, having been brought up amongst the magi, she had fondly cherished the idea of the caliph's devoting himself to the worship of fire ; thus his voluptuous and desultory life with her rival was to her a double source of affliction. The transient piety of Vathek had occasioned her some serious alarms ; but the present was an evil of far greater magnitude. She resolved, therefore, without hesitation, to write to Carathis, and acquaint her that all things went ill ; that they had eaten, slept, and revelled at an old emir's, whose sanctity was very formidable ; and that, after all, the prospect of possessing the treasures of the pre-adamite sultans was no less remote than before. This letter was intrusted to the care of two woodmen, who were at work in one of the great forests of the mountains ; and who, being acquainted with the shortest cuts, arrived in ten days at Samarah.

The Princess Carathis was engaged at chess with Morakanabad, when the arrival of these woodfellers was announced. She, after some weeks of Vathek's absence, had forsaken the upper regions of her tower, because everything appeared in confusion among the stars, which she consulted relative to the fate of her son. In vain did she renew her fumigations, and extend herself on the roof, to obtain mystic visions ; nothing more could she see in her dreams, than pieces of brocade, nosegays of flowers, and other unmeaning gewgaws. These disappointments had thrown her into a state of dejection, which no drug in her power was sufficient to remove. Her only resource was in Morakanabad, who was a good man, and endowed with a decent share of confidence ; yet whilst in her company he never thought himself on roses.

No person knew aught of Vathek, and, of course, a thousand ridiculous stories were propagated at his expense. The eagerness of Carathis may be easily guessed at receiving the letter, as well as her rage at reading the dissolute conduct of her son. "Is it so?" said she: "either I will perish, or Vathek shall enter the palace of fire. Let me expire in flames, provided he may reign on the throne of Soliman!" Having said this, and whirled herself round in a magical manner, which struck Morakanabad with such terror as caused him to recoil, she ordered her great camel Alboufaki to be brought, and the hideous Nerkes, with the unrelenting Cafour, to attend. "I require no other retinue," said she to Morakanabad; "I am going on affairs of emergency; a truce, therefore, to parade! Take you care of the people: fleece them well in my absence; for we shall expend large sums, and one knows not what may betide."

The night was uncommonly dark, and a pestilential blast blew from the plain of Catoul, that would have deterred any other traveller, however urgent the call; but Carathis enjoyed most whatever filled others with dread. Nerkes concurred in opinion with her; and Cafour had a particular predilection for a pestilence. In the morning this accomplished caravan, with the woodfellers, who directed their route, halted on the edge of an extensive marsh, from whence so noxious a vapour arose as would have destroyed any animal but Alboufaki, who naturally inhaled these malignant fogs with delight. The peasants entreated their convoy not to sleep in this place. "To sleep," cried Carathis, "what an excellent thought! I never sleep, but for visions; and, as to my attendants, their occupations are too many to close the only eye they have." The poor peasants, who were not overpleased with their party, remained open-mouthed with surprise.

Carathis alighted, as well as her negresses; and, severally stripping off their outer garments, they all ran to cull, from those spots where the sun shone fiercest, the venomous plants that grew on the marsh. This provision was made for the family of the emir, and whoever might retard the expedition to Istakhar. The woodmen were overcome with fear when they beheld these three horrible phantoms run; and, not much relishing the company of Alboufaki, stood aghast at the command of Carathis to set forward, notwithstanding it was noon, and the heat fierce enough to calcine even rocks. In spite, however, of every remonstrance, they were forced implicitly to submit.

Alboufaki, who delighted in solitude, constantly snorted whenever he perceived himself near a habitation; and Carathis, who was apt to spoil him with indulgence, as constantly turned him aside: so that the peasants were precluded from procuring subsistence; for the milch goats and ewes, which Providence had sent towards the district they traversed to refresh travellers with their milk, all fled at the sight of the hideous animal and his strange riders. As to Carathis, she needed no common aliment: for her invention had previously furnished her with an opiate to stay her stomach, some of which she imparted to her mutes.

At dusk, Alboufaki, making a sudden stop, stamped with his foot; which, to Carathis, who knew his ways, was a certain indication that she was near the confines of some cemetery. The moon shed a bright light on the spot, which served to discover a long wall with a large door in it, standing ajar; and so high that Alboufaki might easily enter. The miserable guides, who perceived their end approaching, humbly implored Carathis, as she had now so good an opportunity, to inter them, and immediately gave up the ghost. Nerkes and Cafour, whose wit was of a style peculiar to themselves, were by no means parsimonious of it on the folly of these poor people; nor could anything have been found more suited to their taste than the site of the burying-ground, and the sepulchres which its precincts contained. There were at least two thousand of them on the declivity of a hill. Carathis was too eager to execute her plan to stop at the view, charming as it appeared in her eyes. Pondering the advantages that might accrue from her present situation, she said to herself, "So beautiful a cemetery must be haunted by ghouls! they never want for intelligence: having heedlessly suffered my stupid guides to expire, I will apply for directions to them; and, as an inducement, will invite them to regale on these fresh corpses." After this wise soliloquy, she beckoned to Nerkes and Cafour, and made signs with her fingers, as much as to say, "Go; knock against the sides of the tombs, and strike up your delightful warblings."

The negresses, full of joy at the behests of their mistress, and promising themselves much pleasure from the society of the ghouls, went with an air of conquest, and began their knockings at the tombs. As their strokes were repeated, a hollow noise was made in the earth; the surface hove up into heaps; and the ghouls, on all sides, protruded their noses to inhale the effluvia which the carcasses of the woodmen began to emit. They assembled before a sarcophagus of white marble, where Carathis was seated between the bodies of her miserable guides. The princess received her visitants with distinguished politeness ; and, supper being ended, they talked of business. Carathis soon learned from them everything she wanted to discover ; and, without loss of time, prepared to set forward on her journey. Her negresses, who were forming tender connections with the ghouls, importuned her, with all their fingers, to wait at least till the dawn. But Carathis, being chastity in the abstract, and an implacable enemy to love intrigues and sloth, at once rejected their prayer, mounted Alboufaki, and commanded them to take their seats instantly. Four days and four nights she continued her route without interruption. On the fifth, she traversed craggy mountains and half-burnt forests, and arrived on the sixth before the beautiful screens which concealed from all eyes the voluptuous wanderings of her son.

It was daybreak, and the guards were snoring on their posts in careless security, when the rough trot of Alboufaki awoke them in consternation. Imagining that a group of spectres, ascended from the abyss, was approaching, they all, without ceremony, took to their heels. Vathek was, at that instant, with Nouronihar in the bath, hearing tales, and laughing at Bababalouk, who related them ; but no sooner did the outcry of his guards reach him, than he flounced from the water like a carp, and as soon threw himself back at the sight of Carathis, who, advancing with her negresses upon Alboufaki, broke through the muslin awnings and veils of the pavilion. At this sudden apparition, Nouronihar (for she was not at all times free from remorse) fancied that the moment of celestial vengeance was come, and clung about the caliph in amorous despondence.

Carathis, still seated on her camel, foamed with indignation at the spectacle which obtruded itself on her chaste view. She thundered forth without check or mercy, "Thou double-headed and four-legged monster! what means all this winding and writhing? Art thou not ashamed to be seen grasping this limber sapling, in preference to the sceptre of the pre-adamite sultans? Is it then for this paltry doxy that thou hast violated the conditions in the parchment of our Giaour? Is it on her thou hast lavished thy precious moments? Is this the fruit of the knowledge I have taught thee? Is this the end of thy journey? Tear thyself from the arms of this little simpleton; drown her in the water before me, and instantly follow my guidance."

In the first ebullition of his fury, Vathek had resolved to rip open the body of Alboufaki, and to stuff it with those of the negresses and of Carathis herself; but the remembrance of the Giaour, the palace of Istakhar, the sabres, and the talismans, flashing before his imagination with the simultaneousness of lightning, he became more moderate, and said to his mother, in a civil, but decisive tone, "Dread lady, you shall be obeyed; but I will not drown Nouronihar. She is sweeter to me than a Myrabolan comfit; and is enamoured of carbuncles, especially that of Giamschid, which hath also been promised to be conferred upon her: she, therefore, shall go along with us; for I intend to repose with her upon the sofas of Soliman: I can sleep no more without her."—"Be it so," replied Carathis, alighting; and, at the same time, committing Alboufaki to the charge of her black women.

Nouronihar, who had not yet quitted her hold, began to take courage; and said, with an accent of fondness to the caliph, "Dear sovereign of my soul! I will follow thee, if it be thy will, beyond the Kaf, in the land of the afrits. I will not hesitate to climb, for thee, the nest of the Simurgh; who, this lady excepted, is the most awful of created beings."—"We have here, then," subjoined Carathis, "a girl both of courage and science!" Nouronihar had certainly both; but, notwithstanding all her firmness, she could not help casting back a thought of regret upon the graces of her little Gulchenrouz, and the days of tender endearments she had participated with him. She even dropped a few tears, which the caliph observed, and inadvertently breathed out with a sigh, "Alas! my gentle cousin, what will become of thee?" Vathek, at this apostrophe, knitted up his brows, and Carathis inquired what it could mean. "She is preposterously sighing after a stripling with languishing eyes and soft hair, who loves her," said the caliph.—"Where is he?" asked Carathis. "I must be acquainted with this pretty child; for," added she, lowering her voice, "I design, before I depart, to regain the favour of the Giaour. There is nothing so delicious, in his estimation as the heart of a delicate boy palpitating with the first tumults of love."

Vathek, as he came from the bath, commanded Dababalouk to collect the women, and other moveables of his harem, embody his troops, and hold himself in readiness to march within three days; whilst Carathis retired alone to a tent, wh

BVCL

15432

843.7
B388V

with encouraging visions : but at length waking, she found at her feet Nerkes and Cafour, who informed her, by their signs, that having led Alboufaki to the borders of a lake, to browse on some grey moss that looked tolerably venomous, they had discovered certain blue fishes, of the same kind with those in the reservoir on the top of the tower. "Ah ! ha !" said she, "I will go thither to them. These fish are, past doubt, of a species that, by a small operation, I can render oracular. They may tell me where this little Gulchenrouz is, whom I am bent upon sacrificing." Having thus spoken, she immediately set out with her swarthy retinue.

It being but seldom that time is lost, in the accomplishment of a wicked enterprise, Carathis and her negresses soon arrived at the lake ; where, after burning the magical drugs with which they were always provided, they stripped themselves naked, and waded to their chins ; Nerkes and Cafour waving torches around them, and Carathis pronouncing her barbarous incantations. The fishes, with one accord, thrust forth their heads from the water, which was violently rippled by the flutter of their fins ; and, at length, finding themselves constrained, by the potency of the charm, they opened their piteous mouths, and said, "From gills to tail, we are yours ; what seek ye to know?"—"Fishes," answered she, "I conjure you, by your glittering scales, tell me where now is Gulchenrouz?" "Beyond the rock," replied the shoal, in full chorus : "will this content you ? for we do not delight in expanding our mouths."—"It will," returned the princess : "I have not to learn that you are unused to long conversations : I will leave you therefore to repose, though I had other questions to propound." The instant she had spoken the water became smooth, and the fishes at once disappeared.

Carathis, inflated with the venom of her projects, strode hastily over the rock, and found the amiable Gulchenrouz asleep in an arbour; whilst the two dwarfs were watching at his side, and ruminating their accustomed prayers. These diminutive personages possessed the gift of divining, whenever an enemy to good Mussulmans approached: thus they anticipated the arrival of Carathis, who, stopping short, said to herself, "How placidly doth he recline his lovely little head! how pale and languishing are his looks! it is just the very child of my wishes!" The dwarfs interrupted this delectable soliloquy by leaping instantly upon her, and scratching her face with their utmost zeal. But Nerkes and Cafour, betaking themselves to the succour of their mistress, pinched the dwarfs so severely in return, that they both gave up the ghost, imploring Mahomet to inflict his sorest vengeance upon this wicked woman and all her household.

At the noise which this strange conflict occasioned in the valley, Gulchenrouz awoke, and, bewildered with terror, sprung impetuously and climbed an old fig-tree that rose against the acclivity of the rocks; from thence he gained their summits, and ran for two hours without once looking back. At last, exhausted with fatigue, he fell senseless into the arms of a good old genius, whose fondness for the company of children had made it his sole occupation to protect them. Whilst performing his wonted rounds through the air, he had pounced on the cruel Giaour, at the instant of his growling in the horrible chasm, and had rescued the fifty little victims which the impiety of Vathek had devoted to his voracity. These the genius brought up in nests still higher than the clouds, and himself fixed his abode in a nest more capacious than the rest, from which he had expelled the Rocs that had built it.

These inviolable asylums were defended against the dives and the afrits, by waving streamers; on which were inscribed in characters of gold, that flashed like lightning, the names of Alla and the Prophet. It was there that Gulchenrouz, who as yet remained undeceived with respect to his pretended death, thought himself in the mansions of eternal peace. He admitted without fear the congratulations of his little friends, who were all assembled in the nest of the venerable genius; and vied with each other in kissing his serene forehead and beautiful eyelids. Remote from the inquietudes of the world, the impertinence of harems, the brutality of eunuchs, and the inconstancy of women, there he found a place truly congenial to the delights of his soul. In this peaceable society, his days, months, and years glided on; nor was he less happy than the rest of his companions: for the genius, instead of burdening his pupils with perishable riches and vain sciences, conferred upon them the boon of perpetual childhood.

Carathis, unaccustomed to the loss of her prey, vented a thousand execrations on her negresses for not seizing the child, instead of amusing themselves with pinching to death two insignificant dwarfs from which they gained no advantage. She returned into the valley murmuring; and finding that her son was not risen from the arms of Nouronihar, discharged her ill-humour upon both. The idea, however, of departing next day for Istakhar, and of cultivating, through the good offices of the Giaour, an intimacy with Eblis himself, at length consoled her chagrin. But fate had ordained it otherwise.

In the evening, as Carathis was conversing with Dilara, who through her contrivance had become of the party, and whose taste resembled her own, Bababalouk came to acquaint her that the sky towards Samarah looked of a fiery red, and seemed to portend some alarming disaster. Immediately recurring to her astrolabes and instruments of magic, she took the altitude of the planets, and discovered by her calculations, to her great mortification, that a formidable revolt had taken place at Samarah; that Motavakel, availing himself of the disgust, which was inveterate against his brother, had incited commotions amongst the populace, made himself master of the palace, and actually invested the great tower, to which Morakanabad had retired, with a handful of the few that still remained faithful to Vathek.

"What!" exclaimed she; "must I lose, then, my tower! my mutes! my negresses! my mummies! and, worse than all, the laboratory, the favourite resort of my nightly lucubrations, without knowing, at least, if my hair-brained son will complete his adventure? No! I will not be dupe! immediately will I speed to support Morakanabad. By my formidable art, the clouds shall pour grape-shot in the faces of the assailants, and shafts of red-hot iron on their heads. I will let loose my stores of hungry serpents and torpedos from beneath them; and we shall soon see the stand they will make against such an explosion !”

Having thus spoken, Carathis hastened to her son, who was tranquilly banqueting with Nouronihar, in his superb carnation-coloured tent. “Glutton that thou art !” cried she ; “were it not for me, thou wouldst soon find thyself the mere commander of savoury pies. Thy faithful subjects have abjured the faith they swore to thee. Motavakel, thy brother, now reigns, on the hill of Pied Horses ; and, had I not some slight resources in the tower, would not be easily persuaded to abdicate. But, that time may not be lost, I shall only add a few words :—Strike tent to-night ; set forward ; and beware how thou loiterest again by the way. Though thou hast forfeited the conditions of the parchment, I am not yet without hope ; for it cannot be denied that thou hast violated, to admiration, the laws of hospitality by seducing the daughter of the emir, after having partaken of his bread and his salt. Such a conduct cannot but be delightful to the Giaour ; and if, on thy march, thou canst signalise thyself by an additional crime, all will still go well, and thou shalt enter the palace of Soliman in triumph. Adieu ! Alboufaki and my negresses are waiting at the door.”

—The caliph had nothing to offer in reply : he wished his mother a prosperous journey, and ate on till he had finished his supper. At midnight, the camp broke up, amidst the flourishing of trumpets and other martial instruments ; but loud indeed must have been the sound of the tymbals, to overpower the blubbering of the emir and his greybeards, who, by an excessive profusion of tears, had so far exhausted the radical moisture, that their eyes shrivelled up in their sockets, and their hairs dropped off by the roots. Nouronihar, to whom such a symphony was painful, did not grieve to get out of hearing. She accompanied the caliph in the imperial litter; where they amused themselves with imagining the splendour which was soon to surround them. The other women, overcome with dejection, were dolefully rocked in their cages; whilst Dilara consoled herself with anticipating the joy of celebrating the rites of fire on the stately terraces of Istakhar.

In four days they reached the spacious valley of Rocnabad. The season of spring was in all its vigour; and the grotesque branches of the almond-trees in full blossom, fantastically checkered with hyacinths and jonquils, breathed forth a delightful fragrance. Myriads of bees, and scarce fewer of santons, had there taken up their abode. On the banks of the stream, hives and oratories were alternately ranged; and their neatness and whiteness were set off by the deep green of the cypresses that spired up amongst them. These pious personages amused themselves with cultivating little gardens that abounded with flowers and fruits; especially musk-melons of the best flavour that Persia could boast. Sometimes dispersed over the meadow, they entertained themselves with feeding peacocks whiter than snow, and turtles more blue than the sapphire. In this manner were they occupied when the harbingers of the imperial procession began to proclaim, "Inhabitants of Rocnabad! prostrate yourselves on the brink of your pure waters; and tender your thanksgivings to Heaven, that vouchsafeth to show you a ray of its glory: for, lo! the commander of the faithful draws near."

The poor santons, filled with holy energy, having hustled to light up wax torches in their oratories, and expand the Koran on their ebony desks, went forth to meet the caliph with baskets of honeycomb, dates, and melons. But, whilst they were advancing in solemn procession, and with measured steps, the horses, camels, and guards, wantoned over their tulips and other flowers, and made a terrible havoc amongst them. The santons could not help casting from one eye a look of pity on the ravages committing around them; whilst the other was fixed upon the caliph and heaven. Nouronihar, enraptured with the scenery of a place which brought back to her remembrance the pleasing solitudes where her infancy had passed, entreated Vathek to stop; but he, suspecting that these oratories might be deemed, by the Giaour, an habitation, commanded his pioneers to level them all. The santons stood motionless with horror at the barbarous mandate, and at last broke out into lamentations; but these were uttered with so ill a grace, that Vathek bade his eunuchs kick them from his presence. He then descended from the litter with Nouronihar. They sauntered together in the meadow, and amused themselves with culling flowers, and passing a thousand pleasantries on each other. But the bees, who were staunch Mussulmans, thinking it their duty to revenge the insult offered to their dear masters, the santons, assembled so zealously to do it with good effect, that the caliph and Nouronihar were glad to find their tents prepared to receive them.

Bababalouk, who, in capacity of purveyor, had acquitted himself with applause as to peacocks and turtles, lost no time in consigning some dozens to the spit, and as many more to be fricasseed. Whilst they were feasting, laughing, carousing, and blaspheming at pleasure, on the banquet so liberally furnished, the moullahs, the sheiks, the cadis, and imans of Schiraz (who seemed not to have met the santons) arrived ; leading by bridles of riband, inscribed from the Koran, a train of asses which were loaded with the choicest fruits the country could boast. Having presented their offerings to the caliph, they petitioned him to honour their city and mosques with his presence. "Fancy not," said Vathek, "that you can detain me. Your presents I condescend to accept, but beg you will let me be quiet, for I am not over-fond of resisting temptation. Retire, then ; yet, as it is not decent for personages so reverend to return on foot, and as you have not the appearance of expert riders, my eunuchs shall tie you on your asses, with the precaution that your backs be not turned towards me ; for they understand etiquette."—In this deputation were some high-stomached sheiks, who, taking Vathek for a fool, scrupled not to speak their opinion. These Bababalouk girded with double cords ; and having well disciplined their asses with nettles behind, they all started, with a preternatural alertness, plunging, kicking, and running foul of one another, in the most ludicrous manner imaginable.

Nouronihar and the caliph mutually contended who should most enjoy so degrading a sight. They burst out in peals of laughter, to see the old men and their asses fall into the stream. The leg of one was fractured ; the shoulder of another dislocated ; the teeth of a third dashed out ; and the rest suffered still worse.

Two days more, undisturbed by fresh embassies, having been devoted to the pleasures of Rocnabad, the expedition proceeded; leaving Schiraz on the right, and verging towards a large plain; from whence were discernible, on the edge of the horizon, the dark summits of the mountains of Istakhar.

At this prospect the caliph and Nouronihar were unable to repress their transports. They bounded from their litter to the ground, and broke forth into such wild exclamations, as amazed all within hearing. Interrogating each other, they shouted, "Are we not approaching the radiant palace of light? or gardens, more delightful than those of Sheddad?"—Infatuated mortals! they thus indulged delusive conjecture, unable to fathom the decrees of the Most High!

The good genii, who had not totally relinquished the superintendence of Vathek, repairing to Mahomet, in the seventh heaven, said, "Merciful Prophet! stretch forth thy propitious arms towards thy vicegerent; who is ready to fall, irretrievably, into the snare which his enemies, the dives, have prepared to destroy him. The Giaour is awaiting his arrival, in the abominable palace of fire; where, if he once set his foot, his perdition will be inevitable." Mahomet answered, with an air of indignation, "He hath too well deserved to be resigned to himself; but I permit you to try if one effort more will be effectual to divert him from pursuing his ruin."

One of these beneficent genii, assuming, without delay, the exterior of a shepherd, more renowned for his piety than all the dervishes and santons of the region, took his station near a flock of white sheep, on the slope of a hill; and began to pour forth, from his flute, such airs of pathetic melody, as subdued the very soul, and, wakening remorse, drove, far from it, every frivolous fancy. At these energetic sounds, the sun hid himself beneath a gloomy cloud; and the waters of two little lakes, that were naturally clearer than crystal, became of a colour like blood. The whole of this superb assembly was involuntarily drawn towards the declivity of the hill. With downcast eyes, they all stood abashed; each upbraiding himself with the evil he had done. The heart of Dilara palpitated; and the chief of the eunuchs, with a sigh of contrition, implored pardon of the women, whom, for his own satisfaction, he had so often tormented.

Vathek and Nouronihar turned pale in their litter; and, regarding each other with haggard looks, reproached themselves—the one with a thousand of the blackest crimes, a thousand projects of impious ambition,—the other, with the desolation of her family, and the perdition of the amiable Gulchenrouz. Nouronihar persuaded herself that she heard, in the fatal music, the groans of her dying father; and Vathek, the sobs of the fifty children he had sacrificed to the Giaour. Amidst these complicated pangs of anguish, they perceived themselves impelled towards the shepherd, whose countenance was so commanding that Vathek, for the first time, felt overawed; whilst Nouronihar concealed her face with her hands. The music paused; and the genius, addressing the caliph, said, “Deluded prince! to whom Providence hath confided the care of innumerable subjects, is it thus that thou fulfillest thy mission? Thy crimes are already completed; and art thou now hastening towards thy punishment? Thou knowest that, beyond these mountains, Eblis and his accursed dives hold their infernal empire ; and, seduced by a malignant phantom, thou art proceeding to surrender thyself to them ! This moment is the last of grace allowed thee : abandon thy atrocious purpose : return : give back Nouronihar to her father, who still retains a few sparks of life : destroy thy tower with all its abominations : drive Carathis from thy councils : be just to thy subjects : respect the ministers of the Prophet : compensate for thy impieties by an exemplary life ; and, instead of squandering thy days in voluptuous indulgence, lament thy crimes on the sepulchres of thy ancestors. Thou beholdest the clouds that obscure the sun : at the instant he recovers his splendour, if thy heart be not changed, the time of mercy assigned thee will be past for ever."

Vathek, depressed with fear, was on the point of prostrating himself at the feet of the shepherd, whom he perceived to be of a nature superior to man ; but, his pride prevailing, he audaciously lifted his head, and, glancing at him one of his terrible looks, said, "Whoever thou art, withhold thy useless admonitions : thou wouldst either delude me, or art thyself deceived. If what I have done be so criminal as thou pretendest, there remains not for me a moment of grace. I have traversed a sea of blood to acquire a power which will make thy equals tremble : deem not that I shall retire when in view of the port ; or that I will relinquish her who is dearer to me than either my life or thy mercy. Let the sun appear ! let him illumine my career ! it matters not where it may end." On uttering these words, which made even the genius shudder, Vathek threw himself into the arms of Nouronihar, and commanded that his horses should be forced back to the road.

There was no difficulty in obeying these orders, for the attraction had ceased : the sun shone forth in all his glory, and the shepherd vanished with a lamentable scream.

The fatal impression of the music of the genius remained, notwithstanding, in the heart of Vathek's attendants. They viewed each other with looks of consternation. At the approach of night almost all of them escaped ; and of this numerous assemblage there only remained the chief of the eunuchs, some idolatrous slaves, Dilara, and a few other women, who, like herself, were votaries of the religion of the Magi.

The caliph, fired with the ambition of prescribing laws to the powers of darkness, was but little embarrassed at this dereliction. The impetuosity of his blood prevented him from sleeping ; nor did he encamp any more, as before. Nouronihar, whose impatience, if possible, exceeded his own, importuned him to hasten his march, and lavished on him a thousand caresses, to beguile all reflection. She fancied herself already more potent than Balkis, and pictured to her imagination the genii falling prostrate at the foot of her throne. In this manner they advanced by moonlight till they came within view of the two towering rocks that form a kind of portal to the valley, at the extremity of which rose the vast ruins of Istakhar. Aloft on the mountain glimmered the fronts of various royal mausoleums, the horror of which was deepened by the shadows of night. They passed through two villages almost deserted, the only inhabitants remaining being a few feeble old men, who, at the sight of horses and litters, fell upon their knees, and cried out, "O Heaven! is it then by these phantoms that we have been for six months tormented? Alas! it was from the terror of these spectres, and the noise beneath the mountains, that our people have fled, and left us at the mercy of the maleficent spirits!" The caliph, to whom these complaints were but unpromising auguries, drove over the bodies of these wretched old men, and at length arrived at the foot of the terrace of black marble. There he descended from his litter, handing down Nouronihar. Both with beating hearts stared wildly around them, and expected, with an apprehensive shudder, the approach of the Giaour; but nothing as yet announced his appearance.

A death-like stillness reigned over the mountain and through the air; the moon dilated on a vast platform the shades of the lofty columns, which reached from the terrace almost to the clouds; the gloomy watch-towers, whose number could not be counted, were covered by no roof; and their capitals, of an architecture unknown in the records of the earth, served as an asylum for the birds of night, which, alarmed at the approach of such visitants, fled away croaking.

The chief of the eunuchs, trembling with fear, besought Vathek that a fire might be kindled. "No," replied he, "there is no time left to think of such trifles. Abide where thou art, and expect my commands." Having thus spoken, he presented his hand to Nouronihar; and ascending the steps of a vast staircase, reached the terrace, which was flagged with squares of marble, and resembled a smooth expanse of water, upon whose surface not a blade of grass ever dared to vegetate. On the right rose the watch-towers, ranged before the ruins of an immense palace, whose walls were embossed with various figures. In front stood forth the colossal forms of four creatures, composed of the leopard and the griffin, and though but of stone, inspired emotions of terror. Near these were distinguished, by the splendour of the moon, which streamed full on the place, characters like those on the sabres of the Giaour, and which possessed the same virtue of changing every moment. These, after vacillating for some time, fixed at last in Arabic letters, and prescribed to the caliph the following words :—"Vathek, thou hast violated the conditions of my parchment, and deserveth to be sent back ; but in favour of thy companion, and as the meed for what thou hast done to obtain it, Eblis permitteth that the portal of his palace shall be opened, and the subterranean fire will receive thee into the number of its adorers."

He scarcely had read these words before the mountain, against which the terrace was reared, trembled, and the watch-towers were ready to topple headlong upon them ; the rock yawned, and disclosed within it a staircase of polished marble, that seemed to approach the abyss. Upon each stair were planted two large torches, like those Nouronihar had seen in her vision, the camphorated vapour of which ascended and gathered itself into a cloud under the hollow of the vault.

This appearance, instead of terrifying, gave new courage to the daughter of Fakreddin. Scarcely deigning to bid adieu to the moon and the firmament, she abandoned, without hesitation, the pure atmosphere, to plunge into these infernal exhalations. The gait of those impious personages was haughty and determined. As they descended, by the effulgence of the torches, they gazed on each other with mutual admiration, and both appeared so resplendent that they already esteemed themselves spiritual intelligences. The only circumstance that perplexed them was their not arriving at the bottom of the stairs : on hastening their descent, with an ardent impetuosity, they felt their steps accelerated to such a degree, that they seemed not walking but falling from a precipice. Their progress, however, was at length impeded by a vast portal of ebony, which the caliph without difficulty recognised. Here the Giaour awaited them with the key in his hand. "Ye are welcome !" said he to them, with a ghastly smile, "in spite of Mahomet and all his dependents. I will now usher you into that palace where you have so highly merited a place." Whilst he was uttering these words he touched the enamelled lock with his key, and the doors at once flew open with a noise still louder than the thunder of the dog days, and as suddenly recoiled the moment they had entered.

The caliph and Nouronihar beheld each other with amazement at finding themselves in a place which, though roofed with a vaulted ceiling, was so spacious and lofty, that at first they took it for an immeasurable plain. But their eyes at length growing familiar to the grandeur of the surrounding objects, they extended their view to those at a distance, and discovered rows of columns and arcades, which gradually diminished, till they terminated in a point radiant as the sun when he darts his last beams athwart the ocean. The pavement, strewed over with gold dust and saffron, exhaled so subtile an odour as almost overpowered them. They, however, went on, and observed an infinity of censers, in which ambergris and the wood of aloes were continually burning. Between the several columns were placed tables, each spread with a profusion of viands, and wines of every species sparkling in vases of crystal. A throng of genii, and other fantastic spirits, of either sex, danced lasciviously at the sound of music which issued from beneath.

In the midst of this immense hall, a vast multitude was incessantly passing, who severally kept their right hands on their hearts, without once regarding any thing around them: they had all the livid paleness of death. Their eyes, deep sunk in their sockets, resembled those phosphoric meteors that glimmer by night in places of interment. Some stalked slowly on, absorbed in profound reverie; some, shrieking with agony, ran furiously about like tigers wounded with poisoned arrows; whilst others, grinding their teeth in rage, foamed along more frantic than the wildest maniac. They all avoided each other; and, though surrounded by a multitude that no one could number, each wandered at random unheedful of the rest, as if alone on a desert where no foot had trodden.

Vathek and Nouronihar, frozen with terror at a sight so baleful, demanded of the Giaour what these appearances might mean, and why these ambulating spectres never withdrew their hands from their hearts? "Perplex not yourselves with so much at once," replied he bluntly; "you will soon be acquainted with all: let us haste, and present you to Eblis." They continued their way through the multitude; but, notwithstanding their confidence at first, they were not sufficiently composed to examine with attention the various perspectives of halls and of galleries that opened on the right hand and left, which were all illuminated by torches and braziers, whose flames rose in pyramids to the centre of the vault. At length they came to a place where long curtains, brocaded with crimson and gold, fell from all parts in solemn confusion. Here the choirs and dances were heard no longer. The light which glimmered came from afar.

After some time, Vathek and Nouronihar perceived a gleam brightening through the drapery, and entered a vast tabernacle hung round with the skins of leopards. An infinity of elders with streaming beards, and afrits in complete armour, had prostrated themselves before the ascent of a lofty eminence ; on the top of which, upon a globe of fire, sat the formidable Eblis. His person was that of a young man, whose noble and regular features seemed to have been tarnished by malignant vapours. In his large eyes appeared both pride and despair : his flowing hair retained some resemblance to that of an angel of light. In his hand, which thunder had blasted, he swayed the iron sceptre, that causes the monster Ouranbad, the afrits, and all the powers of the abyss to tremble. At his presence, the heart of the caliph sunk within him ; and he fell prostrate on his face. Nouronihar, however, though greatly dismayed, could not help admiring the person of Eblis ; for she expected to have seen some stupendous giant. Eblis, with a voice more mild than might be imagined, but such as penetrated the soul and filled it with the deepest melancholy, said, "Creatures of clay, I receive you into mine empire :

ye are numbered amongst my adorers : enjoy whatever this palace affords : the treasures of the pre-adamite sultans : their fulminating sabres ; and those talismans, that compel the dives to open the subterranean expanses of the mountain of Kaf, which communicate with these. There, insatiable as your curiosity may be, shall you find sufficient objects to gratify it. You shall possess the exclusive privilege of entering the fortresses of Aherman, and the halls of Argenk, where are portrayed all creatures endowed with intelligence ; and the various animals that inhabited the earth prior to the creation of that contemptible being whom ye denominate the father of mankind."

Vathek and Nouronihar, feeling themselves revived and encouraged by this harangue, eagerly said to the Giaour, " Bring us instantly to the place which contains these precious talismans."—" Come," answered this wicked dive, with his malignant grin,— " come and possess all that my sovereign hath promised, and more." He then conducted them into a long aisle adjoining the tabernacle ; preceding them with hasty steps, and followed by his disciples with the utmost alacrity. They reached, at length, a hall of great extent, and covered with a lofty dome ; around which appeared fifty portals of bronze, secured with as many fastenings of iron. A funereal gloom prevailed over the whole scene. Here, upon two beds of incorruptible cedar, lay recumbent the fleshless forms of the pre-adamite kings, who had been monarchs of the whole earth. They still possessed enough of life to be conscious of their deplorable condition. Their eyes retained a melancholy motion : they regarded one another with looks of the deepest dejection ; each holding his right hand, motionless, on his heart. At their feet were inscribed the events of their several reigns, their power, their pride, and their crimes; Soliman Daki; and Soliman, called Gian Ben Gian, who, after having chained up the dives in the dark caverns of Kaf, became so presumptuous as to doubt of the Supreme Power. All these maintained great state; though not to be compared with the eminence of Soliman Ben Daoud.

This king, so renowned for his wisdom, was on the loftiest elevation, and placed immediately under the dome. He appeared to possess more animation than the rest. Though, from time to time, he laboured with profound sighs, and, like his companions, kept his right hand on his heart, yet his countenance was more composed, and he seemed to be listening to the sullen roar of a cataract visible in part through one of the grated portals. This was the only sound that intruded on the silence of these doleful mansions. A range of brazen vases surrounded the elevation. "Remove the covers from these cabalistic depositaries," said the Giaour to Vathek; "and avail thyself of the talismans which will break asunder all these gates of bronze; and not only render thee master of the treasures contained within them, but also of the spirits by which they are guarded."

The caliph, whom this ominous preliminary had entirely disconcerted, approached the vases with faltering footsteps, and was ready to sink with terror when he heard the groans of Soliman. As he proceeded, a voice from the livid lips of the prophet articulated these words:—"In my lifetime I filled a magnificent throne; having, on my right hand, twelve thousand seats of gold, where the patriarchs and the prophets heard my doctrines : on my left, the sages and doctors, upon as many thrones of silver, were present at all my decisions. Whilst I thus administered justice to innumerable multitudes, the birds of the air, hovering over me, served as a canopy against the rays of the sun. My people flourished ; and my palace rose to the clouds. I erected a temple to the Most High, which was the wonder of the universe : but I basely suffered myself to be seduced by the love of women, and a curiosity that could not be restrained by sublunary things. I listened to the counsels of Aherman, and the daughter of Pharaoh ; and adored fire, and the hosts of heaven. I forsook the holy city, and commanded the genii to rear the stupendous palace of Istakhar, and the terrace of the watch-towers ; each of which was consecrated to a star. There, for a while, I enjoyed myself in the zenith of glory and pleasure. Not only men but supernatural beings were subject also to my will. I began to think, as these unhappy monarchs around had already thought, that the vengeance of Heaven was asleep ; when, at once, the thunder burst my structures asunder, and precipitated me hither : where, however, I do not remain, like the other inhabitants, totally destitute of hope ; for an angel of light hath revealed that in consideration of the piety of my early youth my woes shall come to an end when this cataract shall for ever cease to flow. Till then I am in torments, ineffable torments ! an unrelenting fire preys on my heart."

Having uttered this exclamation, Soliman raised his hands towards heaven, in token of supplication ; and the caliph discerned through his bosom, which was transparent as crystal, his heart enveloped in flames. At a sight so full of horror, Nouronihar fell back, like one petrified, into the arms of Vathek, who cried out with a convulsive sob, "O Giaour! whither hast thou brought us? Allow us to depart, and I will relinquish all thou hast promised. O Mahomet! remains there no more mercy?" — "None! none!" replied the malicious dive. "Know, miserable prince! thou art now in the abode of vengeance and despair. Thy heart, also, will be kindled like those of the other votaries of Eblis. A few days are allotted thee previous to this fatal period: employ them as thou wilt; recline on these heaps of gold; command the infernal potentates; range, at thy pleasure, through these immense subterranean domains: no barrier shall be shut against thee. As for me, I have fulfilled my mission: I now leave thee to thyself." At these words he vanished.

The caliph and Nouronihar remained in the most abject affliction. Their tears were unable to flow, and scarcely could they support themselves. At length, taking each other, despondingly, by the hand, they went faltering from this fatal hall, indifferent which way they turned their steps. Every portal opened at their approach. The dives fell prostrate before them. Every reservoir of riches was disclosed to their view; but they no longer felt the incentives of curiosity, of pride, or avarice. With like apathy they heard the chorus of genii, and saw the stately banquets prepared to regale them. They went wandering on, from chamber to chamber, hall to hall, and gallery to gallery; all without bounds or limit; all distinguishable by the same lowering gloom; all adorned with the same awful grandeur ; all traversed by persons in search of repose and consolation ; but who sought them in vain ; for every one carried within him a heart tormented in flames. Shunned by these various sufferers, who seemed by their looks to be upbraiding the partners of their guilt, they withdrew from them to wait, in direful suspense, the moment which should render them to each other the like objects of terror.

"What !" exclaimed Nouronihar ; "will the time come when I shall snatch my hand from thine?"—"Ah !" said Vathek, "and shall my eyes ever cease to drink from thine long draughts of enjoyment? Shall the moments of our reciprocal ecstasies be reflected on with horror? It was not thou that broughtest me hither ; the principles by which Carathis perverted my youth have been the sole cause of my perdition ! It is but right she should have her share of it." Having given vent to these painful expressions, he called to an afrit, who was stirring up one of the braziers, and bade him fetch the Princess Carathis from the palace of Samarah.

After issuing these orders, the caliph and Nouronihar continued walking amidst the silent crowd, till they heard voices at the end of the gallery. Presuming them to proceed from some unhappy beings, who, like themselves, were awaiting their final doom, they followed the sound, and found it to come from a small square chamber, where they discovered, sitting on sofas, four young men, of goodly figure, and a lovely female, who were holding a melancholy conversation by the glimmering of a lonely lamp. Each had a gloomy and forlorn air ; and two of them were embracing each other with great tenderness. On seeing the caliph and the daughter of Fakreddin enter, they arose, saluted, and made room for them. Then he who appeared the most considerable of the group, addressed himself thus to Vathek:—"Strangers! who doubtless are in the same state of suspense with ourselves, as you do not yet bear your hand on your heart, if you are come hither to pass the interval allotted, previous to the infliction of our common punishment, condescend to relate the adventures that have brought you to this fatal place; and we, in return, will acquaint you with ours, which deserve but too well to be heard. To trace back our crimes to their source, though we are not permitted to repent, is the only employment suited to wretches like us!"

The caliph and Nouronihar assented to the proposal; and Vathek began, not without tears and lamentations, a sincere recital of every circumstance that had passed. When the afflicting narrative was closed, the young man entered on his own. Each person proceeded in order; and, when the third prince had reached the midst of his adventures, a sudden noise interrupted him, which caused the vault to tremble and to open.

Immediately a cloud descended, which gradually dissipating, discovered Carathis on the back of an afrit, who grievously complained of his burden. She, instantly springing to the ground, advanced towards her son, and said, "What dost thou here, in this little square chamber? As the dives are become subject to thy beck, I expected to have found thee on the throne of the pre-adamite kings."

"Execrable woman!" answered the caliph; "cursed be the day thou gavest me birth! Go, follow this afrit; let him conduct thee to the hall of the prophet Soliman : there thou wilt learn to what these palaces are destined, and how much I ought to abhor the impious knowledge thou hast taught me."

"Has the height of power, to which thou art arrived, turned thy brain?" answered Carathis: "but I ask no more than permission to show my respect for Soliman the prophet. It is, however, proper thou shouldst know that (as the afrit has informed me neither of us shall return to Samarah) I requested his permission to arrange my affairs, and he politely consented. Availing myself, therefore, of the few moments allowed me, I set fire to the tower, and consumed in it the mutes, negresses, and serpents, which have rendered me so much good service; nor should I have been less kind to Morakanabad, had he not prevented me, by deserting at last to thy brother. As for Bababalouk, who had the folly to return to Samarah, to provide husbands for thy wives, I undoubtedly would have put him to the torture; but being in a hurry, I only hung him, after having decoyed him in a snare, with thy wives, whom I buried alive by the help of my negresses, who thus spent their last moments greatly to their satisfaction. With respect to Dilara, who ever stood high in my favour, she hath evinced the greatness of her mind, by fixing herself near, in the service of one of the magi; and, I think, will soon be one of our society."

Vathek, too much cast down to express the indignation excited by such a discourse, ordered the afrit to remove Carathis from his presence, and continued immersed in thoughts which his companions durst not disturb.

Carathis, however, eagerly entered the dome of Soliman, and without regarding in the least the groans of the prophet, undauntedly removed the covers of the vases and violently seized on the talismans. Then, with a voice more loud than had hitherto been heard within these mansions, she compelled the dives to disclose to her the most secret treasures, the most profound stores, which the afrit himself had not seen. She passed, by rapid descents, known only to Eblis and his most favoured potentates ; and thus penetrated the very entrails of the earth, where breathes the sansar, or the icy wind of death. Nothing appalled her dauntless soul. She perceived, however, in all the inmates who bore their hands on their heart, a little singularity, not much to her taste.

As she was emerging from one of the abysses, Eblis stood forth to her view ; but notwithstanding he displayed the full effulgence of his infernal majesty, she preserved her countenance unaltered, and even paid her compliments with considerable firmness.

This superb monarch thus answered :—" Princess, whose knowledge and whose crimes have merited a conspicuous rank in my empire ; thou dost well to avail thyself of the leisure that remains : for the flames and torments, which are ready to seize on thy heart, will not fail to provide thee soon with full employment." Having said this, he was lost in the curtains of his tabernacle.

Carathis paused for a moment with surprise ; but resolved to follow the advice of Eblis, she assembled all the choirs of genii, and all the dives, to pay her homage. Thus marched she, in triumph, through a vapour of perfumes, amidst the acclamations of all the malignant spirits, with most of whom she had formed a previous acquaintance. She even attempted to dethrone one of the Solimans, for the purpose of usurping his place ; when a voice, proceeding from the abyss of death, proclaimed, " All is accomplished !" Instantaneously the haughty forehead of the intrepid princess became corrugated with agony : she uttered a tremendous yell ; and fixed, no more to be withdrawn, her right hand upon her heart, which was become a receptacle of eternal fire.

In this delirium, forgetting all ambitious projects, and her thirst for that knowledge which should ever be hidden from mortals, she overturned the offerings of the genii ; and, having execrated the hour she was begotten and the womb that had borne her, glanced off in a rapid whirl that rendered her invisible, and continued to revolve without intermission.

Almost at the same instant, the same voice announced to the caliph, Nouronihar, the four princes, and the princess, the awful and irrevocable decree. Their hearts immediately took fire, and they, at once, lost the most precious gift of heaven,—HOPE. These unhappy beings recoiled, with looks of the most furious distraction. Vathek beheld in the eyes of Nouronihar nothing but rage and vengeance ; nor could she discern aught in his but aversion and despair. The two princes who were friends, and, till that moment, had preserved their attachment, shrunk back, gnashing their teeth with mutual and unchangeable hatred. Kalilah and his sister made reciprocal gestures of imprecation ; all testified their horror for each other by the most ghastly convulsions, and screams that could not be smothered. All severally plunged themselves into the accursed multitude, there to wander in an eternity of unabating anguish.

Such was, and such should be, the punishment of unrestrained passions and atrocious deeds! Such shall be the chastisement of that blind curiosity, which would transgress those bounds the wisdom of the Creator has prescribed to human knowledge; and such the dreadful disappointments of that restless ambition, which, aiming at discoveries reserved for beings of a supernatural order, perceives not, through its infatuated pride, that the condition of man upon earth is to be—humble and ignorant.

Thus the caliph Vathek, who, for the sake of empty pomp and forbidden power, had sullied himself with a thousand crimes, became a prey to grief without end, and remorse without mitigation; whilst the humble, the despised Gulchenrouz passed whole ages in undisturbed tranquillity, and in the pure happiness of childhood.

NOTES.

PAGE 1.—Caliph.

THIS title, amongst the Mahometans, comprehends the concrete character of Prophet, Priest, and King, and is used to signify the Vicar of God on Earth. It is, at this day, one of the titles of the Grand Signior, as successor of Mahomet; and of the Sophi of Persia, as successor of Ali,—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 9. D'Herbelot, p. 985.

PAGE 1.—one of his eyes became so terrible.

The author of Nighiaristan hath preserved a fact that supports this account; and there is no history of Vathek in which his terrible eye is not mentioned.

PAGE 1.—Omar Ben Abdalaziz.

This caliph was eminent above all others for temperance and self-denial, in so much that he is believed to have been raised to Mahomet's bosom, as a reward for his abstinence in an age of corruption.—D'Herbelot, p. 690.

PAGE 1.—Samarah.

A city of the Babylonian Irak; supposed to have stood on the site where Nimrod erected his tower. Khondemir relates, in his life of Motassem, that this prince, to terminate the disputes which were perpetually happening between the inhabitants of Bagdat and his Turkish slaves, withdrew from thence, and having fixed on a situation in the plain of Catoul, there founded Samarah. He is said to have had, in the stables of this city, a hundred and thirty thousand pied horses, each of which carried, by his order, a sack of earth to a place he had chosen. By this accumulation an elevation was formed that commanded a view of all Samarah, and served for the foundation of his magnificent palace.—D'Herbelot, pp. 752, 808, 985. Anecdotes Arabes, p. 418.

PAGE 2.—in the most delightful succession.

The great men of the East have been always fond of music. Though forbidden by the Mahometan religion, it commonly makes a part of every entertainment. Nititur in vetitum semper. Female slaves are generally kept to amuse them and the ladies of their harems. The Persian Khanyagere seems nearly to have resembled our old English minstrel; as he usually accompanied his barbut, or lute, with heroic songs. Their musicians appear to have known the art of moving the passions, and to have generally directed their music to the heart. Al Farabi, a philosopher, who died about the middle of the tenth century, on his return from the pilgrimage of Mecca, introduced himself, though a stranger, at the court of Seifeddoula, Sultan of Syria. Musicians were accidentally performing, and he joined them. The prince admired him, and wished to hear something of his own. He drew a composition from his pocket, and distributing the parts amongst the band, the first movement threw the prince and his courtiers into violent laughter, the next melted all into tears, and the last lulled even the performers asleep.—Richardson's Dissertation on the Languages, &c., of Eastern Nations, p. 211.

PAGE 2.—Mani.

This artist, whom Inatulla of Delhi styles the far-famed, lived in the reign of Schabur, or Sapor, the son of Ardschir Babegan, was founder of the sect of Manichæans, and was, by profession, a painter and sculptor. His pretensions, supported by an uncommon skill in mechanical contrivances, induced the ignorant to believe that his powers were more than human. After having secluded himself from his followers, under the pretence of passing a year in heaven, he produced a wonderful volume, which he affirmed to have brought from thence; containing images and figures of a marvellous nature.—D'Herbelot, p. 548. It appears, from the Arabian Nights, that Haroun al Raschid, Vathek's grandfather, had adorned his palace and furnished his magnificent pavilion with the most capital performances of the Persian artists.

PAGE 3.—Houris.

The virgins of Paradise, called, from their large black eyes,* Hur al aymn. An intercourse with these, according to the institution of Mahomet, is to have been suggested by the eyes of the virgins of paradise?

* Might not Akenside's expression,

"In the dark Heaven of Mira's eye,"

The enthusiasm of the acute Winckelmann for the statuary of the ancients was apt to mislead both his judgment and taste. What, but such a bias could induce him to maintain—after asserting that Homer meant by the word βωπις, to characterise the beauty of Juno's eyes, and citing with approbation ΜΕΛΑΝΟΦΘΑΛΜΟΣ—ΚΑΛΗ ΤΟ ΠΡΟΣΩΠΙΟΝ, as the gloss of the scholiast upon it, that the epithet the poet had selected was designed by him to express, not what it naturally imports, but a sense independent of it; and which it could only be supposed to imply, from being placed in an absurd connection? The eye of the animal to which the term belongs is, no doubt, large, if referred to the human countenance; but not properly so, in its own situation. Had Homer applied βωπις to the statue of Juno, βωπις (as the Abbé contends) must have been interpreted large-eyed; because in this relation no idea, except that of magnitude [unless we add prominence], could possibly be extorted from it: but it must be allowed, on the same principle, constitute the principal felicity of the faithful. Not formed of clay, like mortal women, they are deemed in the highest degree beautiful, and exempt from every inconvenience incident to the sex.—Al Koran; fassim.

PAGE 4.—it was not with the orthodox that he usually held.

Vathek persecuted, with extreme rigour, all who defended the eternity of the Koran; which the Sunnites, or orthodox, maintained to be uncreated, and the Motazalites and Schiites as strenuously denied.—D'Herbelot, p. 85, &c.

PAGE 4.—Mahomet in the seventh heaven.

In this heaven, the Paradise of Mahomet is supposed to be placed, contiguous to the throne of Alla. Hagi Khalfah relates, that Ben Iatmaiah, a celebrated doctor of Damascus, had the temerity to assert that, when the Most High erected his throne, he reserved a vacant place for Mahomet upon it.

PAGE 4.—Genii.

Genn, or Ginn, in the Arabic, signifies a Genius or Demon, a being of a higher order, and formed of more subtle matter than man. According to Oriental mythology, the Genii governed the world long before the creation of Adam. The Mahometans regarded them as an intermediate race between angels and men, and capable of salvation; whence Mahomet pretended a commission to convert them. Consonant to this, we read that, when the Servant of God stood up to invoke him, it wanted little but that the Genii had pressed on him in crowds, to hear him rehearse the Koran.—D'Herbelot, p. 375. Al Koran. ch. 72. It is asserted, and not without plausible reasons, that the words Genn, Ginn—Genius, Genie, Gian, Gigas, Giant, Geant proceed from the same themes, viz., Γῆ, the earth, and Γᾶω, to produce; as if these supernatural agents had been an early production of the earth, long before Adam was modelled out from a lump of it. The Ωνρες and Εωρρες of Plato bear a close analogy to these supposed intermediate creatures between God and man. From these premises arose the consequence that, boasting a higher order, formed of more subtle matter, and possessed of that an epithet taken from the eye of the ass, or any other creature of equal size, whatever were its colour, would have become the statue of the goddess as well, and signified precisely the same.—On such commentators a poet might justly exclaim, “——— Pol, me occidistis, amici,

Non servastis!”

In their descriptions of female beauty, the poets of the East frequently use the same image with Homer; and exactly in his sense. Thus, in particular, Lebeid:

“A company of maidens were seated in their vehicles, with black eyes and graceful motions, like the wild heifers of Tudah.”

much greater knowledge, than man, they lorded over this planet, and invisibly governed it with superior intellect. From this last circumstance, they obtained in Greece the title of Δαίμονες, Demons, from Δάμωον, Sciens, knowing. The Hebrew word, נִפְלִיִּים, Nephilim (Gen. vi. 4), translated by Gigantes, giants, claiming the same etymon with Νεφέλη, a cloud, seems also to indicate that these intellectual beings inhabited the void expanse of the terrestrial atmosphere. Hence the very ancient fable of men of enormous strength and size revolting against the gods, and all the mythological lore relating to that mighty conflict; unless we trace the origin of this important event to the ambition of Satan, his revolt against the Almighty, and his fall with the angels.

PAGE 4.—Assist him to complete the tower.

The genii, who were styled by the Persians Peris and Dives, were famous for their architectural skill. The pyramids of Egypt have been ascribed to them; and we are told of a strange fortress which they constructed in the remote mountains of Spain, whose frontal presented the following inscription:—

“It is no light task to disclose the portal of this asylum:

The bolt, rash Passenger, is not of iron; but the tooth of a furious Dragon:

Know thou that no one can break this charm,

Till Destiny shall have consigned the key to his adventurous hand.”

The Koran relates, that the Genii were employed by Solomon in the erection of his magnificent temple.—Baillly sur l'Atlantide, p. 146. D'Hertelot, p. 8. Al Koran, ch. 34.

The reign of Gian Ben Gian, over the Peris, is said to have continued for two thousand years; after which EBLIS was sent by the Deity to exile them, on account of their disorders, and confine them in the remotest region of the earth.—D'Hertelot, p. 396. Baillly sur l'Atlantide, p. 147.

PAGE 5.—the stranger displayed such rarities as he had never before seen.

In the Tales of Inatulla, we meet with a traveller who, like this, was furnished with trinkets and curiosities of an extraordinary kind. That such were much sought after in the days of Vathek, may be concluded from the encouragement which Haroun al Raschid gave to the mechanic arts, and the present he sent by his ambassadors to Charlemagne. This consisted of a clock, which, when put into motion, by means of a clepsydium, not only pointed out the hours in their round, but also, by dropping small balls on a bell, struck them, and, at the same instant, threw open as many little doors, to let out an equal number of horsemen. Besides these, the clock displayed various other contrivances.—Ann. Reg. Franc. Pip. Caroli, &c. ad ann. 807. Weidler, p. 205.

PAGE 6.—characters on the sabres.

Such inscriptions often occur in eastern romances. We find, in the Arabian Nights, a cornelian, on which unknown characters were engraven; and, also, a sabre, like those here described. In the French king's library is a curious treatise, entitled Sefat Alaclam; containing a variety of alphabets, arranged under different heads; such as the prophetic, the mystical, the philosophic, the magical, the talismanic, &c., which seems to have escaped the research of the indefatigable Mr. Ascle.—Arabian Nights, vol. ii. p. 246; vol. i. p. 143. D'Herbelot, p. 797.

PAGE 8.—endeavour'd, by her conversation, to appease and compose him.

The same sanative quality is ascribed to soothing conversation, both by Æschylus and Milton:—

Ορης νοσουσης εισω ιατροι λογοι.

Prometh. v. 378.

"Apt words have power to swage
The tumours of a troubled mind;
And are as balm to fester'd wounds."

Samson Agon. v. 184.

PAGE 10.—beards burnt off.

The loss of the beard, from the earliest ages, was accounted highly disgraceful. An instance occurs, in the Tales of Inatulla, of one being singed off, as a mulct on the owner, for having failed to explain a question propounded; and, in the Arabian Nights, a proclamation may be seen similar to this of Vathek.—Vol. i. p. 268; vol. ii. p. 228.

PAGE 11.—robes of honour, and sequins of gold.

Such rewards were common in the East. See particularly Arabian Nights, vol. ii. pp. 72, 125; vol. iii. p. 64.

PAGE 12.—The old man put on his green spectacles.

This is an apparent anachronism; but such frequently occur in reading the Arabian writers. It should be remembered, the difficulty of ascertaining facts, and fixing the dates of inventions, must be considerable in a vast extent of country, where books are comparatively few, and the art of printing unpractised. Though the origin of spectacles can be traced back, with certainty, no higher than the thirteenth century, yet the observation of Seneca—that letters appeared of an increased magnitude when viewed through the medium of convex glass—might have been noted also by others, and a sort of spectacles contrived in consequence of it. But, however this might have been, the art of staining glass is sufficiently ancient to have suggested, in the days of Vathek, the use of green, as a protection to the eye from a glare of light.

PAGE 13.—The stars, which he went to consult.

The phrase of the original corresponds with the Greek expression, Αστροβιαzesθαι; which, in another view, will illustrate St. Matthew, xi. 12.

PAGE 15.—to drink at will of the Four Fountains.

Agathocles (cited by Athenæus, l. iii. p. 515) relates that "there were certain fountains in these regions, to the number of seventy, whose WATERS were denominated GOLDEN; and of which it was death for any one to drink, save the KING and his eldest son." In this number, the Four Fountains were formerly reckoned; whose waters, as Vathek had no son, were sacred to his own use.

The citation from Agathocles may likewise explain the wish of King David, "for water from the well of Bethlehem;" unless we suppose it to have arisen from a predilection, like that of the Parthian monarchs, for the water of Chonspes, which was carried with them wherever they went, and, from that circumstance, styled by Tibullus, regia lympha, and by Milton,

"The drink of none but kings."

PAGE 15.—Bowls of rock crystal.

In the Arabian Nights, Schemselnihar and Ebn Thaher were served by three of their attendants, each bringing them a goblet of rock crystal, filled with curious wine.

PAGE 15.—Accursed Giaour.

Dices of this kind are frequently mentioned by Eastern writers. Consult their tales in general; and especially those of the Fishermen, Aladdin, and the Princess of China.

PAGE 15.—Drink this draught, said the stranger, as he presented a phial.

A phial of a similar potion is ordered to be instantaneously drunk off, in one of the Tales of Inatulla. "These brewed enchantments" have been used in the East from the days of Homer. Milton, in his Comus, describes one of them, which greatly resembles the Indian's:—

"And first behold this cordial julep here,
That flames, and dances in his crystal bounds,
With spirits of balm, and fragrant syrups mixed.
Not that Nepenthes, which the wife of Thone
In Egypt gave to Jove-born Helena,
Is of such power to stir up joy as this:
To life so friendly, or so cool to thirst."

PAGE 16.—The poets applied them as a chorus to all the songs they composed.

Sir John Chardin, describing a public entertainment and rejoicing, observes, that the most ingenious poets in Persia (as is related of Homer) sung their own works; which, for the most part, are in praise of the king; whom they fail not to extol, let him be never so worthy of blame and oblivion. The songs of this day were adapted to the occasion of the festival; which was the restoration of the prime minister to his office: he adds, I saw one that abounded in fine and witty turns, the burden of which was this:—

" Him set aside, all men but equals are ;
 E'en Sol surveyed the spacious realms of air,
 To see if he could find another star ;
 A star, that like the polar star could reign ;
 And long he sought it, but he sought in vain." *

The ingenuity of the poet seems to consist in an allusion to the prime minister's title, Ivon Medave, or the Pole of Persia.

PAGE 17.—Bababoulouk, the chief of his eunuchs.

As it was the employment of the black eunuchs to wait upon and guard the sultanas ; so the general superintendence of the harem was particularly committed to their chief.—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, pp. 155, 156.

PAGE 17.—the divan.

This was both the supreme council and court of justice, at which the caliphs of the race of the Abassides assisted in person, to redress the injuries of every appellatant.—D'Herbelot, p. 298.

PAGE 18.—The officers arranged themselves in a semicircle.

Such was the etiquette, constantly observed, on entering the Divan.—Arab. Nights, vol. iv. p. 36. D'Herbelot, p. 942.

PAGE 18.—the prime vizir.

Vazir, vezir, or, as we express it, vizir, literally signifies a porter ; and, by metaphor, the minister who bears the principal burden of the state, generally called the Sublime Porte.

PAGE 19.—The Indian, being short and plump, collected himself into a ball, &c.

Happy as Horace has been in his description of the Wise Man, the figurative expressions which finish the character are literally applicable to our author's Indian :—

" In seipso totus, teres atque rotundus ;
 Externi ne quid valeat per levè morari :
 In quem manca ruit semper fortuna."

PAGE 20.—The Muezzins and their minarets.

Valid, the son of Abdalmalek, was the first who erected a minaret, or turret ; and this he placed on the grand mosque at Damascus, for the muezzin, or crier, to announce from it the hour of prayer. This practice has constantly been kept to this day.—D'Herbelot, p. 576.

* See Lloyd's Introduction to a Collection of Voyages and Travels, never before published in English, p. 21.

PAGE 23.—The palace of subterranean fire.

Of this palace, which is frequently mentioned in Eastern romance, a full description will be found in the sequel.

PAGE 23.—Soliman Ben Daoud.

The name of David in Hebrew is composed of the letter ך Vau between two ך *Dalet*s ךך; and, according to the Masoretic points, ought to be pronounced David. Having no v consonant in their tongue, the Septuagint substituted the letter n for v, and wrote Δαβιδ, Dabid. The Syriac reads Dad or Dod; and the Arabs articulate Daoud.

PAGE 24.—I require the blood of fifty of the most beautiful sons of the vicirs.

Amongst the most infatuated votaries of the powers of darkness, the most acceptable offering was the blood of their children. If the parents were not at hand to make an immediate offer, the magistrates did not fail to select those who were most fair and promising, that the demon might not be defrauded of his dues. On one occasion, two hundred of the prime nobility were sacrificed together.—Bryant's Observations, p. 279, &c.

PAGE 28.—Give them me, cried the Indian.

In the story of Codadad and his brother, we read of a Black, like this, who fed upon human blood.—Arab. Nights, vol. iii. p. 109.

PAGE 28.—with the grin of an ogre.

Thus, in the history of the punished vizir:—"The prince heard enough to convince him of his danger, and then perceived that the lady, who called herself the daughter of an Indian king, was an ogress; wife to one of those savage demons called an ogre, who stay in remote places, and make use of a thousand wiles to surprise and devour passengers."—Arab. Nights, vol. i. p. 56.

PAGE 28.—bracelet.

The bracelet, in the East, was an emblem of royalty.—D'Herbelot, p. 541. For want of a more proper term to denominate the ornament serkhoof, the word aigret is here used.

PAGE 30.—mutes.

It has been usual, in Eastern courts, from time immemorial, to retain a number of mutes. These are not only employed to amuse the monarch, but also to instruct his pages, in an art to us little known, of communicating every thing by signs, lest the sounds of their voices should disturb the sovereign.—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 164. The mutes are also the secret instruments of his private vengeance, in carrying the fatal string.

PAGE 32.—Prayer announced at break of day.

The stated seasons of public prayer, in the twenty-four hours, were five :

daybreak, noon, midtime between noon and sunset, immediately as the sun leaves the horizon, and an hour and a half after it is down.

PAGE 32.—mummies.

Moumia (from moum, wax and tallow), signifies the flesh of the human body preserved in the sand, after having been embalmed and wrapt in ceremonies. They are frequently found in the sepulchres of Egypt; but most of the Oriental mummies are brought from a cavern near Abin, in Persia.—D'Herbelot, p. 647.

PAGE 33.—rhincceros' horns.

Of their extraordinary qualities and application, a curious account may be seen in the Bibliothèque Orientale, and the Supplement to it.

PAGE 33.—Skulls and skeletons.

Both were usually added to the ingredients already mentioned. These magic rites sufficiently resemble the witch scenes of Middleton, Shakspeare, &c., to show their Oriental origin. Nor is it to be wondered if, amongst the many systems adopted from the East, this should have been in the number. It may be seen, from the Arabian Tales, that magic was an art publicly taught; and Father Angelo relates of a rich enchanter, whom he knew at Bassora, that his pupils were so numerous, as to occupy an entire quarter of the city.

PAGE 37.—Flacons of wine, and vases of sherbet reposing on snow.

Sir John Chardin speaks of a wine much admired in the East, and particularly in Persia, called roubmar; which is made from the juice of the pomegranate, and sent abroad in large quantities. The Oriental sherbets, styled by St. Jerom, sorbitiuncula delicata, consisted of various syrups (such as lemon, liquorice, capillaire, &c.) mixed with water. To these, Hasselquist adds several others, and observes, that the sweet-scented violet is a flower greatly esteemed, not only for its smell and colour, but, especially, for its use in sherbet; which, when the Easterns intend to entertain their guests in an elegant manner, is made of a solution of violet-sugar. Snow, in the rinfrescos of a hot climate, is almost a constant ingredient. Thus, in the Arabian Nights, Bedreddin Hassan, having filled a large porcelain bowl with sherbet of roses, put snow into it.

PAGE 38.—a lamb stuffed with pistachios.

The same dish is mentioned in the Tale of the Barber's sixth brother.

PAGE 38.—a parchment.

Parchments of the like mysterious import are frequent in the writings of the Easterns. One in particular, amongst the Arabians, is held in high veneration. It was written by Ali, and Giafar Sadek, in mystic characters, and is said to contain the destiny of the Mahometan religion, and the great events which are to happen previous to the end of the world. This parchment is of camel's skin; but it was usual with Catherine of Medicis to carry about her person a legend, in cabalistic characters, inscribed on the skin of a dead-born infant.—D'Herbelot, p. 366. Wrazall's House of Valois.

PAGE 38.—Istakhar.

This city was the ancient Persepolis, and capital of Persia, under the kings of the three first races. The author of Lebtarikh writes, that Kischtab there established his abode, erected several temples to the element of fire, and hewed out, for himself and his successors, sepulchres in the rocks of the mountain contiguous to the city. The ruins of columns and broken figures which still remain, defaced as they were by Alexander, and mutilated by time, plainly evince that those ancient potentates had chosen it for the place of their interment. Their monuments, however, must not be confounded with the superb palace reared by queen Homai, in the midst of Istakhar; which the Persians distinguish by the name of Tchilminar, or the forty watch-towers. The origin of this city is ascribed by some to Giamschid, and others carry it higher; but the Persian tradition is, that it was built by the Peris, or Faeries, when the world was governed by Gian Ben Gian.—D'Herbelot, p. 327.

PAGE 38.—Gian Ben Gian.

By this appellation was distinguished the monarch of that species of beings, whom the Arabians denominate Gian or Ginn; that is, Genii; and the Tarikh Thabari, Peris, Fees, or Faeries. He was renowned for his warlike expeditions and stupendous structures. According to Oriental writers, the pyramids of Egypt were amongst the monuments of his power. The buckler of this mighty sovereign, no less famous than that of Achilles, was employed by three successive Solimans, to achieve their marvellous exploits. From them, it descended to Tahmurath, surnamed Diobend, or Conqueror of the GIANTS. This buckler was endowed with most wonderful qualities, having been fabricated by talismanic art; and was alone sufficient to destroy all the charms and enchantments of demons or giants; which, on the contrary, were wrought by magic. Hence we are no longer at a loss for the origin of the wonderful shield of Atlante.

The reign of Gian Ben Gian over the Peris is said to have continued for two thousand years; after which, EBLIS was sent by the Deity to exile them, on account of their disorders, and confine them in the remotest region of the earth.—D'Herbelot, p. 396. Bailly sur l'Atlantide, p. 147.

PAGE 38.—the talismans of Soliman.

The most famous talisman of the East, and which could control even the arms and magic of the dives or giants, was Mokur Solimani, the seal or ring of Soliman Jared, fifth monarch of the world after Adam. By means of it the possessor had the entire command, not only of the elements, but also of demons and every created being.—Richardson's Dissertat. p. 272. D'Herbelot, p. 820.

PAGE 38.—pre-adamite sultans.

These monarchs, which were seventy-two in number, are said to have governed each a distinct species of rational beings, prior to the existence of

Adam. Amongst the most renowned of them were SOLIMAN RAAD, SOLIMAN DAKI, and SOLIMAN DI GIAN BEN GIAN.—D'Herbelot, p. 820.

PAGE 38.—beware how thou enterest any dwelling.

Strange as this injunction may seem, it is by no means incongruous to the customs of the country. Dr. Pocock mentions his travelling with the train of the governor of Faiume, who, instead of lodging in a village that was near, passed the night in a grove of palm-trees.—Travels, vol. i. p. 56.

PAGE 38.—every bumper he ironically quaffed to the health of Mahomet.

There are innumerable proofs that the Grecian custom, συνεινεν κναβίζομενος, prevailed amongst the Arabs; but, had these been wanted, Carathis could not be supposed a stranger to it. The practice was, to hail the gods in the first place, and then those who were held in the highest veneration. This they repeated as often as they drank. Thus St. Ambrose: Quid obtestationes potentium loquar? quid memorem sacramenta, quæ violare nefas arbitrantur? Bibamus, inquit, pro salute imperatorum; et qui non biberit, sit reus indevotionis.

PAGE 39.—the ass of Balaam, the dog of the seven sleepers, and the other animals admitted into the paradise of Mahomet.

It was a tenet of the Mussulman creed, that all animals would be raised again, and many of them honoured with admission to paradise. The story of the seven sleepers, borrowed from Christian legends, was this:—In the days of the Emperor Decius, there were certain Ephesian youths of a good family, who, to avoid the flames of persecution, fled to a secret cavern, and there slept for a number of years. In their flight towards the cave, they were followed by a dog, which, when they attempted to drive back, said,—"I love those who are dear unto God; go sleep, therefore, and I will guard you." For this dog the Mahometans retain so profound a reverence, that their harshest sarcasm against a covetous person is, "He would not throw a bone to the dog of the seven sleepers." It is even said that their superstition induces them to write his name upon the letters they send to a distance, as a kind of talisman, to secure them a safe conveyance.—Religious Ceremonies, vol. vii. p. 74, n. Salé's Koran, chap. xviii. and notes.

PAGE 39.—painting the eyes of the Circassians.

It was an ancient custom in the East, and still continues, to tinge the eyes of women, particularly those of a fair complexion, with an impalpable powder, prepared chiefly from crude antimony, and called surmeh. Ebnî'l Motezz, in a passage translated by Sir W. Jones, hath not only ascertained its purple colour, but also likened the violet to it:—

"Viola collegit folia sua, similia
Collyrio nigro, quod bibit lachrymas die discessus,
Velut si esset super vasa in quibus fulgent
Primæ ignis flammulæ in sulphuris extremis partibus."

This pigment, when applied to the inner surface of the lids, communicates to the eye (especially if seen by the light of lamps) so tender and fascinating a languor as no language is competent to express.* Hence the epithet ἰοβλεφάρος, violet-colour eyelids, attributed by the Greeks† to the goddess of beauty; and the Arabian comparison of “the eyelids of a fine woman bathed in tears, to violets dropping with dew.” Perhaps, also, Shakspeare’s ——violets dim,

But sweeter than the lids of Juno’s eyes—should be ultimately referred to the same origin. But, however this may be, it is obvious (though his commentators have overlooked it) that Anacreon alluded to the same cosmetic, when he required of the painter that the eyelids of his mistress’s portrait, should, like her own, exhibit this appearance:—

Ἰχέτο δ’ ὅπως ἐκείνη,
ΒΑΕΦΑΡΩΝ ΙΤΥΝ ΚΕΑΑΙΝΗΝ·

and her eye, both the bright citron‡ of Minerva’s, and the dewy radiance§ of Cythera’s:

* When Tasso represents love, as ambushed

——sotto all’ ombra
Delle palpebre—

he allegorically alludes to that appearance in nature, which the artifice here described was meant to counterfeit.

† Both Homer and Hesiod have applied ἘΑΙΚΟΒΑΕΦΑΡΟΣ to Venus, in a synonymous sense, as is evident from Pliny, who, amongst other properties of the Helix, minutely specifies its purplish flowers. This ὑπογραφή σφθαλμων will likewise explain ἘΑΙΚΩΠΙΣ.

Winckelmann and Grævius have each given different interpretations; but, let them both speak for themselves:—Ἐλικοβλεφάρος caractérise des yeux dont les paupières ont un mouvement ondoyant que le Poëte compare au jeune cep de la vigne.—Hist. de l’Art de l’Antiq., tom. II. p. 135.—Ἐλικοβλεφαροὶ et ἑλικοπίδες puellæ Græcis dicuntur, qui tant mobili oculorum petulantia, ut Petron. loquitur, sive quæ habent, ut idem dicit,— ——blandos oculos et inquietos,

Et quadam propria nota loquaces.

Qui hinc Ovidio dicuntur arguti. Aliter plerique sentiunt, et exponunt: nigros oculos habentes. Sed ea vera est quam dixi hujus vocis notio, quam facile pluribus confirmarem, nisi res ipsa loqueretur.—Lectiones Hesiodæ, cap. xx.

‡ “Eyen, bright citrin.”—Chaucer. No expression can be less exact than blue-eyed, when used as the characteristic of Minerva; nor any, perhaps, more so, than Chaucer’s:—unless γλαυκῶπις be literally rendered.

§ ὙΠΟΣ.—ὁ ευκαταφορος, eis τας ἡδονας περιπατίζομενος.

Gloss. Bibl. Coislin. Tasso, in his Jerusalem, has well paraphrased the import of this epithet:

Qual raggio in onda, le scintilla un riso
Negli umidi occhj tremulo e lascivo.

Το δε ΒΑΕΜΜΑ ἡνι' αληθως Ἀπο του πυργος ποιησον*
 Ἀμα ΓΑΛΥΚΟΝ, ὡς ΑΦΗΝΗΣ·
 Ἀμα δ' ΥΓΡΟΝ, ὡς ΚΥΘΗΡΗΣ·

PAGE 40.—Rocnabad.

The stream thus denominated flows near the city of Schiraz. Its water are uncommonly pure and limpid, and their banks swarded with the finest verdure. Its praises are celebrated by Hafez, in an animated song, which Sir W. Jones has admirably translated :—

"Boy, let yon limpid ruby flow,
 And bid thy pensive heart be glad,
 Whate'er the frowning zealots say :
 Tell them, their Eden cannot show
 A stream so clear as Rocnabad,
 A bower so sweet as Mosellay."†

PAGE 40.—Do you, with the advice of my mother, govern.

Females in the East were not anciently excluded from power. In the story of Zeyn Alasnam and the King of the Genii, the mother of Zeyn undertakes, with the aid of his vizirs, to govern Bassora during his absence on a similar expedition.

PAGE 41.—Chintz and muslin.

For many curious particulars relative to these articles, consult Mr. Delaval's Inquiry concerning the Changes of Colours, &c. ; to which may be added, Lucret. lib. iv. 5. Petron. c. 37. Martial, viii. Ep. 28. 17 ; xiv. Ep. 150. Plutarch. in Vita Catonis. Plin. viii. 48.

PAGE 41.—Serpents and scorpions.

Various accounts are given of the magical applications of these animals, and the power of sorcerers over them, to which even Solomon referred. Sir John Chardin relates, that at Surat an Armenian, having seen some of these creatures crawl and twine over the naked bodies of children belonging to the charmers, daringly hazarded the same experiment ; but it soon proved fatal to him, for he was bitten, and died in the space of two hours.

PAGE 41.—she amused herself in curing their wounds.

Clorin, in the Faithful Shepherdess of Fletcher, possessed the like skill :—

"Of all green wounds I know the remedies,
 In men or cattle ; be they stung with snakes,
 Or charm'd with powerful words of wicked art ;

* * * * *

These I can cure."

* Ode xxviii. 18.—2 Kings ix. 30. Ezek. xxiii. 40. D'Herbelot, p. 832. Lady M. W. Montagu's Letters, Let. xxix.

† Mosella was an oratory on the banks of Rocnabad.

PAGE 41.—Moullahs.

Those amongst the Mahometans who were bred to the law had this title ; and from their order the judges of cities and provinces were taken.

PAGE 41.—the sacred Caaba.

That part of the temple at Mecca which is chiefly revered, and, indeed, gives a sanctity to the rest, is a square stone building called the Caaba, probably from its quadrangular form. The length of this edifice, from north to south, is twenty-four cubits, and its breadth, from east to west, twenty-three. The door is on the east side, and stands about four cubits from the ground, the floor being level with the threshold. The Caaba has a double roof, supported internally by three octangular pillars of aloes wood, between which, on a bar of iron, hangs a row of silver lamps. The outside is covered with rich black damask, adorned with an embroidered band of gold. This hanging, which is changed every year, was formerly sent by the caliphs.—Salé's Preliminary Discourse, p. 152.

PAGE 42.—the tapestry that hung before the door.

This kind of curtain, at first restricted to the serail, or palace, was afterwards adopted by the great, and gradually became of general use. The author of Leb Tarik relates, that Lohorashb, King of Persia, having granted to the great officers of his household and army the privilege of giving audience on seats of gold, reserved to himself the right of the scraperdelé, or curtain ; which was hung before the throne to conceal him from the eyes of his subjects, and thereby preserve their reverence for his person. In later times, the daughter of a law professor, who occasionally, in her father's absence, filled his chair, had recourse to the same expedient, lest the charms of her face should distract her pupils' attention.—Abbé de Sade's Mémoires de Pétrarque, tom. i. p. 49.

PAGE 42.—the supposed oratory.

The dishonouring such places as had an appearance of being devoted to religious purposes, by converting them to the most abject offices of nature, was an Oriental method of expressing contempt, and hath continued from remote antiquity.—Harmer's Observations, vol. ii. p. 493.

PAGE 43.—regale these pious poor souls with my good wine from Schiraz.

The prohibition of wine in the Koran is so rigidly observed by the conscientious, especially if they have performed the pilgrimage to Mecca, that they deem it sinful to press grapes for the purpose of making it, and even to use the money arising from its sale.—Chardin, Voy. de Perse, tom. ii. p. 212. Schiraz was famous in the East for its wines of different sorts, but particularly for its red, which was esteemed more highly than even the white wine of Kismische.

PAGE 44.—The Caliph, to enjoy so flattering a sight, sufted gaily on the roof.

Dr. Pococke relates, that he was entertained at Galilee by the steward of the Sheik, with whom he sufted on the top of the house. From a similar motive to Vathek's, Nebuchadnezzar is represented by Daniel as contemplating his capital from the summit of his palace, when he uttered that exulting apostrophe, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built?

PAGE 45.—the most stately tulips of the East.

The tulip is a flower of Eastern growth, and there held in great estimation. Thus, in an ode of Mesihi:—"The edge of the bower is filled with the light of Ahmed: among the plants the fortunate tulips represent his companions."

PAGE 45.—cunuchs in the rear.

As the black cunuchs were the inseparable attendants of the ladies, the rear was, consequently, their post. So, in the argument to the poem of Amriolkais:—"One day, when her tribe had struck their tents, and were changing their station, the women, as usual, came behind the rest, with the servants and baggage, in carriages fixed on the backs of camels."

PAGE 46.—certain cages of ladies.

There are many passages of the Moallakat in which these cages are fully described. Thus in the poem of Lebeid:—

"How were thy tender affections raised, when the damsels of the tribe departed; when they hid themselves in carriages of cotton, like antelopes in their lair, and the tents as they were struck gave a piercing sound!

"They were concealed in vehicles, whose sides were well covered with awnings and carpets, with fine-spun curtains and pictured veils."

Again, Zohair:—

"—— Look, my friend! dost thou not discern a company of maidens seated on camels, and advancing over the high ground above the streams of Jortham?

"They leave on their right the mountains and rocky plains of Kenaan. Oh! how many of my bitter foes, and how many of my firm allies, does Kenaan contain!

"They are mounted in carriages covered with costly awnings, and with rose-coloured veils, the lining of which have the hue of crimson andemwood.

"They now appear by the valley of Subaan, and now they pass through it; the trappings of all their camels are new and large.

"When they ascend from the bosom of the vale, they sit forward on the saddle-cloths, with every mark of a voluptuous gait."—Moallakat, by Sir W. Jones, pp. 46, 35. See also Lady M. W. Montagu, Let. xxvi.

PAGE 46.—swaggering somewhat awry.

Amriolkais, in the first poem of the Moallakat, hath related a similar adventure:—

"On that happy day I entered the carriage, the carriage of Onaiza, who said, 'Woe to thee! thou wilt compel me to travel on foot.'

"She added, while the vehicle was bent aside with our weight, 'O Amriol-kais, descend, or my beast also will be killed!'

"I answered, 'Proceed, and loosen his rein; nor withhold from me the fruits of thy love, which again and again may be tasted with rapture.'

"Many a fair one, like thee, though not like thee a virgin, have I visited by night."

PAGE 46.—dislodged.

Our language wants a verb, equivalent to the French denicher,¹ to convey, in this instance, the precise sense of the author.

PAGE 46.—those nocturnal insects which presage evil.

It is observable that, in the fifth verse of the 91st Psalm, the terror by night, is rendered, in the old English version, the bugge by night.* In the first settled parts of North America, every nocturnal fly of a noxious quality is still generically named a bug; whence the term bugbear signifies one that carries terror wherever he goes. Beelzebub, or the Lord of Flies, was an Eastern appellative given to the Devil; and the nocturnal sound called by the Arabians azif, was believed to be the howling of demons. Analogous to this is a passage in Comus, as it stood in the original copy:—

"But for that damn'd magician, let him be girt
With all the grisly legions that troop
Under the sooty flag of Acheron,
Harpies and Hydras, or all the monstrous buggs
'Twixt Africa and Inde, I'll find him out."

PAGE 47.—the locusts were heard from the thickets on the plain of Catoul.

The insects here mentioned are of the same species with the terriξ of the Greeks, and the ciada of the Latins. The locusts are mentioned in Pliny,

* Instances are not wanted, both in the English and Greek versions, where the translators have modified the sense of the original by their own preconceived opinions. To this source may be ascribed the Buggt of our old Bible, and (δαμονιον μεσημβρινον) the noon-day demon of the Seventy, unless the copies of the latter be supposed to have read, not מִן הַלַּיְלָה but מִן הַיּוֹם. If the terror by night be taken in connection with the pestilence that walketh in darkness, and both opposed to the arrow that flieth by day, and the destruction that wasteth at noon, it will seem to imply the dread of real evil only, which may be explained, in the language of the poet, by—

"Night and all her sickly dews—" but, if the rendering of our old version, adopting that of the Seventy, be followed, it will, also, include the imaginary evils that follow:

"Her spectres wan, and birds of boding cry."

b. xi. 29. They were so called, from loco isto, because the havoc they made wherever they passed left behind the appearance of a place desolated by fire. How could then the commentators of Vathek say that they are called locusts, from their having been so denominated by the first English settlers in America?

PAGE 47.—halted on the banks of the Tigris.

It is a practice in the East, and especially when large parties journey together, to halt, if possible, in the vicinity of a stream. Thus Zohair:

"They rose at daybreak: they proceeded at early dawn; they are advancing towards the valley of Ras directly and surely, as the hand to the mouth.

"Now, when they have reached the brink of yon blue gushing rivulet, they fix the poles of their tents, like the Arab, in a settled mansion."

PAGE 47.—the heavens looked angry, &c.

This tempest may be deemed somewhat the more violent, from a supposition that Mahomet interfered; which will appear the more probable, if the circumstance of its obliterating the road* be considered. William of Tyre hath recorded one of a similar kind, that visited Baldwin in his expedition against Damascus:—He, against whose will all projects are vain, suddenly overspread the sky with darkness; poured down such torrents of rain, and so entirely effaced the roads, that scarce any hope of escaping remained. These disasters were indeed portended by a gloominess in the air, lowering clouds, irregular gusts of wind, increasing thunders, and incessant lightnings: but, as the mind of man knows not what may befall him, these admonitions of Heaven were slighted and opposed.—Gesta Dei per Francos, p. 849.

PAGE 48.—He determined to cross over the craggy heights, &c., to Rocnabad.

Oriental travellers have sometimes recourse to these expedients, for the sake of abridging the toils of their journeys. Hence, Amgrad, in the Arabian Nights, who had himself been about six weeks in travelling from the Isle of Ebene, could not comprehend the possibility of coming in less time; unless by enchantment, or crossing the mountains, which, from the difficulty of the pass, were but seldom traversed.

PAGE 48.—tigers and vultures,

The ravages of these animals in the East are almost incredible.

"Before them, Death with shrieks directs their way, Fills the wild yell, and leads them to their prey."

* Exclusive, however, of preternatural interference, it frequently happens, that a sudden blast will arise on the vast deserts of the East, and sweep away, in its eddies, the tracks of the last passenger; whose camel, therefore, in vain, for the wanderer that follows,

Linquit humi pedibus vestigia pressa bisulcis.

From the earliest days, they have been the constant attendants on scenes of carnage.

In the Sacred Writings, David threatens "to give the host of the Philistines to the fowls of the air and the wild beasts of the earth."—Antara boasts, at the close of a conflict, of "having left the father of his foes, like a victim, to be mangled by the lions of the wood, and the eagles,* advanced in years."—And, in the narrative of the prisoners taken at Bendore, the author relates, that many of them were devoured by tigers and vultures.

PAGE 49.—Vathek—with two little pages.

"All the pages of the seraglio are sons of Christians made slaves in time of war, in their most tender age. The incursions of robbers in the confines of Circassia afford the means of supplying the seraglio, even in times of peace."—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 157. That the pages here mentioned were Circassians, appears from the description of their complexion—more fair than the enamel of Franguestan.

PAGE 49.—confectioners and cooks.

What their precise number might have been in Vathek's establishment it is not now easy to determine; but in the household of the present Grand Seigneur there are not fewer than one hundred and ninety.—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 145.

PAGE 50.—torches were lighted, &c.

Mr. Marsden relates, in his History of Sumatra, that tigers prove most fatal and destructive enemies to the inhabitants, particularly in their journeys; and adds, that the numbers annually slain by those rapacious tyrants of the woods are almost incredible. As these tremendous enemies are alarmed at the appearance of fire, it is usual for the natives to carry a splendid kind of torch, chiefly to frighten them, and also to make a blaze with wood in different parts round their villages.—P. 149.

PAGE 50.—One of the forests of cedar that bordered their way took fire.

Accidents of this kind, in Persia, are not unfrequent. "It was an ancient practice with the kings and great men to set fire to large bunches of dry combustibles, fastened round wild beasts and birds, which being then let loose, the air and earth appeared one great illumination: and as those terrified creatures naturally fled to the woods for shelter, it is easy to conceive that conflagrations, which would often happen, must have been peculiarly destructive."—Richardson's Dissertation, p. 185. In the 83rd Psalm, v. 14,

* Finely as Gray conceived the idea of the eagle, awe-struck at the corpses of the bards, there is a languor in his expression that wants to be removed. Milton, as his best editor judiciously remarks, applied (he might have said confined) the verb hurry to preternatural motion or imaginary beings: adopting it, therefore, in a kindred sense, might we not (for passes) advantageously read—

The famish'd eagle screams, and hurries by?

there is a reference to one of those fires, though arising from another cause and Homer, likewise, has taken a simile from thence:—

Πυρὲ πῦρ Αἰδαῖον ἐπιφλέγει ἀσπερον ὄλην,
Οὐρεὺς ἐν κορυφῇς· ἔκαθεν δὲ τε φαίνεται αὐγὴ
Il. B. 455.

PAGE 51.—hath seen some part of our bodies ; and, what is worse, our very faces.

"I was informed," writes Dr. Cooke, "that the Persian women, in general, would sooner expose to public view any part of their bodies than their faces."—Voyages and Travels, vol. ii. p. 443.

PAGE 52.—cakes baked in silver ovens for his royal mouth.

Portable ovens were a part of the furniture of Eastern travellers. St. Jerome (on Lament. v. 10) hath particularly described them. The caliph's were of the same kind, only substituting silver for brass. Dr. Pocock mentions his having been entertained in an Arabian camp with cakes baked for him. In what the peculiarity of the royal bread consisted, it is not easy to determine ; but, in one of the Arabian Tales, a woman, to gratify her utmost desire, wishes to become the wife of the sultan's baker, assigning for the reason, that she might have her fill of that bread which is called the sultan's. —Vol. iv. p. 269.

PAGE 52.—vases of snow, and grapes from the banks of the Tigris.

It was customary in Eastern climates, and especially in the sultry season, to carry, when journeying, supplies of snow. These astiva nives (as Mamertinus styles them) being put into separate vases, were, by that means, better kept from the air, as no more was opened at once than might suffice for immediate use. To preserve the whole from solution, the vessels that contained it were secured in packages of straw.—Gesta Dei, p. 1098. Vathek's ancestor, the CALIPH MAHADI, in the pilgrimage to Mecca, which he undertook from ostentation rather than devotion, loaded upon camels so prodigious a quantity, as was not only sufficient for himself and his attendants amidst the burning sands of Arabia, but also to preserve, in their natural freshness, the various fruits he took with him, and to ice all their drink whilst he staid at Mecca, the greater part of whose inhabitants had never seen snow till then.—Anecdotes Arabes, p. 326.

PAGE 52.—roasted wolf, &c.

In the poem of Amriolkais, a repast is described, which, in manner of preparation, resembles the present:—

"He soon brings us up to the foremost of the beasts, and leaves the rest far behind : nor has the herd time to disperse itself.

"He runs from wild bulls to wild heifers, and overpowers them in a single heat, without being bathed, or even moistened with sweat.

"Then the busy cook dresses the game, roasting part, baking part on hot stones, and quickly boiling the rest in a vessel of iron."

Disgusting as this refection of Vathek may be thought, Atlante boasts to Ruggiero of having fed him, from his infancy, on a similar diet :—

“Di midolle già d’ orsi e di leoni Ti porsì io dunque li primi alimenti ;”

and we read, that lion’s flesh was prescribed to Vathek, but on a different occasion.—Anecd. Arab. p. 419.

The vegetables that made part of this entertainment were such as the Koran had ordained to be food for the damned.

PAGE 53.—dropped their fans on the ground.

Attendants for the same purpose are mentioned in the story of the King of the Black Isles : “One day, while she was at bath, I found myself sleepy after dinner, and lay down upon a sofa. Two of her ladies, who were then in my chamber, came and sat down, one at my head and the other at my feet, with fans in their hands to moderate the heat, and to hinder the flies from disturbing my slumber.”—The comfort of such an attendant in the hour of repose can be known only in the climes of intolerable day.

PAGE 53.—horrible Kaf.

This mountain, which, in reality, is no other than Caucasus, was supposed to surround the earth, like a ring encompassing a finger. The sun was believed to rise from one of its eminences (as over Oeta, by the Latin poets), and to set on the opposite ; whence, from Kaf to Kaf, signified, from one extremity of the earth to the other. The fabulous historians of the East affirm, that this mountain was founded upon a stone, called sakhrat, one grain of which, according to Lokman, would enable the possessor to work wonders. This stone is further described as the pivot of the earth, and said to be one vast emerald, from the refraction of whose beams the heavens derive their azure. It is added, that whenever God would excite an earthquake, he commands the stone to move one of its fibres (which supply in it the office of nerves), and, that being moved, the part of the earth connected with it quakes, is convulsed, and sometimes expands. Such is the philosophy of the Koran !

The Tarikh Tabari, written in Persian, analogous to the same tradition, relates, that, were it not for this emerald, the earth would be liable to perpetual commotions, and unfit for the abode of mankind.

To arrive at the Kaf, a vast region,

“Far from the sun and summer gale,” must be traversed. Over this dark and cheerless desert, the way is inextricable without the direction of supernatural guidance. Here the dives or giants were confined, after their defeat by the first heroes of the human race ; and here, also, the peris, or faeries, are supposed in ordinary to reside. Sukrage, the giant, was king of Kaf, and had Rucaïl, one of the children of Adam, for his prime minister. The giant Argenk, likewise, from the time that Tahamurath made war upon him, reigned here, and reared a superb palace in the city of Aherman, with galleries, on whose walls were painted the creatures that inhabited the world prior to the formation of Adam —

W. Herbelot, p. 210, &c. &c.

FIGURE. the Simurgh

This is that wonderful bird of the East, concerning which so many marvels are told: it was not only endowed with reason, but possessed also the knowledge of every language. Hence it may be concluded to have been a dive in a borrowed form. This creature relates of itself that it had seen the great revolution of seven thousand years twelve times commence and close; and that, in its duration, the world had been seven times void of inhabitants, and as often replenished. The Simurgh is represented as a great friend to the race of Adam, and not less inimical to the dives. Tahamurath and Aherman were apprised by its predictions of all that was destined to befall them, and from it they obtained the promise of assistance in every undertaking. Armed with the buckler of Gian Ben Gian, Tahamurath was borne by it through the air, over the dark desert, to Kaf. From its bosom his helmet was crested with plumes, which the most renowned warriors have ever since worn. In every conflict the Simurgh was invulnerable, and the heroes it favoured never failed of success. Though possessed of power sufficient to exterminate its foes, yet the exertion of that power was supposed to be forbidden. Sadi, a serious author, gives it as an instance of the universality of Providence, that the Simurgh, notwithstanding its immense bulk, is at no loss for sustenance on the mountain of Kaf. Inatulla hath described Getiafroze, queen of the Genii, as seated on a golden chariot, drawn by ten simurghs; whose wings extended wide as the earth-shading bir,* and whose

* —Or Banian, to which the epithet of Inatulla most emphatically belongs. Milton hath accurately described this extraordinary tree, though by another name:

“The fig-tree—not that kind for fruit renown’d;
 But such as at this day to Indians known,
 In Malabar or Decan, spreads her arms,
 Branching so broad and long, that in the ground
 The bended twigs take root, and daughters grow
 About the mother tree: a pillar’d shade
 High over-arch’d, and echoing walks between.”

Was it not from hence that Warburton framed his hypothesis on the origin of Gothic architecture? At least, here were materials sufficient, for a fancy less forgetive than his. Mr. Ives, in his journey from Persia, thus speaks of this vegetable wonder:—“This is the Indians’ sacred tree. It grows to a prodigious height, and its branches spread a great way. The limbs drop down fibres, which take root and become another tree, united by its branches to the first; and so continue to do, until the trees cover a great extent of ground: the arches which those different stocks make are Gothic, like those we see in Westminster Abbey; the stocks not being single, but appearing as if composed of many stocks, are of a great circumference.

talons resembled the proboscis of mighty elephants: but it does not appear from any other writer that there ever was more than one, which is frequently called the marvellous gryphon, and said to be like that imaginary monster. —D'Herbelot, p. 1017, 810, &c. Tales of Inatulla, vol. ii. pp. 71, 72.

As the magic shield of Atlante resembles the buckler of Gian Ben Gian, so his Ippogriſ apparently came from the Sinurgh, notwithstanding the reference of Ariosto to the veridical Archbishop:—

“Non ho veduto mai, nè letto altrove, Fuor che in Turpin, d'un sì fatto animale.”

There is a certain solemnity accompanying those trees; nor do I remember that I was ever under the cover of any of them, but that my mind was at the time impressed with a reverential awe!—Page 460. From the

———— pillar'd shade
High over-arched, and echoing walks between;
as well as the ———— highest woods, impenetrable

To star, or sun-light—

just before mentioned, and the name given to the tree, it is probable that the poet's description was principally founded on the account of Duret, who, in the Chapter Du Figuier d'Inde, of his singular book (entitled Histoire admirable des plantes et herbes esmerueillables et miraculeuses en nature, &c. à Paris, 1605), thus writes:—“Sa grosseur est quelquefois telle, que trois hommes ne le scauroient embrasser: quelquefois vn ou deux de ces figuiers font un bois avec grand toffu, & ombrageux, dans lequel les rayons du Soleil ne peuuent auouement penetrer, durant les chaleurs d'Este, & sont ces figuiers infinies tonnes & cabinets si concaues & couuerts de feuilles & de sinuositez [ailes and recesses, so arched over with foliage and embowed ramifications], qu'il s'y forme des Echos ou reuerberations de voix & sons, jusques à trois fois; & est telle la moindre d'un seul ombre de ses arbres, qu'elle peut contenir sous soy à couuert huit cens ou mil personnes, & la plus grande ombre, trois mil hommes.” P. 124.—This tree might well be styled the Earth-shading.¹

Though the early architecture of our island be confessedly of a doubtful origin, it nevertheless deserves to be noted, that the resemblance between the columns of the ruined chancel at Orford, and those of Tauk Kesserah on the banks of the Tigris, is much too strict to be merely casual. It may be added, that the arches of this edifice, and their ornaments, are of the style we call the early Norman.

¹ The following is an account of the dimensions of a remarkable Banyan tree, near Manjee, twenty miles west of Patna, in Bengal. Diameter 363 to 375 feet. Circumference of its shadow at noon, 1116 feet. Circumference of the several stems (in number 50 or 60) 921 feet.—Marsden's History of Sumatra.

PAGE 53.—palamfors, &c.

These elegant productions, which abound in all parts of the East, were of very remote antiquity. Not only are αυδωας EYANΘEIS, finely flowered linens, noticed by Strabo; but Herodotus relates, that the nations of Caucasus adorned their garments with figures of various creatures, by means of the sap of certain vegetables; which, when macerated and diluted with water, communicate colours that cannot be washed out, and are no less permanent than the texture itself.—Strabo, l. xv. p. 709. Herodot. l. i. p. 96. The Arabian Tales repeatedly describe these "fine linens of India, painted in the most lively colours, and representing beasts, trees, flowers, &c."—Arab. Nights, vol. iv. p. 217, &c.

PAGE 54.—afrits.

These were a kind of Medusæ, or Lamie, supposed to be the most terrible and cruel of all the orders of the dives.—D'Herbelot, p. 66.

PAGE 41.—Tablets fraught with preternatural qualities.

Mr. Richardson observes, "that in the East men of rank in general carried with them pocket astronomical tables, which they consulted on every affair of moment." These tablets, however, were of the magical kind, and such as often occur in works of romance. Thus, in Boiardo, Orlando receives, from the father of the youth he had rescued, "a book that would solve all doubts;" and, in Ariosto, Logistilla bestows upon Astolpho a similar directory. The books which Carathis turned over with Morakanabad were imagined to have possessed the like virtues.

PAGE 54.—dwarfs.

Such unfortunate beings, as are thus "curtailed of fair proportion," have been, for ages, an appendage of Eastern grandeur. One part of their office consists in the instruction of the pages; but their principal duty is the amusement of their master. If a dwarf happen to be a mute, he is much esteemed; but if he be also an eunuch, he is regarded as a prodigy, and no pains or expense are spared to obtain him.—Habesci's State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 164, &c.

PAGE 54.—a cabin of rushes and canes.

Huts of this sort are mentioned by Ludeke, in his Expositio brevis Loc. Script. p. 51. Tuguriola seu palis, fruticibus viridibus, vel juncis circumdatis et tectis, amboque quidem facillimè construuntur.

PAGE 54.—a small spring supplies us with water for the Abdest, and we daily repeat prayers, &c.

Amongst the indispensable rules of the Mahometan faith, ablution is one of the chief. This rite is divided into three kinds. The first, performed before prayers, is called Abdest. It begins with washing both hands, and repeating these words:—"Praised be Alla, who created clean water, and gave it the virtue to purify: he also hath rendered our faith conspicuous." This done, water is taken in the right hand thrice, and the mouth being washed, the worshipper subjoins:—"I pray thee, O Lord, to let me taste of that water which thou hast given to thy prophet Mahomet in paradise, more fragrant than musk, whiter than milk, sweeter than honey; and which has the power to quench for ever the thirst of him that drinks it." This petition is accompanied with sniffing a little water into the nose. The face is then three times washed, and behind the ears; after which water is taken with both hands, beginning with the right, and thrown to the elbow. The washing of the crown next follows, and the apertures of the ear with the thumbs; afterward the neck with all the fingers, and, finally, the feet. In this last operation, it is held sufficient to wet the sandal only. At each ceremonial a suitable petition is offered, and the whole concludes with this:—"Hold me up firmly, O Lord! and suffer not my foot to slip, that I may not fall from the bridge into hell." Nothing can be more exemplary than the attention with which these rites are performed. If an involuntary cough or sneeze interrupt them, the whole service is begun anew, and that as often as it happens.—Habesci, p. 91, &c.

PAGE 54.—reading the holy Koran.

The Mahometans have a book of stops or pauses in reading the Koran, which divides it into seventeen sections, and allows of no more.—D'Herbelot, p. 915.

PAGE 54.—the bells of a cafila.

A cafila, or caravan, according to Pitts, is divided into distinct companies, at the head of which an officer, or person of distinction, is carried in a kind of horse litter, and followed by a sumpter camel, loaded with his treasure. This camel hath a bell fastened to either side, the sound of which may be heard at a considerable distance. Others have bells on their necks and their legs, to solace them when drooping with heat and fatigue. Inatulla also, in his tales, hath a similar reference: "The bells of the cafila may be rung in the thirsty desert."—Vol. ii. p. 15. These small bells were known at Rome from the earliest times, and called from their sounds tintinnabulum. Phædrus gives us a lively description of the mule carrying the fiscal monies: clarumque collo jactans tintinnabulum.—Book ii. fabl. vii.

PAGE 55.—Deggial.

This word signifies properly a liar and impostor, but is applied by Mahometan writers to their Antichrist. He is described as having but one eye and eyebrow, and on his forehead the radicals of cafer or infidel are said to be impressed. According to the traditions of the faithful, his first appearance will be between Irak and Syria, mounted on an ass. Seventy thousand Jews from Ispahan are expected to follow him. His continuance on earth is to be forty days. All places are to be destroyed by him and his emissaries, except Mecca or Medina, which will be protected by angels from the general overthrow. At last, however, he will be slain by Jesus, who is to encounter him at the gate of Lud.—D'Herbelot. Sale's Prelim. Disc. p. 106.

PAGE 55.—dictated by the blessed Intelligence.

That is, the angel Gabriel. The Mahometans deny that the Koran was composed by their prophet; it being their general and orthodox belief, that it is of divine original ; nay, even eternal and uncreated, remaining in the very essence of God : that the first transcript has been from everlasting by his throne, written on a table of immense size, called the preserved table ; on which are also recorded the divine decrees, past and future : that a copy was by the ministry of the angel Gabriel sent down to the lowest heaven, in the month of Ramadan, on the night of power : from whence Gabriel revealed it to Mahomet by parcels, some at Mecca, and some at Medina.—Al Koran, ch. li. &c. Salé's Prelim. Disc. p. 85.

PAGE 55.—hath culled with his own hands these melons, &c.

The great men of the East have ever been, what Herodotus shrewdly styled them, δωροφάγοι, or gift-eaters : for no visitor can approach them with empty hands. In such a climate and situation, what present could be more acceptable to Vathek than this refreshing collation ?

PAGE 55.—to kiss the fringe of your consecrated robe.

This observance was an act of the most profound reverence.—Arabian Nights, vol. iv. p. 236, &c.

PAGE 55.—and implore you to enter his humble habitation.

It has long been customary for the Arabs to change their habitations with the seasons. Thus Antara :—

"Thou hast possessed thyself of my heart ; thou hast fixed thy abode, and art settled there, as a beloved and cherished inhabitant.

"Yet how can I visit my fair one, whilst her family have their vernal mansion in Oneizatain, and mine are stationed in Ghaillem ?"

Xenophon relates, in his Anabasis, that it was customary for the kings of Persia θερίζειν και επιζειν, to pass the summer and spring in Susa and Ecbatana ; and Plutarch observes further, that their winters were spent in Babylon, their summers in Media (that is, Ecbatana), and the pleasantest part of spring in Susa : Καιτοι τουσγε Περσων βασιλευς εμακαριζον εν Βαβυλωνι τον χειμωνα διαγοντας εν δε Μηδια το θερος εν δε Σουσοις, το ηδιστον του ΕΑΡΟΣ.—De Exil. p. 604. This TO 'HAIΣΤON of the vernal season is exquisitely described by Solomon :—

"Lo, the winter is past, the rain is over ; it is gone. The flowers appear on the earth, the season of singing is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land. The fig-tree putteth forth her green figs, and the vines with the tender grape give a good smell. Arise, my love, my fair one, and come away."

PAGE 55.—an emerald set in lead.

As nothing, at the opening of spring, can exceed the luxuriant vegetation of these irriguous valleys, so, no term could be chosen more expressive of their verdure. The prophet Ezekiel, emblematising Tyre under the symbol of Paradise, hath described, by the different gems of the East, the flowers that variegated its surface ; and particularly, by the emerald, its green :

"Thou hast been in Eden, the garden of God : יקרח מסכתך בל-אבן—thy carpet was an assemblage of every precious stone; the ruby, the topaz, and the diamond; the chrysolite, the onyx, and the jasper; the sapphire, the emerald."*—Ch. xxviii. 13. It hath not, perhaps, been hitherto observed, that the Paradise of Ariosto was copied from hence:—

"Zaffir, rubini, oro, topazj, e perle,
E diamanti, e chrysoliti, e giacinti
Potriano i fiori assimigliar, che per le
Liete piagge v' avea l' aura dipinti.
Si verdi l' erbe, che potendo averle
Qua giù, ne suran gli smeraldi vinti."

Canto xxxiv. sl. 49.

When Gray, in his description of Grasmere, spoke of its "meadows green as an emerald"—he might have added, also, the circumstance noted by our author, beset with mountains of the hue of lead. Shakspeare, in a similar comparison, hath denominated our green England,

"This precious stone set in the silver sea."

PAGE 56.—sugar.

Dr. Pocock mentions the sugar-cane as a great dessert in Egypt; and adds, that, besides coarse loaf-sugar and sugar-candy, it yields a third sort, remarkably fine, which is sent to the Grand Seigneur, and prepared only for himself.—Travels, vol. i. pp. 183, 204. The jeweller's son, in the Story of the Third Calender, desires the prince to fetch some melon and sugar, that he might refresh himself with them.—Arab. Nights, vol. i. p. 159.

PAGE 56.—red characters.

The laws of Draco are recorded by Plutarch, in his Life of Solon, to have been written in blood. If more were meant by this expression, than that those laws were of a sanguinary nature, they would furnish the earliest instance of the use of red characters, which were afterwards considered as appropriate to supreme authority, and employed to denounce some requisition or threatening design to strike terror. According to Suidas, this manner of writing was, likewise, practised in magic rites. Hence their application in the instance here mentioned. Trotz in Herrn. Hugonem, pp. 206, 307. Suidas sub voc. Θερραλῆ γυνή.

* The same kind of imagery abounds in the Oriental poets. Thus, Abu Nawas:—

"Behold the gardens of the earth, and consider the emblems of those things which Divine power hath formed: eyes of silver (daisies) everywhere disclosed, with pupils like molten gold, united to an emerald stalk: these avouch that no one is equal to God."

So, likewise, Sadi:—

"He hath planted rubies and emeralds on the hard rock: the ruby rose on its emerald stem,"

And Ebn Rumi, of the violet:—"It is not a flower, but an emerald bearing a purple gem."

PAGE 56.—thy body shall be spit upon.

There was no mark of contempt amongst the Easterns so ignominious as this.—Arab. Nights, vol. i. p. 115; vol. iv. p. 275. It was the same in the days of Job. Herodotus relates of the Medes, ITYEIN arrior AIXXPON eoti, and Xenophon relates, AIXXPON eoti Neprais to AHOITYEIN. Hence the reason is evident for spitting on our Saviour.

PAGE 56.—bats will nestle in thy belly.

Bats in these countries were very abundant, and, both from their numbers and nature, held in abhorrence. See what is related of them by Thevenot, part i. pp. 132, 133; Egmont and Hayman, vol. ii. p. 87, and other travellers in the East.

PAGE 57.—the Bismillah. ¶

This word (which is prefixed to every chapter of the Koran except the ninth) signifies, "in the name of the most merciful God." It became not the initiatory formula of prayer till the time of Moez the Fatimite.—D'Herbelot, p. 326.

Ablution is of an origin long prior to Mahomet. It is mentioned in Homer, and alluded to by the Psalmist:—

"I will wash my hands in innocency, and so will I compass thine altar, O Lord."

Again: "Verily have I cleansed my heart in vain, and washed my hands in innocency."

PAGE 58.—a vast wood of palm trees.

Perhaps the palm is nowhere more abundant than in this region, that only excepted to which Virgil refers, in a passage as yet not explained:—

"Primus Idumæas referam tibi, Mantua, palmas."

If the ingenuousness and delicacy of a right reverend critic (who is said to have owed his present dignity to a note on the context) had not been long known,* an ordinary reader might be startled at the resemblance between his lordship's critique and Catrou's; whilst a fastidious one, in a splenetic mood, might apply, like another Edwards, the marks of imitation, as so many canons to annoy their founder. The hypothesis, however, of Hartley, Priestley, and those other physiologists, who have so clearly deduced the phenomena of mind from organisation, and traced back the coincidences of thought to predisposing motives and similar associations, will enable us, on the idea of an internal conformity between the critics, to account for their congruity of writing, without leaving room to surmise, that the one ever heard of the other. Not a breath then of Achan, and his wedge of gold!

Catrou, supposing that Virgil meditated the improvement of his writings, after an excursion to Greece and Asia, translates ego in patriam rediens, by à mon retour en ITALIE; but the restricted sense in which the poet delights to apply patria (as in his first Eclogue:—

* See the Tract entitled "On the Delicacy of Friendship, a seventh dissertation, addressed to the author of the sixth."

"Nos patriæ fines, et dulcia linquimus arva, Nos patriam fugimus"—)

as well as the mention of Mantua and the Mincius, precludes this more extended construction. If, therefore, ego in patriam rediens be literally taken, it will rather mark the design of Virgil to retire from Rome to the sequestered scenes of his native Mantua; where he was first smitten with the love of song, and whither he purposes to bring the sisterhood of the muses. But the clause least understood is that which immediately follows:—

"Primus Idumæas referam tibi, Mantua, palmas."

Catrou hath inferred from it that Virgil actually projected a voyage to the Levant—to fetch palms, no doubt! The bishop, however, after remarking that the poet, having held himself forth as a conqueror, and declared the object of his conquest to have been bringing the Muses captive from Greece, subjoins "The palmy triumphal entry, which was usual to victors on their return from foreign successes, follows—

"Primus Idumæas referam tibi, Mantua, palmas."

But, with the deference due to so venerable a critic, will this explication suffice? for, may it not be asked,—If to celebrate a triumph for foreign successes, palms from Idumæa were requisite? if victors were accustomed to go thither for them, previous to their triumphal entry? or (allowing Idumæas to be, sine mente sonum, a word without meaning*) how it could happen that the palmy triumphal entry should have been usual to victors, and yet Virgil the first whose success was to be graced with it?

"Primus Idumæas referam—palmas."

It is observable that this book of the Georgics opens with proposing its subject, the novelty of which induces the author to remark that, as the usual themes of the Roman poets were all become trite, it would be his aim to seek fame from foreign acquisitions, and his purpose to aggrandise the glory of his country by subjecting to its language the poetical beauties of Greece and Judæa.

If it be admitted that, under the allegory of leading the Muses (who were peculiar to Greece) from the summit of the Aonian mount, the poet intended to characterise the loftiest flights of Grecian poetry, or the Epic; † it follows

* Thus, also, Martyn, because Idumæa was famous for palms, interprets Idumæas palmas, "palms, in general;" and Heyne: Idumæas autem palmas poetico plane epitheto appellabat, a nobili aliquo genere;" yet he immediately adds: "Idumen poetæ pro Idumæa ac tota Judæa dicunt, quam quidem palmis frequentem fuisse notatum est:—arbusto palmarum dives Idume. Lucan. iii. 216."

† It was in this light that the Æneis was regarded by Propertius, who exclaims in reference to it (B. II. El. xxxiv. v. 65):—

—— Cedite Graii,
Nescio quid majus nascitur Iliade!

[The

from parity of reason that, under the symbol of their country,* he equally designed the prophetic strains of the Hebrews :—

“Primus ego in patriam mecum, modo vita supersit,
Anio rediens deducam vertice Musas :
Primus Idumæas referam tibi, Mantua, palmas.”

The verb referam in connection with tibi Mantua, implies that Virgil had already brought Idumæan palms to his natal soil ; and what these meant is abundantly plain. For, whoever will compare the Fourth Eclogue with the prophecy of Isaiah, must perceive too close an agreement to suppose that the same images, under similar combinations, and both new to a Roman poet, should have occurred to Virgil rather from chance, than a previous perusal of the prophet† in Greek.

It only remains, then, to be inquired, whether Virgil, after having introduced in his pastorals some of the prophetic traits of Hebrew poetry, any further availed himself of it in the Epic here projected ? For a satisfactory answer to this question, it might suffice to reply, that if there be any characteristic which discriminates the Æneid more than another, it is the prophetic—

“In medio mihi Cæsar erit, templumque tenebit.”

As in the Pollio, the images employed by the prophet to prefigure the birth of the Messiah, and the blessings of his reign, were applied by the Roman poet to the birth of the expected son of Augustus ‡, and the return of the golden age under his auspices ; so, in the Æneid, he resumes the prediction, and applies it to Augustus himself :—

“Hic vir, hic est, tibi quem promitti sæpius audis
Augustus Cæsar, divi genus ; aurea condet
Sæcula qui rursus Latium, regnata per arva
Saturno quondam ; super et Garamantas et Indos
Proferet Imperium. Jacet extra sidera tellus
Extra anni solisque vias,” &c.

Æn. vi. 792.

The author of an elegant and masterly pamphlet, entitled Critical Observations on the Sixth Book of the Æneid (published by Elmsley, 1770), supposes Propertius, in the context, to have had his eye on the shield of Æneas ; but, from comparing the passage itself with the sixth elegy of the fourth book, it appears more likely that he alluded to the battle of Actium, as described in Æn. viii. 704.

* It was by this emblem that the Romans, on their coins, represented Judæa ; and particularly on the medal, to signalise its reduction :

“Beneath her Palm here sad Judæa weeps.”

† Tacitus mentions the ancient scriptures of the Jewish priests, as containing the prediction which Virgil is here supposed to have adopted. —Hist. l. v. § 13.

‡ By Scribonia, then pregnant of the infamous Julia. See Bishop Chandler's Vindication, and Masson's Dissertation subjoined.

PAGE 58.—inscription.

Inscriptions of this sort are still retained. Thus Ludeke: Interni non solum Divani plurimumque conclavium parietes, sed etiam frontispicia super portas inscriptiones habent.—Expositio, p. 54. In the history of Amine, we find an inscription over a gate, in letters of gold, analogous to this of Fakreddin: "Here is the abode of everlasting pleasures and content."—Arab. Nights, vol. i. p. 198.

PAGE 58.—a magnificent teethtrean.

This kind of moving throne, though more common at present than in the days of Vathek, is still confined to persons of the highest rank.

PAGE 58.—her light brown hair floated in the hazy breeze of the twilight.

Literally, hyacinthine. The metaphor taken from this flower, expressed by the word Sumbul, is familiar to the Arabians. Thus, in Sir William Jones's Solima, an eclogue made up of Eastern images—

"The fragrant hyacinths of Azza's hair,
That wanton with the laughing summer air."

Nor was it less common to the Greeks. Perhaps Milton, in the following lines—

"Hyacinthin locks
Round from his parted forelock manly hung Clustering, but not beneath his shoulders broad—" adopted it from Lucian. The term manly, with the restriction at the close, gives full scope for this conjecture; as, in Lucian, the descriptions relate only to women. The poet may be further traced upon the snow of the classics, in the use of the term clustering; an equivalent expression being appropriated by the ancients to that disposition of the curls which resembles the growth of grapes, and may be observed on gems, coins, and statues.—Plutarch Consol. Apoll. p. 196.

It is singular that both Lexicographers and critics should have considered βοτρυχαιτης and βοτρυχοσμος, as synonymous. This confusion, however, appears to have arisen from both being attributes of Bacchus; whose hair was not only adorned with clusters from the vine, but, like the locks of Apollo (πλοκμοι ΒΟΤΡΥΟΕΝΤΕΣ. Apollon, Αργον. B. 677), was itself clustering.*

Sir William Jones acutely conjectures, that Solomon alluded to the hair, in that elliptical speech of the Shulamite, Song, i. 14:—

אֶשְׁכֵּל הַכֶּפֶר דּוּרִי לִי בְּכֶרְמִי עֵין נָדִי

"A cluster of grapes, &c."

* Winkelmann hath strangely fixed upon the reverse of this character, as an exclusive property of these divinities, and so infallible a criterion does he make it, as even from it alone to ascertain their mutilated statues.—Hist. de l'Art d'Antiq. tom. ii. p. 146. However, in another part of his work, he refers to Plutarch, as cited above.

The like epithet, though adopted from a different fruit, occurs in the poem of Amriolkais :

“ Her long coal-black hair decorated her back, thick and diffused, like bunches of dates, clustering on the palm tree.”

The diffusion of hair here noticed, and its floating as described by our author, are circumstances so frequent in the works of Hafiz and Jami, that there is scarcely a page of them in which the idea of the breeze playing with the tresses of a beautiful girl is not agreeably and variously expressed.* An instance from Petrarch, resembling their manner, may be seen in the lines that follow :—

“ Aura, che quelle chiome bionde e crespe
Circondi, e movi, e se' mossa da loro
Scavemente, e spargi quel dolce oro,
E poi'l raccogli, e'n bei nodi'l rincrespe.”
Son. exci.

PAGE 59.—your ivory limbs.

The Arabians compare the skin of a beautiful woman to the egg of the ostrich, when preserved unsullied.† Thus Amriolkais :

“ Delicate was her shape ; fair her skin ; and her body well proportioned : her bosom was as smooth as a mirror,—

“ Or like the pure egg of an ostrich, of a yellowish tint blended with white.”

Also the Koran :—“ Near them shall lie the virgins of Paradise, refraining their looks from beholding any besides their spouses, having large black eyes, and resembling the eggs of an ostrich, covered with feathers from dust.”—Moallakat, p. 8. Al Koran, ch. 27.

But though the Arabian epithet be taken from thence, yet the word ivory is substituted, as more analogous to European ideas, and not foreign from the Eastern. Thus Amru :—

“ And two sweet breasts, smooth and white as vessels of ivory, modestly defended from the hand of those who presume to touch them.”—Moallakat, p. 77.

* Preface to Jones's Poems, p. xii.

† A fair skin is likened by the Italian poets to curd : thus, Bracciolini :—

—— i suoi teneri membri un latte sieno
Che tremolante, ma non rotto ancora,
Pose accorto Pastor su i verdi giunchi.

Amoroso Sdegno, iii. 2.

Likewise, Tasso :—

—— egli rivolse
I cupidi occhi in quelle membra belle,
Che, come suole tremolare, il latte
Ne giunchi, sì parean morbide, e bianche.

Aminta, iii. 1.

PAGE 59.—Baths of rose-water.

The use of perfumed waters for the purpose of bathing is of an early origin in the East, where every odoriferous plant sheds a richer fragrance than is known to our more humid climates. The rose which yields this lotion is, according to Hasselquist, of a beautiful pale blush colour, double, large as a man's fist, and more exquisite in scent than any other species. The quantities of this water distilled annually at Fajhum, and carried to distant countries, is immense. The mode of conveying it is in vessels of copper coated with wax.—Voyag. p. 248. Ben Jonson makes Volpone say to Celia :—

"Their bath shall be the juyce of gillyflowres, Spirit of roses and of violets."

PAGE 59.—amuse you with tales.

Thus, in the story of Alraoui :—"There was an emir of Grand Cairo, whose company was no less coveted for his genius than his rank. Being one day in a melancholy mood, he turned towards a courtier, and said : 'Alraoui, my heart is dejected, and I know not the cause ; relate to me some pleasant story, to dispel my chagrin.' Alraoui replied : 'The great have with reason regarded tales as the best antidote to care ; if you will allow me, I will tell you my own.'"—Translated from one of the unpublished MSS. mentioned in the Preface. "The Arabian Nights," saith Colonel Capper, in his Observations on the Passage to India through Egypt and across the great Desert, "are by many people supposed to be a spurious production, and are therefore slighted in a manner they do not deserve. They are written by an Arabian, and are universally read and admired throughout Asia, by persons of all ranks, both old and young. Considered, therefore, as an original work, descriptive as they are of the manners and customs of the East in general, and also of the genius and character of the Arabians in particular, they surely must be thought to merit the attention of the curious ; nor are they, in my opinion, entirely destitute of merit in other respects ; for although the extravagance of some of the stories is carried too far, yet, on the whole, one cannot help admiring the fancy and invention of the author, in striking out such a variety of pleasing incidents. Pleasing, I call them, because they have frequently afforded me much amusement ; nor do I envy any man his feelings who is above being pleased with them ; but, before any person decides on the merit of these books, he should be eye-witness of the effects they produce on those who best understand them. I have, more than once, seen the Arabians of the Desert, sitting round a fire, listening to these stories with such attention and pleasure, as totally to forget the fatigue and hardship with which, an instant before, they were totally overcome. In short, they are held in the same estimation all over Asia as the adventures of Don Quixote are in Spain."

If the observation of the Knight of la Mancha, respecting translation in general, be just,—"me parece, que el traducir de una lengua en otra, es como quien mira los tapices flamencos por el reverso, que aunque se ven las figuras, son llenas de hilos que las oscurecen, y no se ven con la lisura y tez de la haz,"—the wrong side of tapestry will represent more truly the figures on the right, notwithstanding the floss that blurs them, than any version, the precision and smoothness of the Arabian surface. The prospect of a rich country in all the glories of summer, is not more different from its November appearance, than the original of those tales when opposed to the French translation, of which, it may be added, our version is at best but a moonlight view.—

———— “palhada la luna
Tingea d' un lume scolorito e incerto
La vasta solitudine terrena.”

PAGE 59.—lamb à la crème.

No dish among the Easterns was more generally admired. The Caliph Abdolmelek, at a splendid entertainment, to which whoever came was welcome, asked Amrou, the son of Hareth, what kind of meat he preferred to all others. The old man answered, “An ass’s neck, well seasoned and roasted.”—“But what say you,” replied the caliph, “to the leg or shoulder of a LAMB à la crème ?” and added,—

“How sweetly we live if a shadow would last !”

—M. S. Land. Numb. 161. A. Ockley’s Hist. of the Saracens, vol. ii. p. 277.

PAGE 59.—made the dwarfs dance against their will.

Ali Chelebi al Moufti, in a treatise on the subject, held that dancing, after the example of the derviches, who made it a part of their devotion, was allowable. But in this opinion he was deemed to be heterodox; for Mahometans, in general, place dancing amongst the things that are forbidden.—D’Herbelot, p. 98.

PAGE 59.—durst not refuse the commander of the faithful.

The mandates of Oriental potentates have ever been accounted irresistible. Hence the submission of these devotees to the will of the caliph.—Esther, i. 19. Daniel, vi. 8. Ludeke Expos. brevis, p. 60.

PAGE 59.—he spread himself on the sofa.

The idiom of the original occurs in Euripides, and is from him adopted by Milton:—

Ιδετε τον Γερωντ’ αμαλον επι πεδω
XYMENON’ ω ταλας.

Heraclida, v. 75.

“See how he lies at random, carelessly diffus’d,
With languished head unpropt,
As one past hope, abandon’d
And by himself given over.”

Sampson, v. 118.

PAGE 46.—properly lubricated with the balm of Mecca.

Unguents, for reasons sufficiently obvious, have been of general use in hot climates. According to Pliny, “at the time of the Trojan war, they consisted of oils perfumed with the odours of flowers, and chiefly of ROSES,"—whence the 'ΡΟΔΟΕΝ ελαιον of Homer. Hasselquist speaks of oil impregnated with the tuberose and jessamine; but the unguent here mentioned was preferred to every other. Lady M. W. Montagu, desirous to try its effects, seems to have suffered materially from having improperly applied it.

PAGE 60.—if their eyebrows and tresses were in order.

As perfuming and decorating the hair of the sultanas was an essential duty of their attendants, the translator hath ventured to substitute the term tresses, for another more exact to the original. In Don Quixote, indeed, a waiting woman of the duchess mentions the same services with our author, but as performed by persons of her own sex:—"Hay en Candaya mugeres que andan de casa en casa á quitar el vello, y á pulir las cejas, y hacer otros menjurges tocantes a mugeres, nosotras las dueñas de mi señora por jamas quisimos admitirlas, porque las mas oliscan á tarceras." Tom. iv. cap. xl. p. 42.

Other offices of the dressing-room and toilet may be seen in Lucian, vol. ii. Amor, 39, p. 441. The Arabians had a preparation of antimony and galls, with which they tinged the eyebrows of a beautiful black; and great pains were taken to shape them into regular arches. In combing the hair, it was customary to sprinkle it with perfumes, and to dispose it in a variety of becoming forms.—Richardson's Dissertat. p. 481. Lady M. W. Montagu's Letters.

PAGE 60.—the nine hundred and ninety-ninth time.

The Mahometans boast of a doctor who is reported to have read over the Koran not fewer than twenty thousand times.—D'Herbelot, p. 75.

PAGE 60.—black eunuchs, sabre in hand.

In this manner the apartments of the ladies were constantly guarded. Thus, in the Story of the Enchanted Horse, Firouz Schah, traversing a strange palace by night, entered a room, "and by the light of a lantern saw that the persons he had heard snoring were black eunuchs with naked sabres by them, which was enough to inform him that this was the guard-chamber of some queen or princess."—Arabian Nights, vol. iv. p. 189.

PAGE 61.—Nouronihar, daughter of the Emir, was sprightly as an antelope, and full of wanton gaiety.

Solomon has compared his bride to "a company of horses in Pharaoh's chariots;" Horace, a sportive young female to an untamed filly; Sophocles, a delicate virgin to a wild heifer; Ariosto, Angelica to a fawn or kid; and Tasso, Erminia to a hind; but the object of resemblance adopted by our author is of superior beauty to them all.

PAGE 61.—to let down the great swing.

The swing was an exercise much used in the apartments of the Eastern ladies, and not only contributed to their health, but also to their amusement.—Tales of Inaiulla, vol. i. p. 259.

PAGE 61.—I accept the invitation of your honied lips.

Uncommon as this idiom may appear in our language, it was not so, either to the Hebrew or the Greek. Compare Proverbs xvi. 24—

צוֹף־דָּבַשׁ אִמְרֵ־נָעַם

with Homer, Iliad α. 249—

Του καὶ ἀπο γλωσσης ΜΕΛΙΤΟΣ γλυκίων ῥέεν ἀνδρῆ.

Theocritus, Idyl. xx. 26—

— Εὐ ΣΤΟΜΑΤΩΝ δε

Ἐρῶτε μοι ΦΩΝΑ γλυκερωτέρα ἢ ΜΕΛΙΚΗΡΩ.

And Solomon's Song, iv. 11—

נֶפֶת חֲטָפְנָה שְׁפָתוֹתַי כֻּלָּה דָּבַשׁ

with Moschus, Idyl. i. 9—

— — — — — ἀδὺν ΔΑΔΗΜΑ·
— — — — — ὥς ΜΕΛΙ, φωνῶν.

An Arabian fabulist, enumerating the charms of a consummate beauty, hath used the identical expression of our author; but probably in an extended sense, as—

— — — — — “from her lip

Not words alone pleased him.”

PAGE 62.—my senses are dazzled with the radiance that beams from your charms.

Or (to express an idiom for which we have no substitute), thy countenance, rayonnante de beautés et de graces. Descriptions of this kind are frequent in Arabian writers; thus, Tarafa:

“Her face appears to be wrapped in a veil of sunbeams.”

And, in the Arabian Nights: “Schemselnihar came forward amongst her attendants, with a majesty resembling the sun amidst the clouds; which receive his splendour, without concealing his lustre.” To account for this compliment in the mouth of Bababalouk, we should remember that he was, ex officio, elegans formarum Spectator.

PAGE 62.—melodious Philomel, I am thy rose.

The passion of the nightingale for the rose is celebrated over all the East. Thus Mesihî, as translated by Sir W. Jones:—

“Come, charming maid, and hear thy poet sing,
Thyself the rose, and he the bird of spring:
Love bids him sing, and love will be obey'd,
Be gay: too soon the flowers of spring will fade.”

PAGE 63.—oil spilt in breaking the lamps.

It appears from Thevenot that illuminations were usual on the arrival of a stranger, and he mentions, on an occasion of this sort, two hundred lamps being lighted. The quantity of oil, therefore, spilt by Bababalouk may be easily accounted for from this custom.

PAGE 63.—reclining on down.

See Lady M. W. Montagu. Let. xvi.

PAGE 64.—alanders.

These were a sort of men amongst the Mahometans, who abandoned father and mother, wife and children, relations and possessions, to wander through the world, under a pretence of religion, entirely subsisting on the fortuitous bounty of those they had the address to dupe.—D'Herbelot, Suppl. p. 204.

PAGE 64.—santons.

A body of religionists, who were also called abdals, and pretended to be inspired with the most enthusiastic raptures of divine love. They were regarded by the vulgar as saints.—Olearius, tom. i. p. 971. D'Herbelot, p. 5.

PAGE 64.—derviches.

The term dervich signifies a poor man, and is the general appellation by which a religious amongst the Mahometans is named. There are, however, discriminations that distinguish this class from the others already mentioned. They are bound by no vow of poverty, they abstain not from marriage, and, whenever disposed, they may relinquish both their blue shirt and profession.—D'Herbelot, Suppl. 214. It is observable, that these different orders, though not established till the reign of Nasser al Samani, are notwithstanding mentioned by our author as coeval with Vathek, and by the author of the Arabian Nights, as existing in the days of Haroun al Raschid; so that the Arabian fabulists appear as inattentive to chronological exactness in points of this sort as our immortal dramatist himself.

PAGE 64.—Brahmins.

These constituted the principal caste of the Indians, according to whose doctrine Brahma, from whom they are called, is the first of the three created beings by whom the world was made. This Brahma is said to have communicated to the Indians four books, in which all the sciences and ceremonies of their religion are comprised. The word Brahma, in the Indian language, signifies pervading all things. The Brahmins lead a life of most rigid abstinence, refraining not only from the use, but even the touch, of animal food; and are equally exemplary for their contempt of pleasures and devotion to philosophy and religion.—D'Herbelot, p. 212. Bruckeri Hist. Philosoph. tom. i. p. 194.

PAGE 64.—faquirs.

This sect were a kind of religious anchorets, who spent their whole lives in the severest austerities and mortification. It is almost impossible for the imagination to form an extravagance that has not been practised by some of them, to torment themselves. As their reputation for sanctity rises in proportion to their sufferings, those amongst them are revered the most, who are most ingenious in the invention of tortures, and persevering in enduring them. Hence some have persisted in sitting or standing for years together in one unvaried posture, supporting an almost intolerable burden, dragging the most cumbrous chains, exposing their naked bodies to the scorching sun, and hanging with the head downward before the fiercest fires.—Relig. Cereimon. vol. iii. p. 264, &c. Whitt's Sermons, p. 504.

PAGE 64.—some that cherished vermin.

In this attachment they were not singular, The Emperor Julian not only discovered the same partialty, but celebrated, with visible complacency, the shaggy and populous beard which he fondly cherished; and even "The Historian of the Roman Empire" affirms, "that the little animal is a beast familiar to man, and signifies love."—Vol. ii. p. 343.

PAGE 65.—Visnow and Ixhora.

Two deities of the East Indians, concerning whose history and adventures more nonsense is related than can be found in the whole compass of mythology besides. The traditions of their votaries are, no doubt, allegorical; but without a key to disclose their mystic import, they are little better than senseless jargon.

PAGE 65.—talapoins.

This order, which abounds in Siam, Laos, Pegu, and other countries, consists of different classes, and both sexes, but chiefly of men.—Relig. Cereimon. vol. iv. p. 62, &c.

PAGE 65.—objects of pity were sure to swarm around him.

Ludeke mentions the practice of bringing those who were suffering under any calamity, or had lost the use of their limbs, &c., into public, for the purpose of exciting compassion. On an occasion, therefore, of this sort, when Fakreddin, like a pious Mussulman, was publicly to distribute his alms, and the commander of the faithful to make his appearance, such an assemblage might well be expected. The Eastern custom of regaling a convention of this kind is of great antiquity, as is evident from the parable of the king in the Gospels, who entertained the maimed, the lame, and the blind; nor was it discontinued when Dr. Pocock visited the East.—Vol. i. p. 182.

PAGE 66.—horns of an exquisite polish.

Jacinto Polo de Medina, in one of his epigrams, has as unexpected a turn on the same topic:—

"Cavando un sepulcro un hombre
Sacó largo, corvo y grueso,
Entre otros muchos, un hueso,
Que tiene cuerno por nombre:
Volviólo al sepulchro al punto:
Y viéndolo un cortesano.
Dijo: bien hacéis, hermano,
Que es hueso de ese defunto."

PAGE 66.—small plates of abominations.

The Koran hath established several distinctions relative to different kinds of food, in imitation of the Jewish prescriptions; and many Mahometans are so scrupulous as not to touch the flesh of any animal over which, in articulo mortis, the butcher had omitted to pronounce the Bismillah.—Relig. Cereimon. vol. vii. p. 110.

PAGE 66.—fish which they drew from a river.

According to Le Bruyn, the Oriental method of fishing with a line, is by winding it round the finger, and when the fisherman feels that the bait is taken, he draws in the string with alternate hands: in this way, he adds, a good dish of fish is soon caught.—Tom. i. p. 564. It appears, from a circumstance related by Galand, that Vathek was fond of this amusement.—D'Herbelot, Suppl. p. 210.

PAGE 66.—Sinai.

This mountain is deemed by Mahometans the noblest of all others, and even regarded with the highest veneration, because the divine law was promulgated from it.—D'Herbelot, p. 812.

PAGE 67.—Peris.

The word Peri, in the Persian language, signifies that beautiful race of creatures which constitutes the link between angels and men. The Arabians call them Ginn, or genii, and we (from the Persian, perhaps) Faeries: at least the peris of the Persian romance correspond to that imaginary class of beings in our poetical system. The Italians denominate them Fata, in allusion to their power of charming and enchanting; thus the Manta Fatidica of Virgil is rendered in Orlando, La Fato Manto. The term ginn being common to both peris and dives, some have erroneously fancied that the peris were female dives. This appellation, however, served only to discriminate their common nature from the angelic and human, without respect to their qualities, moral or personal. Thus, the dives are hideous and wicked, whilst the peris are beautiful and good. Amongst the Persian poets, the beauty of the peris is proverbial: insomuch that a woman superlatively handsome is styled by them, the offspring of a Peri.

PAGE 68.—butterflies of Cachemire.

The same insects are celebrated in an unpublished poem of Mesihi, another of the MSS. mentioned in the Preface. Sir Anthony Shirley relates, that it was customary in Persia “to hawk after butterflies with sparrows, made to that use, and stares.” It is, perhaps, to this amusement that our author alludes in the context.

PAGE 68.—I had rather that his teeth should mischievously press my finger.

These molles morsiunculae remind one of Lesbia and her sparrow:—

“Passer, deliciæ meæ puellæ,
Quicum ludere, quem in sinu tenere,
Quoi primum digitum dare adpetenti,
Et acres solet incitare morsus.”

In the Story of the Sleeper Awakened (which the Induction to the Taming of the Shrew greatly resembles), Abon Hassan thus addresses the lady that was brought him;—“Come hither, fair one, and bite the end of my finger *

* Ἄλλ' ἐπὶ λεκτρον ἰων, ἀκρον δακτυλον καταδακνῶ.

Homer. Batrach. v. 45.

that I may feel whether I am asleep or awake."—Arabian Nights, vol. iii. p. 137. Lady Percy, with all the fondness of insinuation, practises on her wayward Hotspur a blandishment similar to that here instanced by Nourou-nihar:—

"Come, come, you paraquito, answer me
Directly to this question that I ask.
In faith, I'll break thy little finger, Harry,
An if thou wilt not tell me all things true."

PAGE 69.—Megounn and Leilah.

These personages are esteemed amongst the Arabians as the most beautiful, chaste, and impassioned of lovers; and their amours have been celebrated with all the charms of verse, in every Oriental language. The Mahometans regard them, and the poetical records of their love, in the same light as the Bridegroom and Spouse, and the Song of Songs, are regarded by the Jews.—D'Herbelot, p. 576.

PAGE 70.—They still detained him in the harem.

Nouredin, who was as old as Gulchenrouz, had a similar indulgence of resorting to the harem, and no less availed himself of it.—Arab. Nights, vol. iii. pp. 9, 10.

PAGE 70.—dart the lance in the chase.

Throwing the lance was a favourite pastime with the young Arabians; and so expert were they in this practice (which prepared them for the mightier conflicts, both of the chase and of war), that they could bear off a ring on the points of their javelins.—Richardson's Dissertation, pp. 198, 281. Though the ancients had various methods of hunting, yet the two which chiefly prevailed were those described by Virgil*, and alluded to by Solomon.†—Prov. vii. 22

* Dum trepidant ALÆ, saltusque indagine cingunt.

Æn. iv. 121.

Notwithstanding the explanations of alæ, which have been given by Servius, Burman, and others, there can scarce be a doubt but that Virgil referred to the custom of scaring deer into holts; with feathers fastened on lines; a practice so effectual to the purpose, that Linnæus characterised the Dama, or Fallow Deer, from it:—arctetur filo horizontali. The same stratagem is mentioned in the Georgics (iii. 371):—

Puniceæve agitant pavidos formidine Pinnae:

and again, in the Æneid (xii. 749):—

Inclusum veluti si quando flumine nactus

Cervum, aut Puniceæ septum formidine Pinnae.

It is observable, however, that the poet, in these instances, hath studiously varied his mode of expression. The sportsmen of Italy used pinion feathers, which, the better to answer their purpose, they dyed of a Lybian red;† but,

† Lybice fucantur sandyce pinnae.

Gratii Cyneg. v. 86.

† For note, see page 168.

PAGE 70.—nor curb the steeds.

Though Gulchenrouz was too young to excel in horseman-ship, it nevertheless was an essential accomplishment amongst the Arabians. Hence the boast of Amriolkais :—

as Africa abounded in birds whose wings were impregnated with the spontaneous and glossy tincture of nature, such an expedient in that country must have been needless. If we advert, then, to the scene of Dido's chase, the reason will be obvious why Virgil omitted funicea, and for finna substituted ala.

There is a passage in Nemesianus, which will at once confirm the interpretation here given, and illustrate the judgment of the poet in the choice of terms :—

"Hinc (sc. ex Africa) mage Puniceas nativo munere sumes :
Nanque illic sine fine, greges florentibus alis
Invenies avium, suavique rubescere luto."

Cynegeticon, v. 317.

† The wide region of conjectural emendation cannot produce a happier instance of critical skill than was discovered by that accurate and judicious scholar, the late Dr. Hunt¹ ; who when the sense of the passage referred to had, for ages, been lost, sagaciously restored it by curtailing a letter.—Proverbs, vii. 22.

As an hart (לַיִן for לֵיִן) boundeth into the toils, till a dart strike through his liver :—

When the game driven together, were either circumvented, as described by Virgil ; or ensnared by the foot (ποδοστραβη) as alluded to by Solomon, the hunters despatched them with their missile weapons. Thus Xenophon (as cited in Dr. Hunt's Dissertation), Χρηδ' εαν ουτως ελη—εαν μει η αρην μη προσιεναι εγγυς τοις γαρ κερασι παiei, και τοις ποσιν αποθει ονν ΑΚΟΝΤΙΖΕΙΝ.—"When the animal is thus caught, you must not, if it be a male, advance within his reach, for they are apt to strike with their horns and their heels ; it will be proper therefore to Pierce him at a distance."

¹ The correction with the context is this :—

22 He goeth after her straightway,
As an ox goeth to the slaughter ;
23 Or as an hart boundeth into the toils,
Till a dart strike through his liver :
24 As a bird hasteth to the snare,
And knoweth not that it is for his life.

Dr. Jubb well imagined (though he hath ill rendered יָרַדָּה in the 21st verse, Irretivit illum) that the heedless haste of the bird towards the snare might [be

"Often have I risen at early dawn, while the birds were yet in their nests, and mounted a hunter with smooth short hair, of a full height; and so fleet as to make captive the beasts of the forests.

"Ready in turning, quick in pursuing, bold in advancing, firm in backing; and performing the whole with the strength and swiftness of a vast rock which a torrent has pushed from its lofty base.

"A bright bay steed, from whose polished back the trappings slide, as drops of rain slide hastily down the slippery marble.

* * * *

"He makes the light youth slide from his seat, and violently shakes the skirts of a heavier and more stubborn rider."—Moallakat, p. 10.

The stud of Fakreddin consisted, no doubt, of as noble a breed; though sprung neither from "the mighty Tartar horse" (whose gigantic rider was slain by Codadad), nor the size of Clavilefio, "and the wondrous horse of brass." Milton's allusion to the last having occasioned much fruitless enquiry concerning his pedigree,* it shall here be made out, with that of his brother:—

be caused by the lure of a female's call; and adduced from Oppian an apposite example:—

Ἦ; δὲ τις οἰωνοῖσι μορὸν δολοῦντα φντεῦων
Θηλείαν θαμνοῖσι κατακρυπτέῃ λασιόισιν
Ορνῇ, ὁμογλωσσόιο συνεμπορὸν ἡθαδὰ θήρη;
Ἢ δὲ λίγα κλαζέι ξουθὸν μέλος, οἱ δ' αἰοντες
Παντες ἐπισπέρχουσι, καὶ ἐξ βροχὸν αὐτὸν ἰένται
Θηλυτέρης ἐνοπήσι παραπλάγχθεντες ἰωῆς

Halient, iv. 120.

As when the fowler to the fields resorts,
His caged domestic partner of his sports
Behind some shade-projecting bush he lays,
And wreaths the wiry cell with blooming sprays.
The pretty captive to the groves around
Warbles her practised care-deluding sound.
The attentive flocks pursue with ravisht' ear,
The female music of the feather'd fair,
Forget to see, and rush upon the snare.

JONES.

* "Among the MSS. at Oriel College in Oxford is an old Latin treatise, entitled Fabula de æneo caballo. Here I imagined I had discovered the origin of Chaucer's Squier's Tale, so replete with marvellous imagery, and evidently an Arabian fiction of the middle ages. But I was disappointed; for, on examination, it appeared to have not even a distant connection with Chaucer's story. I mention this, that others, on seeing such a title in the catalogue, might not be flattered with specious expectations of so curious a discovery, and misled, like myself, by a fruitless enquiry."—Warton's edit. of Milton's Poems, p. 82.

The principal qualities of "the Horse of Brass" were, that he was brought before the Tartar king, after the third course of a feast, which was solemnized at the commencement of spring; that he was able, within the compass of a natural day, to carry his rider wherever he might choose; that he could mount into the air, as high as an eagle, and with as equable and easy a motion; that by turning one pin, fixed in his ear, his course might be directed to a destined spot, and by means of another, he might be made to alight, or return to the place from whence he set out.

The particulars of Clavileño are, that he was the production of an enchanter; was capable of rising into the air with the velocity of an arrow, and carrying his rider to any distance; was put into motion by the turning of a pin on his neck; and directed in his course by another in his forehead: that he flected so steadily through the air, as not to spill a drop from a cup full of water in the hand of his rider; that, being lent by his owner, Pierres made a long voyage upon him, and brought off the fair Magalona, who alighted to become a queen; that Don Quixote, when high in the air, knew not the management of the pin, to prevent his rising; and that he, at last, vanished amidst rockets and crackers.

The resemblances here specified are evidently too strong to have resulted from accident; and it will appear, on further inquiry, that "the Enchanted Horse," in the Arabian Nights, was not only possessed of those qualities which were common to them both, but also of such as were peculiar to each. Thus—

He was presented to the king of Persia at the close of a festival, which was celebrated on the opening of spring; could transport his rider, and in the space of a day, wherever he listed; moved so smoothly as to cause no shock, even on coming on the ground; could soar above the ken of every beholder; might be guided, by turning a pin in the hollow of his neck, to any point his rider should choose; and by means of another behind his right ear, be made to descend, or return whence he came; was the production of an enchanter; passed through the air with the speed of an arrow; having been lent by his owner to Firouz Schah, carried him a considerable distance, and brought back behind him the Princess of Bengal, to whom the prince was afterwards married; that Firouz Schah, when high in the air, was unable to manage the pin, so as to prevent him from rising; and, finally, that he made his last exit in an explosion of fire-works and smoke.*

PAGE 70.—the bow, however, he drew with a certain aim.

This, as well as the other accomplishments mentioned before, was a constituent part of an Eastern education. Thus, in the Story of the Sisters, who envied their Sister:—“When the princes were learning to mount the managed horse and to ride, the princess could not permit them to have that advantage over her, but went through all their exercises with them, learning to ride the great horse, dart the javelin, and bend the bow.”—Arab. Nights, vol. iv. p. 276.

* It may not be impertinent to subjoin, on a kindred subject, as no mention has been hitherto made of him, that the author of "The Touchstone, or paradoxes brought to the test of a rigorous and fair examination, printed for Noon, 1732," appears to have been the original projector of sailing through the air, in a boat appended to a ball.

PAGE 70.—The two brothers had mutually engaged their children to each other.

Contracts of this nature were frequent amongst the Arabians. Another instance occurs in the Story of Nouredin Ali and Bedreddin Hassan.

PAGE 70.—Nouronihar loved her cousin more than her own beautiful eyes.

This mode of expression not only occurs in the sacred writers, but also in the Greek and Roman. Thus, Moschus:—

Τοι μὲν ὦμα ΤΙΕΚΣΟΝ ΙΧΟΝ ΦΑΕΕΣΣΙΝ ΕΜΟΙΣΙΝ.

And Catullus says:—

“Quem plus illa oculis suis amabat.”

PAGE 70.—the same long, languishing looks.

So Ariosto:—

“—— negri occhi,——
Pietosi a riguardare, a mover parchi.”

The lines which follow, from Shakspeare and Spenser, may serve as a comment upon the brief but beautiful description of our Author.

Winter's Tale:—

“—— never gaz'd the moon
Upon the water as he'll stand, and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes.”

Faerie Queen:—*

“—— Her eyes, sweet smiling in delight,
Moystened their fierie beames, with which she thirld
Fraile hearts, yet quenched not; like starry light,
Which sparkling on the silent wave, does seeme more bright.”

PAGE 70.—with all the bashfulness of a fawn.

The fawn, as better known, is here substituted for the gazal of the Arabians, an animal uncommonly beautiful and shy:—

PAGE 70.—take refuge in the fond arms of Nouronihar.

* Ample scope is here left to the imagination of the reader, and Tasso will assist him to fill up the picture:—

“Sovra lui pende: ed ei nel grembo molle
Le posa il capo, e' l volto al volto attolle.”—La Gerusa. xvi. 18.

* Spenser seems to have copied this simile from Tasso:—
Qual raggio in onda, le scintilla un riso
Negli umidi occhi tremulo e lascivo.

PAGE 71.—Shaddukian and Ambreabad.

These were two cities of the peris, in the imaginary region of Ginnistan : the former signifies pleasure and desire, the latter, the city of Ambergris.—See Richardson's Dissertat. p. 169.

PAGE 73.—a spoon of cocknos.

The cocknos is a bird whose beak is much esteemed for its beautiful polish, and sometimes used as a spoon. Thus, in the History of Atalmulck and Zelica Begum, it was employed for a similar purpose :—"Zelica having called for refreshment, six old slaves instantly brought in and distributed Mahramas, and then served about in a great basin of Martabam, a salad made of herbs of various kinds, citron juice, and the pith of cucumbers. They served it first to the Princess in a cocknos beak : she took a beak of the salad, eat it, and gave another to the next slave that sat by her on her right hand ; which slave did as her mistress had done."

PAGE 75.—Gouls.

Goul, or ghul, in Arabic, signifies any terrifying object, which deprives people of the use of their senses. Hence it became the appellative of that species of monster which was supposed to haunt forests, cemeteries, and other lonely places ; and believed not only to tear in pieces the living, but to dig up and devour the dead.—Richardson's Dissert. pp. 174, 274.

That kind of insanity called by the Arabians Kutrub (a word signifying not only a wolf, but likewise a male Goul), which incites such as are afflicted with it to roam howling amidst those melancholy haunts, may cast some light on the nature of the possession recorded by St. Mark, ch. v. 1, &c.

PAGE 76.—feathers of the heron, all sparkling with carbuncles.

Panaches of this kind are amongst the attributes of Eastern royalty.—Tales of Inatulla, vol. ii. p. 205.

PAGE 76.—whose eyes pervade the inmost soul of a female.

The original, in this instance, as in the others already noticed, is more analogous to the French than the English idiom :—"Dont l'œil pénètre jusqu'à la moelle des jeunes filles."

PAGE 76.—the carbuncle of Giamschid.

This mighty potentate was the fourth sovereign of the dynasty of the Pischadians, and brother or nephew to Tahamurath. His proper name was Giam or Gem, and Schid, which in the language of the ancient Persians denominated the sun : an addition ascribed by some to the majesty of his person, and by others to the splendour of his actions. One of the most magnificent monuments of his reign was the city of Istakhar, of which Tahamurath had laid the foundations. This city, at present called Gihil, or Tchil-minar, from the forty columns reared in it by Homai, or (according to our author and others*) by Soliman Ben Daoud, was known to the

* Examen Critique des Anciens Historiens d'Alexandre le Grand, p. 287.

Greek by the name of Persepolis; and there is still extant in the East a tradition that, when Alexander burnt the edifices of the Persian kings, seven stupendous structures of Giamschid were consumed with his palace. This prince, after having subjected to his empire seven vast provinces of Upper Asia, and enjoyed in peace a long reign (which some authors have protracted to 700 years), became intoxicated with his greatness; and, foolishly fancying it would have no end, arrogated to himself divine honours. But the Almighty raised up, even in his own house, a terrible instrument to abase his pride, by whom he was easily overcome, and driven into exile.

The author of Giame al tavatikh mentions the cup, or concave mirror of Giamschid, formed of a gem, and called the cup of the sun. To this vessel the Persian poets often refer, and allegorize it in different ways. They attribute to it the property of exhibiting everything in the compass of nature, and even some things that are preternatural. The gem it consisted of appears to be the carbuncle, or oriental ruby; which, from its resemblance to a burning coal, and the splendour it was supposed to emit in the dark, was called Schebgerag, or, the torch of the night. According to Strabo, it obtained its high estimation amongst the Persians, who were worshippers of fire, from its igneous qualities; and perhaps those virtues for which it hath been styled "the first of stones."

Milton had a learned retrospect to its fabulous powers, in describing the Old Serpent:—

—— his head
Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes.—

Herbelot, p. 392, 395, 780, &c. Bright on Melancholic, p. 321. Paradise Lost, IX. 499.

PAGE 76.—the torches were extinguished.

From the emblems of royalty in the vision, and the closing declaration of the last voice, it is evident that these torches, λαμπάδας ἈΝΤΙ ΤΩΝ ΝΥΜΦΙΚΩΝ τοῦ ΔΑΙΜΟΝΟΣ ὁψάτορος, were lighted by the dive to prognosticate* the destined union of which the water in the bath was a further omen. Thus Lactantius:—"A veteribus institutum est, ut sacramento ignis et aquæ nuptiarum fœdera sanciantur, quod fœtus animantium calore et humore corporeantur atque animentur ad vitam. Unde aqua et igne uxorem accipere dicitur."—Ovid. Fast. iv. 792. Var. de Ling. Lat. iv. 10. Serv. ad Virg. Æn. iv. 167.

Of the union here prefigured, the sequel will allow to be added:—

Non Hymenæus adest illi, non gratia lecto;
Eumenides tenuere faces, de funere raptas;
Eumenides stravere torum.†

PAGE 76.—She clapped her hands.

This was the ordinary method in the East of calling the attendants in waiting.—See Arabian Nights, vol. i. pp. 5, 106, 193, &c.

* Mihi deductæ fax omen prætulit.

Propert. IV. iii. 13.

† See the History of Vafhek, p. 148, 165.

PAGE 77.—have you false keys? Come, to the dark chamber.

It was the office of Shaban, as chief eunuch, to keep the key of the ladies' apartment. In the story of Ganem, Haroun al Raschid commands Mesrour, the chief of the eunuchs, "to take the perfidious Fetnah, and shut her up in the dark tower." That tower was within the inclosure of the palace, and commonly served as a prison for the favourites who might chance to disgust the caliph.

PAGE 78.—set him upon his shoulders.

The same mode of carrying boys is noted by Sandys; and Ludeke has a passage still more to the purpose:—"Liberos dominorum suorum grandiusculus ita humeris portant servi, ut illi lacertis suis horum collum, pedibus vero latera amplectantur, sicque illorum facies super horum caput emineat."—Expositio Brevis, p. 37.

PAGE 78.—his cheeks became the colour of the blossom of pomegranates.

The modest blush of an ingenuous youth (which a Grecian lady of admired taste averred to be the finest colour in nature), is denominated by the Arabians from this very flower. Solomon, in his exquisite Idyllium, hath adopted the same comparison. Ch. IV. v. 3.

"בִּפְלַח הָרְמוֹן רִקְתָּךְ" Thy cheeks are like the opening bloom* of the pomegranate."

But a more apposite use of this similitude occurs in an ode by a poet of Damascus:—

"The blossom of the pomegranate brings back to my mind the blushes of my beloved, when her cheeks are coloured with a modest resentment."

PAGE 79.—their faith is mutually flighted.

When females in the East are betrothed, their palms and fingers are tinged of a crimson colour, with the herb hannah. This is called "the crimson of consent."—Tales of Inatulla, vol. ii. p. 15.

* Simon interprets פִּלַח by eructio floris, and Guarini by balaustium, senses which the following passage from Pliny will support:—"Primus pomi hujus partus flore incipientis, Cytinus vocatur Græcis. In hoc ipso cytino flosculi sunt, antequam scilicet malum ipsum prodeat, erumpentes, quos balaustium vocari diximus.—Nat. Hist. Lib. XXIII. 59, 60. [According to Dioscorides, I. 132, the balaustium was the blossom of the wild, and the cytinus of the cultivated, pomegranate.]

Dr. Durell, justly dissatisfied with the versions before him, hath rendered the hemistich thus: "Thy cheeks are like a piece of pomegranate;" and adds, "The cheeks are compared to a piece of this fruit, because the pomegranate, when whole, is of a dull colour; but when cut up of a lively beautiful vermilion."—But, if this interpretation and reasoning be allowed, Solomon was less pat at a simile than Sancho: for, whether the cheeks of a blooming bride—or the inwards of a man, "just cleft from noddle down to nock,"—be more like a split pomegranate? "let the forest judge."—Durell's Critical Remarks, p. 202. Don Quixote, tom. iii. p. 282.

PAGE 79.—violate the rights of hospitality.

So high an idea of these rights prevails amongst the Arabians, that "a bread and salt traitor," is the most opprobrious invective with which one person can reproach another.—Richardson's Dissert. p. 219. See also the story of Ali Baba and The Forty Thieves, in the Arabian Nights, vol. iv. p. 166.

PAGE 80.—narcotic powder.

A drug of the same quality, mixed in lemonade, is given to Zobeide, in the story of Ganem.

PAGE 82.—Funeral vestments were prepared; their bodies washed, &c.

The rites here practised had obtained from the earliest ages. Most of them may be found in Homer and the other poets of Greece. Lucian describes the dead in his time as washed, perfumed, vested, and crowned, ὡραῖος ἀνθεῖον, with the flowers most in season; or, according to other writers, those in particular which the deceased were wont to prefer. The elegant editor of the Ruins of Palmyra mentions the fragments of a mummy found there, the hair of which was plaited exactly in the manner as worn at present by the women of Arabia.

The burial dress from the days of Homer hath been commonly white, and amongst Mahometans is made without a seam, that it may not impede the ceremonial of kneeling in the grave, when the dead person undergoes examination.—Homer, Euripides, &c., passim. Lucian, tom. ii. p. 927. Faschal de Coron, p. 225. Ruins of Palmyra, pp. 22, 23. Iliad, σ, 352. Relig Cerem. vol. vii. p. 117.

PAGE 82.—all instruments of music were broken.

Thus, in the Arabian Nights: "Haroun al Raschid wept over Schemsel-nihar, and before he left the room, ordered all the musical instruments to be broken."—Vol. ii. p. 196.

PAGE 82.—imans began to recite their prayers.

An iman is the principal priest of a mosque. It was the office of the imans to precede the bier, praying as the procession moved on.—Relig. Cerem. vol. vii. p. 117.

PAGE 83.—The wailful cries of La Ilah illa Alla!

This exclamation, which contains the leading principle of Mahometan belief, and signifies there is no God but God, was commonly uttered under some violent emotion of mind. The Spaniards adopted it from their Moorish neighbours, and Cervantes hath used it in Don Quixote:—"En esto llegaron corriendo con grita, LILLIES (literally professions of faith in Alla), y algazara los de las libreas, adonde Don Quixote suspenso y atónito estava."—Parte Segunda, cap. lxi. tom. iv. p. 241.

The same expression is sometimes written by the Spaniards, Lilaila, and Hila lilahaila.

PAGE 85.—the angel of death had opened the portal of some other world.

The name of this exterminating angel is Isracl, and his office is to conduct the dead to the abode assigned them, which is said by some to be near the place of their interment. Such was the office of Mercury in the Grecian Mythology.—Salé's Prelim. Disc. p. 101. Hyde in Notis ad Bobov. p. 19. R. Elias, in Tishbi. Buxtorf Synag. Jud. et Lexic. Talmud. Homer. Odys.

PAGE 85.—Monber and Nakir.

These are two black angels of a tremendous appearance, who examine the departed on the subject of his faith: by whom, if he give not a satisfactory account, he is sure to be cudgelled with maces of red-hot iron, and tormented more variously than words can describe.—Relig. Ceremon. vol. vii. pp. 59, 68, 118; vol. v. p. 290. Salé's Prelim. Disc. p. 101, and one of the MSS. specified in the Preface.

PAGE 85.—the fatal bridge.

This bridge, called in Arabic al Sirat, and said to extend over the infernal gulf, is represented as narrower than a spider's web, and sharper than the edge of a sword. Though the attempt to cross it be—

“More full of peril, and advent'rous spirit,
‘Than to o'erwalk a current, roaring loud,
On the unsteadfast footing of a spear;”

yet the paradise of Mahomet can be entered by no other avenue. Those, indeed, who have behaved well need not be alarmed; mixed characters will find it difficult; but the wicked soon miss their standing, and plunge headlong into the abyss.—Pocock in Port. Mos. p. 282, &c. Milton apparently copied from this well-known fiction, and not, as Dr. Warton conjectured, from the poet Sadi, his way—

“Over the dark abyss, whose boiling gulf
Tamely endured a bridge of wond'rous length,
From hell continued, reaching the utmost orb
Of this frail world.”

PAGE 85.—a certain series of years.

According to the tradition from the prophet, not less than nine hundred, nor more than seven thousand.

PAGE 86.—the sacred camel.

It was an article of the Mahometan creed, that all animals would be raised again, and some of them admitted into paradise. The animal here mentioned appears to have been one of those white-winged CAMELS* capa-

* Tarafa, amongst other circumstances in the description of his camel, notices her “bushy tail, which appears as if the two wings of a large white eagle were transfixed by an awl to the bone, and hung waving round both her sides.”—Meallakat, p. 10.

risoned with gold, which Ali affirmed had been provided to convey the faithful.—Relig. Cer. vol. vii. p. 70. Salé's Prelim. Disc. p. 112. Al Fanheri. Ebnol Athir, &c.

PAGE 87.—basket-making.

This sort of basket work hath been long in use in the East, and consists of the leaves of the date-bearing palm. Fanniers of this texture are of great utility in conveying fruits, bread, &c., whilst heavier articles, or such as require a more compact covering, are carried in bags of leather, or skin.—Hasselquist's Voyage, p. 261.

PAGE 87.—the caliph presented himself to the emir in a new light.

The propensity of a vicious person, in affliction, to seek consolation from the ceremonies of religion, is an exquisite trait in the character of Vathek.

PAGE 93.—the waving of fans.

These fans consisted of the trains of peacocks or ostriches, whose quills were set in a long stem, so as to imbricate the plumes in the gradations of their natural growth. Fans of this fashion were formerly used in England.

To judge from the language of Burton ("if he get any remnant of hers, a buske-point, a feather of her fanne, a shoo-tye, a lace,") these fans soon after became common. It was, however, to this kind that Milton alluded in a passage of Paradise Lost, the collocation of which, though disjointed through the mistake of his amanuensis, may, by transposing a word, be restored; —

"—— his sleep

Was aery light, from pure digestion bred,
And temperate vapours bland, which th' only sound
Of fuming rills, and leaves, Aurora's fan,
Lightly dispers'd, and the shrill matin song,
Of birds on ev'ry bough."

Trees, whose branches are well covered with leaves, may be not improperly styled feathering,* and, in the language of Milton, form the fan of Aurora, which, when waved by the breeze of the morning, occasions the rustling that constitutes a third in the complex sound referred to.

PAGE 94.—wine hoarded up in bottles, prior to the birth of Mahomet.

The prohibition of wine by the prophet materially diminished its consumption within the limits of his own dominions. Hence a reserve of it might be expected of the age here specified. The custom of hoarding wine was not unknown to the Persians, though not so often practised by them as by the Greeks and Romans.

"I purchase" (says Lebeid) "the old liquor, at a dear rate, in dark leathern bottles, long reposit; or in casks black with pitch, whose seals I break, and then fill the cheerful goblet."—Moallakat, p. 53.

PAGE 94.—excavated ovens in the rock.

As substitutes for the portable ovens, which were lost.

* Thus, Mr. Whateley, the first authority in the language of picturesque description:—"Large boughs, feathering down, often intercept the sight."

PAGE 94.—Manckets prepared by Nouronikar.

Herodotus mentions a lady of equal rank, performing a similar office:—
 ἡ δὲ ΓΥΝΗ τοῦ ΒΑΣΙΛΕΥΣ αὐτῇ τὰ ΣΙΤΙΑ σφί ἐπεσσε*: and the cakes which Tamar made for Amnon are well known.

PAGE 95.—Her great camel Alboufaki.

There is a singular and laboured description of a camel in the poem of Tarafa; but Alboufaki possessed qualities appropriate to himself, and which rendered him but little less conspicuous than the deformed dun camel of Aad.

PAGE 97.—to set forward, notwithstanding it was noon.

† The employment of wood-fellers was accounted of all others the most toilsome, as those occupied in it were compelled to forego that mid-day cessation with which other labourers were indulged. Inatulla speaks proverbially of "woodmen in the meridian hour, scarce able to raise the arms of languor." The guides of Carathis being of this occupation, she adroitly availed herself of it to urge them forward, without allowing them that repose during the mid-day fervour which travellers in these climates always enjoyed,† and which was deemed so essential to the preservation of their health.

PAGE 97.—the confines of some cemetery.

Places of interment in the East were commonly situated in scenes of solitude. We read of one in the History of the First Calender, abounding with so many monuments, that four days were successively spent in it without the inquirer being able to find the tomb he looked for; and, from the story of Ganem, it appears that the doors of these cemeteries were often left open.—Arabian Nights, vol. ii. p. 112; vol. iii. p. 135.

PAGE 100.—A Myraholan conffit.

The invention of this confection is attributed by M. Cardonne to Avicenna, but there is abundant reason, exclusive of our author's authority, to suppose it of a much earlier origin. Both the Latins and Greeks were acquainted with the bal-am, and the tree that produced it was indigenous in various parts of Arabia.

PAGE 102.—blue fishes.

Fishes of the same colour are mentioned in the Arabian Nights; and, like these, were endowed with the gift of speech.

* Lib. VIII. p. 685. That σφί is to be understood in the sense above given, is certain from what immediately follows.

† Psalm xci. 5. The explanatory iteration of the subsequent verse points out a congruity between the Hebrew poet and Homer. As the contagion amongst the Greeks produced by the excessive heat of the sun was assigned in the Iliad to the arrows of the God of light; so, the destruction that wasteth at noon is attributed in the Psalm to the arrow that flieth by day.—It has been observed by a nobleman of many accomplishments, that this verse should be added to the other passages of Scripture which have been noted in the writings ascribed to Zoroaster.

PAGE 104.—nests still higher than the clouds.

The metaphor of a nest for a secure habitation occurs in the sacred writings. Thus Habakkuk:—"Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of evil." And Obadiah:—"Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars," &c. The genius here mentioned seems to have been adopted from the Jewish notion of Guardian Angels, to whom the superintendence of children is supposed to be committed, and to which our Saviour himself hath referred (Matt. xviii. 10); whilst the original possessors of the nest may be presumed to have been some of those marvellous birds so frequently mentioned in Eastern romance.

PAGE 104.—swaving streamers on which were inscribed the names of Allah and the Prophet.

The position that "there is no God but God, and Mahomet is his Prophet," pervades every part of the Mahometan religion. Banners, like those here described, are preserved in the several mosques; and, on the death of extraordinary persons, are borne before the bier in solemn state.—Relig. Cerem. vol. vii. pp. 119, 120.

PAGE 105.—astrolabes.

The mention of the astrolabe may be deemed incompatible, at first view, with chronological exactness, as there is no instance of any being constructed by a Mussulman, till after the time of Vathek. It may, however, be remarked, to go no higher, that Sinesius, bishop of Ptolemais, invented one in the fifth century; and that Carathis was not only herself a Greek, but also cultivated those sciences which the good Mussulmans of her time all held in abhorrence.—Bailly, Hist. de l'Astronom. Moderne, tom. i. pp. 563, 573.

PAGE 107.—On the banks of the stream, hives and oratories.

The bee is an insect held in high veneration amongst the Mahometans, it being pointed out in the Koran, "for a sign unto the people that understand." It has been said, in the same sense, "Go to the ant, thou slug-gard." Prov. vi. 6. The santons, therefore, who inhabit the fertile banks of Rucnabad, are not less famous for their hives than their oratories.—D'Herbelot, p. 717.

PAGE 107.—harbingers of the imperial procession began to proclaim.

This circumstance of sending heralds to announce the approach of a sovereign, reminds us of "the voice of one crying in the wilderness."

PAGE 109.—sheiks,—cadis.

Sheiks are the chiefs of the societies of derviches; cadis are the magistrates of a town or city.

PAGE 109.—Asses in bridles of ričand inscribed from the Koran.

As the judges of Israel in ancient days rode on white asses, so, amongst the Mahometans, those that affect an extraordinary sanctity, use the same animal in preference to the horse. Sir John Chardin observed, in various parts of the East, that their reins, as here represented, were of silk, with the name of God, or other inscriptions, upon them.—Ludcke, Expos. brevis, p. 40. Chardin's MS. cited by Harmer.

PAGE 110.—One of these beneficent Genii, assuming the exterior of a shepherd, &c., began to pour from his flute, &c.

The flute was considered as a sacred instrument, which Jacob and other holy shepherds had sanctified by using.—Relig. Cerem. vol. vii. p. 110.

PAGE 111.—involuntarily drawn towards the declivity of the hill.

A similar instance of attraction may be seen in the story of Prince Ahmed and the Peri Parabanon.—Arabian Nights, vol. iv. p. 243.

PAGE 112.—Eblis.

D'Herbelot supposes this title to have been a corruption of the Groek Δαίβολος, diabolos. It was the appellation conferred by the Arabians upon the prince of the apostate angels, whom they represent as exiled to the infernal regions, for refusing to worship Adam at the command of the Supreme, and appears more likely to originate from the Hebrew הבל, hebel, vanity, pride.—See below, the note p. 118, "creatures of clay."

PAGE 112.—compensate for thy impieties by an exemplary life.

It is an established article of the Mussulman creed, that the actions of mankind are all weighed in a vast unerring balance, and the future condition of the agents determined according to the preponderance of evil or good. This fiction, which seems to have been borrowed from the Jews, had probably its origin in the figurative language of Scripture. Thus, Psalm lxii. 9—"Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter than vanity;"—and, in Daniel, the sentence against the King of Babylon, inscribed on the wall, "Thou art weighed in the balance, and found wanting."

PAGE 113.—Balkis.

This was the Arabian name of the Queen of Sheba, who went from the south to hear the wisdom and admire the glory of Solomon. The Koran represents her as a worshipper of fire. Solomon is said not only to have entertained her with the greatest magnificence, but also to have raised her to his bed and his throne.—Al Koran, ch. xxvii., and Salé's notes. D'Herbelot, p. 182.

PAGE 114.—of an architecture unknown in the records of the earth—an immense palace, whose walls were embossed with various figures, &c.

Thus Pellegrino Gaudenzi, in his description of the palace of sin:—

"Enorme pondo al suolo, immensa mole
D'aspri macigni intesta e negri marmi

Per cui serpeggian di sanguigna tinta
 Lugubri vene: l'atterito sguardo
 Muto s'erresta sull' altera fronte
 Ch' entro le nubi si sospinge, e s' alza
 Superbamente a minacciar le stelle.
 Sotto grand' archi su marmoree basi
 Fan di sè mostra simulacri orrendi
 Che in saccia ad essa i Demon fabbri alzarò."

La Nascita di Cristo, t. i.

PAGE 114.—The chief of the eunuchs trembling with fear, besought Vathek that a fire might be kindled.

Ηρόπ ΠΑΧΝΟΥΤΑΙ, the very heart of Balabalouk is congealed with apprehension. Where can a more exquisite trait, both of nature and character, be found, than this request of the eunuch presents?

PAGE 116.—they seemed not walking, but falling.

A similar kind of progression is described by Milton:—

" — by the hand he took me raised;
 And over fields and waters, as in air,
 Smooth-sliding without step last led me."

PAGE 116.—The pavement, strewed over with saffron.

There are several circumstances in the Story of the Third Calender, that resemble those here mentioned; particularly a pavement strewed with saffron, and the burning of ambergris and aloes-wood.

PAGE 117.—A throng of genii and other fantastic spirits, danced, &c.

A dance of the same kind, and by similar performers, occurs in the History of Ahmed and the Peri Parabanon.

PAGE 117.—let us haste, and present you to Eblis.

If our author's description of the arch-apostate be examined by the criterion of Arabian faith, and in reference to the circumstances of the story, there can be no difficulty in appreciating its merit. Gaudenzi, in the poem already cited, hath described the appearance of Satan previous to the birth of Christ in a manner that deserves to be noticed, though the poem itself were less scarce:—

" Fra questo orror da sue radici scosso
 Trema repente il suolo, e all' Oriente
 Ardua montagna con rimbombo estremo
 S' apre per mezzo: immensa foce oscura
 Muggia dal fondo, e fumo, e fiamme, e lampi .
 Sboccano a un tratto; i sfracellati massi
 Rotando ardenti nel sulfureo flutto
 Stampan la piaggia di profonda traccia.
 Dai neri gorgi del dolente regno
 Con furibondo orribile muggito
 Rimonta per l'aperta ampia vorago

L' Angiol d' abisso a funestar la terra.
 Come dell' ocean sola tiranna
 Sconcia Balena per gli ondosì campi
 Move animosa, e coll' enorme petto
 L' ampia spezzando rimugghiante massa
 Alzasi al giorno, e nel turbato fondo
 Il muto armento di sua mole adombra
 Tale Satan per vasto mar di fiamme
 Ergesi a nuoto : immense ali protese
 Alto flagellan con sonoro scroscio :
 L' onda infernal, che in rosseggianti righe
 Sbalza stridente, e il ciel veste di foco.
 Sotto grand' archi di vellute ciglia,
 Quasi comete sanguinose erranti
 Per tenebrose vie, di rabbia pregni
 Volvonsi gli occhi, e in cavernoso speco
 Orrida s' apre l' infiammata bocca
 Aure spirante di veleno infette.*
 Egli s' avanza, e il suol guatando e il cielo,
 Impaziente con le negre braccia
 Le rupi affera, e d' un immenso slancio
 Balza al confin della frapposta arena
 Mille del suo furor seguaci Spirti
 Ch' erangli sotto per gl' igniti gorghi
 Sfilangi dietro, e coll' intento sguardo
 In lui rivolti gli si fanno al fianco.
 In sua possanza alteramente fiera
 Stassi l' oste d' Averno, e adombra il piano,
 Siccome mille e mille anfose quercie
 Che a' piè d' un' alta ferruginea rupe
 Aride e negre al cielo ergon le teste.
 S' addopian l' ombre della notte, e sola
 Al folgorar degl' infernali sguardi
 Arde da lungi la solinga spiaggia,
 Come spezzata da funeste vampe
 Massa di nemi."

* Several expressions in this passage appear to have been imitated from the following, of Tasso :—

Orrida maestà nel fero aspetto
 Terrore accresce, e più superbo il rende :
 Rossegian gli occhj, e di veneno infetto,
 Come infausta cometa, il guardo splende :
 Gl' involve il mento, e su l' irsuto petto
 Ispida e folta la gran barda scende :
 E in guisa di voragine profonda,
 S' apre la bocca d' atro sangue immonda.

La Gerus. c. iv. st. 7.

PAGE 118.—Ouranbad.

This monster is represented as a fierce flying hydra, and belongs to the same class with the rakshs, whose ordinary food was serpents and dragons; the soham, which had the head of a horse, with four eyes, and the body of a flame-coloured dragon; the syl, a basilisk with a face, resembling the human, but so tremendous that no mortal could bear to behold it; the ejder, and others. See these respective titles in Richardson's Persian, Arabic, and English Dictionary.

PAGE 118.—she expected to have seen some stupendous giant.

Such is the representation which Dante hath given of this infernal sovereign:—

“Lo ’mperador del doloroso regno
Da mezzo ’l petto uscia fuor della ghiaccia :
E più con un gigante i’ mi convegno,
Che i giganti non fan con le sue braccia.”

It is more than probable (though it has not been noticed), that Don Quixote’s mistake of the windmills for giants was suggested to Cervantes by the following simile, in which the tremendous personage above mentioned is so compared:—

“————— però dinanzi mira
Disse ’l maestro mio, se tu ’l discerni.
Come quando una grossa nebbia spira,
O quando l’ emisferio nostro annotta
Par da lungi un mulin che ’l vento gira,
Vender mi parve un tal dificio allotta.”

What confirms this conjecture is the reply to Sancho’s question—“What Giants?”—made by Don Quixote, in reference to the two last lines of the preceding citation:—

“And nearer to a giant’s is my size
Than giants are when to his arms compar’d”—

“Those thou seest yonder, with their vast arms; and some of them there are, that reach nearly two leagues.”—Don Quixote, parte prim. capit. viii. p. 52. Dante dell’ Inferno, Canto xxxiv. It may be added, that a rising wind is mentioned in both.

PAGE 118.—Creatures of clay.

Nothing could have been more appositely imagined than this compellation. Eblis, according to Arabian mythology, had suffered a degradation from his primeval rank, and was consigned to these regions, for having refused to worship Adam in obedience to the supreme command; alleging, in justification of his refusal, that himself had been formed of ethereal fire, whilst Adam was only a creature of clay.—Al Koran, c. lv. &c.

PAGE 119.—the fortress of Ahernan.

In the mythology of the Easterns, Ahernan was accounted the Demon of Discord. The ancient Persian romances abound in descriptions of this for-treas, in which the inferior demons assemble, to receive the behests of their prince ; and from whom they proceed to exercise their malice in every part of the world.—D'Herbelot. p. 71.

PAGE 119.—the halls of Argenk.

The halls of this mighty dive, who reigned in the mountains of Kaf, contained the statues of the seventy-two Solimans, and the portraits of the various creatures subject to them ; not one of which bore the slightest similitude to man. Some had many heads, others many arms, and some consisted of many bodies. Their heads were all very extraordinary, some resembling the elephant's, the buffalo's, and the boar's ; whilst others were still more monstrous.—D'Herbelot, p. 820. Some of the idols worshipped to this day in Hindostan answer to this description.

THE END.

WILLIAM TEGG'S

LIST OF ENGRAVINGS.

IN FINE CONDITION.

BAGGAGE (THE) WAGGON.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 19½ by 17½. 5s.

BATTLE (THE) OF THE NILE, August 1st, 1798.

Painted by Loutherbourg, R.A., 32 by 24. 15s.

BATTLE (THE) OF CAMPERDOWN, October 11th, 1797.

Painted by Loutherbourg, R.A., 32 by 24. 15s.

BAPTISM (THE) OF JESUS. 15 by 12. 2s. 6d.

BEAUTY.

Painted by F. Stone, 15 by 12. 2s. 6d.

BEESSWING.

Engraved by G. S. Shury, 14 by 13. 3s.

BLIND (THE) FIDDLER.

Painted by Sir David Wilkie, R.A., 22 by 17½. 8s.

BUDS OF PROMISE.

Painted by W. Drummond, 15 by 12. 3s.

BONAPARTE AT WATERLOO, 18th June, 1815. Finely coloured.

Painted by Steuber, 25 by 15. 12s.

BURNS AT THE PLOUGH.

Painted by Hancock, 18½ by 13½. 3s.

BURNS AND HIS HIGHLAND MARY.

Painted by Edmonstone, 17 by 13½. 3s.

CAB (THE) HORSE.—(ST. JAMES) and (ST. GILES.)

Painted by J. F. Herring, Sen., 20 by 24, coloured. The pair, 14s.

CAPTIVE (THE) SLAVE.

Painted by C. Hancock, 15½ by 11½. 3s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

CARTOONS (THE) OF RAFFAELLE. Seven in number.

Engraved by Du Bosc, Lepicie, &c., in the finest style of art.

Framing size of three 17 by 14, and of four 20½ by 14. 12s. 6d.

CHRIST BLESSING LITTLE CHILDREN.

Painted by Overbeck, 19 by 13½. 5s.

COSTUMES OF THE BRITISH ARMY, 16 by 12, coloured. Each 2s. 6d.

Her Majesty.

H.R.H. the late Prince Consort.

His Grace the late Duke of Wellington.

H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge.

DAIRY MAID (THE).

Painted by J. Ward, R.A., 13 by 15. 2s. 6d.

“DECEIVING GRANNY.”

Painted by Miss E. Farmer, 20 by 15. 5s.

DINING OUT—(NOTHING FOR THE WAITER).

Painted by A. Crowquill, 17 by 14. 3s.

DISTURBER (THE) DETECTED.

Painted by G. Cruikshank, 24½ by 20½. 9s.

ECCE HOMO.

Painted by Guido, 18 by 13½. 5s.

EFFECTS (THE) OF IDLENESS AND INDUSTRY.

Painted by S. J. E. Jones, 21 by 16. The pair, 9s.

FAITHFUL (THE) PLAYMATE.

Painted by S. West, 20 by 16. 5s.

FIGHTING FOR THE STANDARD AT THE BATTLE OF MARSTON MOOR.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 16 by 19. 5s.

FISHERMAN'S (THE) DEPARTURE.

Painted by W. Collins, R.A., 20 by 16½. 5s.

FRUITS OF INDUSTRY AND IDLENESS.

Painted by E. Prentis, 16½ by 18. The pair, 10s.

GENTLE (A) HINT.

Painted by T. M. Joy, 10 by 14. 3s. 6d.

GLEANER (THE).

Painted by the late Madam Soyer, 20½ by 15. 5s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

GRANDMAMMA.

Painted by C. Sibley, 15 by 12. 3s.

GRANDMAMMA'S LESSON.

Painted by A. Chisholm, 21 by 17. 5s.

GRATITUDE AND COVETOUSNESS. The pair, coloured, 2s.

HAPPY THOUGHTS.

Painted by Dubufe, 14 by 11. 3s.

HE WILL BE SURE TO FIND IT.

Painted by T. M. Joy, 18 by 14. 3s. 6d.

HOUSEHOLD PETS.

Painted by W. Drummond, 20 by 16. 3s. 6d.

HUNT'S HUMOROUS SKETCHES. Coloured, each 1s.

Merry Christmas.

A Happy New Year.

Adam's Pale Ale.

The Rival Artists. 2 plates.

A Poser.

Too Hot.

The Pet Pig.

A Young Shaver.

Astonishment.

How are you?

The Gleaner.

Long Sermon.

Sleeping Nymph.

Child's Prayer.

Bubble.

Margate.

The First Cigar. 2 plates.

Master James Crow.

Miss Femima Crow.

Domestic Felicity.

The Corn Question.

All Fours.

Master Isaac Walton.

The Pet Lamb.

The Young Shrimper.

Done Up.

Saturday.

Sunday.

IT'S LIKE HIM.

Painted by Dubufe, 21 by 16. 5s.

IT'S SURE TO COME TRUE.

Painted by Charles Dukes, 16 by 20. 8s.

JEANIE DEANS.

Painted by C. Leslie, R.A., 28 by 14. 3s. 6d.

JENNY JONES.

Painted by J. Bateman, 20 by 17. 5s.

JUVENILE (THE) TOILET.

Painted by Hennings, 15 by 11. 2s. 6d.

KEEPER (THE) GOING OUT.

Painted by H. Barraud, 32 by 26. 20s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

LANCASHIRE (A) WITCH.

Painted by W. Bradley, 17 by 14. 5s.

LIFE GUARDS (THE) BAND PASSING IN REVIEW.

Painted by H. Martens. Finely coloured, 29 by 25. 14s.

LANDSEER, SIR EDWIN, R.A.

A collection of Steel Engravings copied from his celebrated Pictures.

Produced in the first style of Art.

ALPINE (An) MASTIFF. 20 by 17. 8s.

BOLTON ABBEY IN THE OLDEN TIME. 20 by 17½.
8s.

CATHERINE SEYTON. 19 by 15. 6s.

DEATH (THE) OF A STAG IN GLEN TILT. 20 by 17½. 8s.

DIGNITY AND IMPUDENCE. 22 by 17. 8s.

"ISLAY," HER MAJESTY'S FAVOURITE SCOTCH
TERRIER, &c. 23 by 13½. 7s.

LAYING DOWN THE LAW. 21 by 21. 10s.

Ditto Ditto. 19 by 18. 7s.

LION DOG OF MALTA. 16 by 14½. 5s.

SCOTCH TERRIER. 16 by 14½. 5s.

THE ANGLER'S DAUGHTER. 21 by 14. 5s.

THE FALCONER'S SON. 21 by 14. 5s.

THE HIGHLAND SHEPHERD'S HOME. 17½ by 15½. 5s.

THE LADY AND SPANIELS. 16 by 14½. 5s.

WAITING FOR THE COUNTESS. 26 by 22. 12s.

LAST (THE) SUPPER.

Painted by Leonardo Da Vinci, 24 by 17. 8s.

LOVE'S STRATAGEM.

Painted by T. M. Joy, 19 by 15. 5s.

MADONNA AND CHILD.

Painted by Jan Hemling, 14 by 11. 3s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

MAGDALENE.

Painted by Guido, 18 by 13½. 5s.

MAGNA CHARTA. 27 by 13, coloured. 2s.

MAIDENS AT THE WELL.

Painted by Bendeman, 19 by 15. 5s.

MANUSCRIPT (THE). From Sterne's Sentimental Journey.

Painted by C. Leslie, R.A., 18 by 13. 3s. 6d.

MATERNAL LOVE.

Painted by P. T. Van Wyngaerd, 24 by 19. 5s.

MATERNAL AFFECTION.

Painted by Tunbrell, 15 by 12. 2s. 6d.

MELANCTHON'S FIRST MISGIVINGS OF THE CHURCH OF ROME.

Painted by G. Lane, 24 by 19½. 15s.

MEMORIAL (A) OF THE GREAT EXHIBITION, 1851.

Painted by Eugene Lamé, 30 by 22. 8s.

MOTHER'S (THE) GRAVE.

Painted by Henning, 15 by 11. 2s. 6d.

MOURNER'S COMFORT, AND THE FRIEND IN AD-VERSITY.

Painted by E. Prentis, 16 by 21. The pair, 10s.

MY BOY.

Painted by W. Orchardson, 18 by 14. 3s.

MY FIRST.

Painted by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., 15 by 11. 2s. 6d.

MY OWN FIRESIDE.

Painted by Drummond, 15 by 12. 2s. 6d.

NATIVE ATTRACTIONS.

Painted by J. Hanks, 21 by 17. 5s.

NOSE (THE) OUT OF JOINT.

Painted by A. Crowquill, 16 by 12. 3s.

OUR SAVIOUR.

Painted by James Northcote, R.A., 29 by 22. 9s.

OUR SAVIOUR.

Privately engraved for the late Duke of Buckingham, from the celebrated picture by Carlo Dolce, 13½ by 10. 3s.

PORTRAITS.

BERGHEM (N.), LANDSCAPE PAINTER.

Painted by Rembrandt, 20 by 16½. 5s.

BRIGHT (JOHN).

Engraved by G. S. Shury, 20 by 15. 5s.

BROUGHAM (LORD).

Engraved by G. S. Shury, 16 by 12. 5s.

BUNYAN (JOHN). Author of the 'Pilgrim's Progress.' 21½ by 19½. 8s.

CARDINAL GONSALVI.

Painted by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., 18 by 12½. 3s. 6d.

CLARKE (DR. ADAM). Fine Likeness, 19 by 15. 5s.

COBDEN (RICHARD, M.P.)

Engraved by G. S. Shury, 23 by 15½. 5s.

EXETER (RT. REV. THE LORD BISHOP OF).

Painted by T. A. Woolnoth, 19 by 15. 5s.

GLADSTONE (RT. HON. W.E.), M.P. 20 by 15. 5s.

JENNY LIND (AS CONTEMPLATION).

Painted by Magnus, 20 by 16. 5s.

KEMBLE (JOHN PHILIP)—IN THE CHARACTER OF HAMLET.

Painted by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., 18 by 13. 3s.

LONDON (RT. REV. THE LORD BISHOP OF).

Engraved by F. Bacon, 21 by 16. 5s.

PALMERSTON (LORD).

Engraved by G. S. Shury, 22 by 15½. 5s.

RUBENS.

Painted by himself, 15½ by 12. 3s.

SCOTT (SIR W.)

Painted by C. Leslie, R.A., 17 by 12. 3s.

SIDDONS (MRS.)—AS THE TRAGIC MUSE.

Painted by Sir J. Reynolds, 18 by 13. 3s.

Ditto Ditto 25 by 18. 7s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

SPURGEON (REV. C. H.). Lithograph.

Drawn by W. T. Davy, 12 by 9. 1s.

TAGLIONI (LA SYLPHIDE). 23 by 18. 5s.

TURNER (J. M. W., R.A.) 15½ by 12. 3s. 6d.

WELLINGTON (THE DUKE OF).

Painted by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., 14½ by 11. 3s.

WESLEY (REV. JOHN).

Engraved by Zobel, 20 by 15. 5s.

ZETLAND (EARL OF)—GRAND MASTER OF THE FREE-MASONS. 20½ by 16. 5s.

PICK A' PACK.

Painted by F. Poole, R.A., 17 by 14. 3s.

PLAYFUL (THE) PETS.

Painted by W. Drummond, 17 by 14. 3s. 6d.

PRAY GOD BLESS PAPA AND MAMMA.

Painted by J. W. King, 22 by 18. 5s.

QUIET ENJOYMENT.

Painted by T. Woodward, 18½ by 19½. 8s.

REPOSE.

Painted by C. Baxter, 15 by 12. 5s.

REYNARD.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., coloured, 15 by 12½. 4s.

RICHARD CŒUR DE LION AND SALADIN AT THE BATTLE OF ASCALON.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 16 by 19. 5s.

RICHARD III. AND THE EARL OF RICHMOND AT THE BATTLE OF BOSWORTH FIELD.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 16 by 19. 5s.

RIVAL FOUNTAINS (THE), OR GIN AND WATER.

Drawn by G. Cruikshank, 12 by 18. 1s.

Ditto Ditto coloured. 1s. 6d.

ROMAN (THE) PILGRIMS.

Painted by Paul Delaroche, 16 by 18. 5s.

SAD (A) DOG.—"OUT ALL NIGHT, AND NO KEY."

Painted by A. Crowquill, 16 by 12½. 3s.

William Tegg's List of Engravings.

SHAKE HANDS.

Painted by J. Spence, 22 by 17. 5s.

SIT UP, CARLO.

Painted by John Porter, 15 by 12. 3s.

SMUGGLERS ON THE WATCH.

Painted by H. P. Parker, 14 by 17. 3s.

SPORTSMAN (THE) BOTHIE.

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 18 by 15. 5s.

SURPRISE. (THE)

Painted by Dubufe, 15 by 11 $\frac{3}{4}$. 3s.

TALLY HO.

Painted by C. Hancock, 15 by 17 $\frac{1}{2}$, coloured. 4s.

"THOU RULEST THE RAGING OF THE SEA;
WHEN THE WAVES THEREOF ARISE THOU
STILLEST THEM."

Painted by W. F. Tiffin, 22 by 17. 5s.

TIRED (THE) CHUMS.

Painted by W. Drummond, 17 by 13. 3s. 6d.

TOILET (THE).

Painted by Dubufe, 15 by 11 $\frac{3}{4}$. 3s.

TOP OF THE MORNING TO YOU. 21 by 18. 5s.

VARMINT (THE).

Painted by A. Cooper, R.A., 14 by 11. 2s. 6d.

VESPER (THE) BELL.

Painted by C. Ruben, 17 $\frac{1}{2}$ by 15 $\frac{1}{2}$. 5s.

VIRGIN (THE) AND CHILD.

Painted by Raffaele, 14 by 16. 5s.

WATERMILL (THE).

Painted by Sir W. A. Callcott, R.A., 26 $\frac{1}{2}$ by 17. 7s.

* * A Catalogue of Standard Popular Works in Various Departments of Literature forwarded free.

PANCRAS LANE.

MR. WILLIAM TEGG'S
LIST OF PUBLICATIONS.

 A General Catalogue sent free by Post.*

LONDON:
12, PANCRAS LANE, CHEAPSIDE.

Two Vols., Crown 8vo.

KAINA KAI ΠΑΛΑΙΑ.

THINGS NEW & OLD:

OR,

A STOREHOUSE OF SIMILES, SENTENCES, ALLEGORIES, APOPHTHEGMS, ADAGES, APOLOGUES,
DIVINE, MORAL, POLITICAL, ETC.
WITH THEIR SEVERAL APPLICATIONS.

Collected and observed from the Writings and Sayings of the Learned in all ages to this present.

BY JOHN SPENCER,

A LOVER OF LEARNING AND LEARNED MEN.

WITH

A PREFACE BY THE REV. THOMAS FULLER, D.D.

Deus nobis hæc otia fecit.—VIRGIL, Eclog. I.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 12s. 6d.

Foolscap 8vo.

WALKING IN THE LIGHT:

A MEMOIR

OF

MRS. HANNAH BAIRSTOW, OF HUDDERSFIELD, YORKSHIRE.

BY THE

REV. THORNLEY SMITH,

AUTHOR OF THE "HISTORIES OF JOSEPH," "MOSES," AND "JOSHUA," ETC. ETC.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 2s.

Three Vols., Crown 8vo.

THE CHURCH HISTORY OF BRITAIN.

FROM THE BIRTH OF JESUS CHRIST
TO THE YEAR 1648.

ENDEAVOURED BY

THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,

*Sometime Prebendary of Old Sarum,
And Author of "History of the Worthies of England," "Abel Redivivus,"
"The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.*

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 21s.

Crown 8vo.

THE CAUSE AND CURE
OF
A WOUNDED CONSCIENCE;

ALSO

Triana; or, A Thricefold Romanza,

OF

MARIANA, PADUANA, AND SABINA; ORNITHOLOGIE, OR, THE SPEECH OF BIRDS; AND ANTHEOLOGIA, OR, THE SPEECH OF FLOWERS.

By THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,

*Sometime Prebendary of Old Sarum,
And Author of "History of the Worthies of England," "Abel Redivivus,"
"The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.*

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 4s. 6d.

Crown 8vo.

JOSEPH'S
PARTY-COLOURED COAT:

A COMMENT ON I COR. c. XI., WITH SEVERAL SERMONS.

ALSO

DAVID'S HEINOUS SIN, HEARTY REPENTANCE, HEAVY PUNISHMENT:

A POEM.

By THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,
Author of "The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.

EDITED BY WILLIAM NICHOLS.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 4s. 6d.

Crown 8vo.

A COMMENT ON RUTH,
AND NOTES UPON JONAH.

By THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,
Author of "The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 4s. 6d.

Two Vols., Crown 8vo.

ABEL REDEVIVUS;
OR,
THE DEAD YET SPEAKING.

The Lives and Deaths of the Modern Divines.

BY THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,

*Author of "The Worthies of England," "The Holy and the Profane State,"
"The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.*

ASSISTED BY SEVERAL ABLE AND LEARNED MEN.

A NEW EDITION, WITH NOTES, BY WILLIAM NICHOLS.

ILLUSTRATED WITH FORTY-THREE PORTRAITS.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 1s.

Three Vols., Crown 8vo.

A PISGAH SIGHT
OF PALESTINE,

AND THE CONFINES THEREOF;

WITH THE

HISTORY OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENT ACTED THEREON.

By THOMAS FULLER, D.D.,

*Author of "The Worthies of England," "The Holy and the Profane State,"
"The Church History of Britain," &c. &c.*

Just ready.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 21s.

18me.

A LETTER FROM ROME; SHOWING
AN EXACT CONFORMITY BETWEEN
POPERY AND PAGANISM.

By CONYERS MIDDLETON, D.D.

A New Edition.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.
Price 1s. 6d.

Two Vols., crown 8vo.

THE
SERMONS OF MR. HENRY SMITH,

Sometime Minister of St. Clement Dunes, London :
e.

TOGETHER WITH

A PREPARATIVE TO MARRIAGE,
GOD'S ARROW AGAINST ATHEISTS, CERTAIN GODLY AND ZEALOUS PRAYERS, ETC.

Printed according to his Corrected Copies in his lifetime.

WITH A MEMOIR OF THE LEARNED AUTHIOR,
By THOMAS FULLER, B.D.,
Author of "A Pisgah Sight of Palestine," "The Worthies of England," &c.

THE WHOLE CAREFULLY EDITED BY THE AUTHOR OF "OUR HEAVENLY HOME," "LIFE AT BETHANY," ETC.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.
Price 8s.

Small Post 8vo.

BOGATZKY'S
GOLDEN TREASURY
FOR THE CHILDREN OF GOD.

New Edition.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG:

Price 2s. 6d.

Two Vols. in one., Crown 8vo.

THE LIFE AND TIMES
OF
JOHN WESLEY,
EMBRACING
THE HISTORY OF METHODISM,
FROM ITS RISE TO HIS DEATH; AND INCLUDING
BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES AND ANECDOTES
OF HIS CONTEMPORARIES AND COADJUTORS.

By ABEL STEVENS, LL.D.

New Edition, carefully revised and corrected, with Notes, Copious Index, and an Appendix containing an Account of all the Writings of JOHN and CHARLES WESLEY, etc.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 6s. 6d.

Small Post 8vo.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PATTERN: OR, A TREATISE
OF THE
IMITATION OF JESUS CHRIST.

BY THOMAS À KEMPIS.

TRANSLATED FROM THE LATIN BY DEAN STANHOPE.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.
FOURTH THOUSAND.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 2s. 6d.

Crown 8vo., Illustrated.

HISTORY
OF THE ANGLO-SAXONS.

BY FRANCIS PALGRAVE,
F.R.S., F.S.A.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 5s.

Crown 8vo., Illustrated.

RELIGIOUS EMBLEMS
AND ALLEGORIES :

A SERIES OF ENGRAVINGS AND EXPLANATORY
LETTERPRESS
DESIGNED TO ILLUSTRATE DIVINE TRUTH.

BY THE
REV. WILLIAM HOLMES.

A NEW EDITION, WITH AN INTRODUCTION
BY THE
REV. JAMES SMITH.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 3s. 6d.

Foolscap 8vo.

SHAKESPEAREAN GEMS:

IN FRENCH AND ENGLISH SETTINGS.

FROM THE PLAYS OF THE BARD OF AVON.

ARRANGED FOR THE USE OF SCHOOLS AND STUDENTS OF BOTH THE FRENCH AND ENGLISH LANGUAGES.

SELECTED AND TRANSLATED INTO FRENCH

BY THE

CHEVALIER DE CHATELAIN,

Translator of Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," Gay's "Fables," "Evangeline," &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 3s. 6d.

Crown 8vo.

LETTERS ON NATURAL MAGIC,

ADDRESSED TO
SIR WALTER SCOTT, BART.

BY
SIR DAVID BREWSTER, K.H.,
LL.D., F.R.S., V.P.S.E., ETC. ETC.

NEW EDITION.

WITH
INTRODUCTORY CHAPTERS ON THE BEING AND FACULTIES OF MAN, AND THE MORE RECENT WONDERS OF
THE MATERIAL WORLD.

By J. A. SMITH,
Author of a Treatise on the "Structure of Matter," &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 7s. 6d.

18mo.

MORAL MAXIMS
AND REFLECTIONS.

BY FRANCIS DUKE OF ROCHEFOUCAULD.

WITH LIFE OF THE AUTHOR,
BY THE
CHEVALIER DE CHATELAIN.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 1s. 6d.

Imperial 8vo.

THE HORSE:
HIS BEAUTIES AND DEFECTS.

WITH A FEW HINTS TO INEXPERIENCED PURCHASERS.

BY "A KNOWING HAND."

ILLUSTRATED WITH NINETEEN COLOURED PLATES.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 5s.

Crown 8vo.

MELANCHOLY ANATOMISED:

SHOWING ITS CAUSES, CONSEQUENCES, AND CURE;

WITH ANECDOTIC ILLUSTRATIONS
DRAWN FROM ANCIENT AND MODERN SOURCES.

ABRIDGED FROM THE LARGER WORK, ENTITLED "BURTON'S ANATOMY OF MELANCHOLY."

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 3s. 6d.

* * The complete 8vo. edition, enriched with Translations of the Classical Extracts, price 8s. 6d.

Medium 8vo.

THE SPECTATOR.

WITH

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTICES

OF THE

CONTRIBUTORS.

Illustrated with Eight fine Steel Portraits, Engraved by E. FINDEN.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 6s.

Square 16mo, fully Illustrated.

THE BOY'S HOLIDAY BOOK.

BY THE
REV. T. E. FULLER.

5
7

CONTAINING

Simple Instructions How to Play all Kinds of Games, whether in the Fields, the Woods, the Rivers, the Playground, or at the Fireside; with a Copious Guide for Breeding and Rearing Home Pets—their Treatment in Sickness and in Health, &c. &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 4s. 6d.

Post 8vo.

TI

A PARSING BOOK; OR,
BLANK PAPERS
FOR GRAMMATICAL ANALYSIS.

Col

ARRANGED BY THE

REV. B. W. GIBSONE, M.A., B.S.C.,

Head Master of St. Peter's Collegiate School, and Hon. Fellow of King's College, London.

A

"We commend this scheme of parsing to Schoolmasters."

—COSMOPOLITAN.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 1s. 6d.

STANDARD LIBRARY.

RE-ISSUE.

Fancy Wrapper, Medium 8vo.

	£	s.	d.
BAILLIE'S (JOANNA) Fugitive Verses	0	0	6
CLEVELAND'S (RICHARD J.) Narrative of Voyages and Commercial Enterprises	0	1	6
DANA'S (R. H.) Two Years before the Mast, a Per- sonal Narrative of Life at Sea	0	1	6
ELLIS'S (RIGHT HON. HENRY) Embassy to China ..	0	1	6
HALL'S (CAPTAIN BASIL) Narrative of a Voyage to Java, China, and the Loo-Choo Island ..	0	2	6
----- Travels in South America	0	3	6
HUNT'S (LEIGH) Indicator and the Companion ..	0	2	6
----- The Seer ; or, Common Places Re- freshed	0	2	6
LAMB'S (CHARLES) Tales from Shakespeare, designed for the Use of Young Persons	0	1	6
PRINGLE'S (THOMAS) Narrative of a Residence in South Africa	0	1	6
SEDGWICK'S (MISS) Letters from Abroad to Kindred at Home	0	1	6
SHAKSPEARE'S (W.) Poems	0	0	6
SHERIDAN'S (RICHARD BRINSLEY) Dramatic Works, with a Biographical and Critical Sketch, by Leigh Hunt	0	2	6
THE ADVENTURES OF ULYSSES, by Charles Lamb, and "Mrs. Leicester's School"	0	1	6

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Four Vols., 8vo

HONE'S (WILLIAM)

T] EVERY-DAY BOOK,
TABLE BOOK, & YEAR BOOK;

OR,

EVERLASTING CALENDAR

OF

AMUSEMENTS, TIMES, AND SEASONS, SOLEMNITIES AND MERRY-MAKINGS, ANTIQUITIES AND NOVELTIES.

Col

FORMING

A COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE YEAR,

AND

I A PERPETUAL KEY TO THE ALMANACS.

A

730 Engravings and Portrait.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price £1 1s.

TEGG'S CABINET SERIES.

Illustrated, Imp. 32mo., 2s.; gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

Beauties (The) of Washington Irving.

Butler's (S.) Hudibras.

Gulliver's Travels. Coloured Illustrations.

Life and Voyages of Columbus, by Washington Irving.

Pope's Poetical Works, with Notes.

Ritson's Songs and Ballads of Scotland, with Glossary.

Robin Hood's Songs and Ballads. Edited by John Hicklin; with Notes by J. M. Gutch, F.S.A.

Seven Champions of Christendom (Complete Edition).

Southey's (Robert) Life of Nelson.

Sterne's (L.) Sentimental Journey.

Syntax's (Dr.) Tour in Search of the Picturesque.

Tale of a Tub, and Battle of the Books, by Jonathan Swift.

Voyages and Discoveries of the Companions of Columbus. By Washington Irving.

LONDON : WILLIAM TEGG.

Foolscap 8vo.

TI
MORCEAUX CHOISIS
DES AUTEURS MODERNES,
A L'USAGE DE LA JEUNESSE.

WITH A
TRANSLATION OF THE NEW AND DIFFICULT
WORDS AND IDIOMATIC PHRASES WHICH OCCUR IN THE WORK.

BY MADAME FREDERICA ROWAN.

CONTAINING SELECTIONS FROM
BALZAC, BIGNON, CAPEFIGUE, DUMAS, GOZLAN, GUIZOT, VICTOR HUGO, JULES JANIN, LAMARTINE, LAVAL-LÉE, MERLE D'AUBIGNÉ, MERIMÉE, MICHELET, SALVANDY, SOUVESTRE, SOULIÉ, EUGENE SUE,
THIERRY, THIERS, &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 3s. 6d.

Crown 8vo.

HISTORY OF NAPOLEON BUONAPARTE.

REPRINTED FROM THE
"FAMILY LIBRARY."

ILLUSTRATED BY G. CRUIKSHANK, &c.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 5s.

STRUTT'S
SPORTS & PASTIMES
OF THE
PEOPLE OF ENGLAND.

EDITED BY WILLIAM HONE,
Author of "The Every-day Book," "Year Book," &c.

WITH
140 ILLUSTRATIONS OF ALL THE MOST POPULAR DIVERSIONS.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 4s. 6d.

Crown 8vo.

BARON MUNCHAUSEN;

IIIS

WONDERFUL TRAVELS,

SURPRISING ADVENTURES,

AND

HAIRBREADTH ESCAPES.

Illustrated with Woodcuts by G. CRUIKSHANK, and Twenty-two Full-page (curious) Engravings.

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

Price 3s. 6d.; Coloured Plates, 6s.

TEGG'S STANDARD DICTIONARIES.

- s. d.
- The Dictionary of Scientific Terms and Technological Expressions used in Philosophy, Art, Science, Literature, Professions, Trades, and Commerce. By W. M. Buchanan, Editor of "The Practical Mechanic and Engineer's Magazine," and lately Master of the Philosophical Department in the High School of Glasgow. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- DUNCAN'S (Rev. W. W.) new Hebrew and English and English and Hebrew Lexicon, in three parts, with a new Hebrew Grammar. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- DYMOCK'S (John, LL.D.) new Abridgment of Ainsworth's English-Latin and Latin-English Dictionary. 18mo., 5s.; roan
- LEMPRIERE'S (J.) Classical Dictionary, containing a copious account of all the Proper Names mentioned in Ancient Authors. A new edition, revised by William Park, M.A. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- MEADOW'S (F. C.) French and English Pronouncing Dictionary, on the basis of Nugent, in two parts—1st, French and English; 2nd, English and French; to which is prefixed Principles of French Pronunciation, and an abridged Grammar. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- New Spanish and English Dictionary, in two parts—1st, Spanish and English; 2nd, English and Spanish. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- New Italian and English Dictionary, in two parts—1st, Italian and English; 2nd, English and Italian; with a concise Grammar. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan
- WALKER and WEBSTER combined in a Dictionary of the English Language, in which the Definitions of Webster and the Pronunciation of Walker are united, and brought to the usage of the present time. Many new words are introduced, and numerous synonymous terms are carefully discriminated; with an Appendix, containing "Walker's Key to Pronunciation." New Edition, re-edited by John Longmuir, A.M., LL.D. Portrait. 8vo.
- WALKER'S (John) Pronouncing Dictionary. A New Edition, revised, carefully corrected, and considerably enlarged by the addition of many new words. 18mo., 2s. 6d.; roan
- Ditto, with Key to Pronunciation. 18mo., 3s. roan
- WRIGHT'S (M.) Greek and English Lexicon, in four parts—Greek-English, Difficult Inflections, English-Greek, and Proper Names, containing the interpretation of all the words which occur in Greek Classic Authors, the Septuagint and New Testament. 18mo., 4s. 6d. roan

LONDON: WILLIAM TEGG.

